It's cool, for a change

Cooler air pushed its way into Nebraska Tuesday behind a cold front, triggering thundershowers late Monday night and early Tuesday.

West Point received 1.64 inches of rain in about one-half hour, accompanied by golf-ball size hail. Strong winds in the Blair area caused power outages and tree damage.

Rainfall amounts in the northeast included Emerson .89 of an inch, Wisner .75, Pender .68 and Beemer .60. Omaha received .45 of a inch.

Space shuttle passes test

Edwards AFB, Calif. (UPI) — The space shuttle Enterprise Tuesday made a 63-minute manned captive flight, its second atop a 747 jet, in a test so successful NASA officials said they may go straight to a free flight.

A third captive flight, set for Friday, was cancelled, according to NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson.

He said the flight free of the mother ship was still set for around July 27, but it was not yet decided whether there woutd be another intermediate flight with the shuttle mounted to the jet.

Bill goes to bat for elderly

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, introduced a bill Tuesday that would allow Social Security recipients under age 72 to earn up to $3,600 a year before they start losing benefits.

The current limit is $3,000, above which $1 in Social Security benefits is deducted for each $2 earned.

Fire cleans sloth study

Grand Canyon, Ariz. (AP) — A year-long fire, fueled by dung from the long-extinct Shasta ground sloth, has burned itself out.

The fire, discovered in remote Rampart Cave last July 14, threatened to destroy the last known source of information on the Shasta sloth.

Scientists now can continue exploring the cave to determine what kinds of animals shared the habitat and what vegetation flourished at the time, he said. The Shasta sloth, as big as 300 pounds full-grown, lived in the caves starting about 40,000 years ago until about 11,000 years ago, Martin said.

Holiday prediction grim

Chicago (UPI) — Between 500 and 600 Americans will die in traffic accidents during the Fourth of July holiday weekend, the National Safety Council estimated Tuesday.

Another 23,000 to 28,000 persons will suffer disabling injuries in holiday wrecks during the hours between 6 p.m. Friday, July 1, and midnight Monday, July 4, the council said.

Last year's bicentennial Fourth of July celebration saw 523 highway deaths and 24,500 disabling injuries.

Bus triggers chain crash

Sao Paulo, Brazil (UPI) — A bus stopped suddenly on a highway in a fog with zero visibility during rush hour Tuesday, triggering a chain crash which piled up 140 vehicles over four miles of highway and killed at least 14 persons.

Highway police said the crash of cars, buses and trucks along both sides of Sao Paulo's main artery also injured at least another 110.

Ruling opens GM probe

Detroit (AP) — A federal judge ruled that a grand jury may investigate the possibility that General Motors Corp. tried to cheat the federal government out of millions of dollars in taxes.

But U.S. District Court Judge James P. Churchill also ordered federal prosecutors not to turn over any grand jury evidence to the Internal Revenue Service.

Monstly sunny

LINCOLN: Mostly sunny and warmer. High in the mid to upper 80s Wednesday with winds becoming southerly 10 to 20 m.p.h. Partly cloudy Wednesday night with a small chance for thundershowers. Not as cool, low around 60. Considerable cloudiness Thursday and a little cooler. Small chance of showers. High 80 to 85.

House for B1 bomber

Washington (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to provide full funds for the B1 bomber pending President Carter's decision this week on whether to go ahead with production of the controversial, multibillion dollar project.

By a vote of 243 to 178, the House rejected an amendment offered by Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., that would have stricken the $1.5 billion alloted for the purchase of five B1s.

That amount is included in the $110.6 billion military appropriations bill for the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1, and it remains in the bill as a result of the House action.

"I personally believe that President Carter will favor a continuation of the B1 program," said the Appropriations Committee Chairman, George Mahon, D-Tex. He said production of the plane is necessary for a "well-balanced defense" and a strong position in arms negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Carter is expected to announce his B1 decision at a news conference Thursday, following final review with Defense Secretary Harold Brown of the strategic advantages offered by various alternatives.

"They have had a number of discussions and they have narrowed the options," said a Defense Department spokesman.

Before putting over further consideration of the omnibus money bill until Wednesday, the House approved by voice vote an amendment by Rep. Bill Burlison, D-Mo., to reduce new funds for the CIA's contingency reserve fund from $35 to $20 million.

Noting that in the past the fund had been used for secret military operations in Laos and Angola, Burlison said the reduction was designed as "a safeguard against the CIA initiating our involvement in a major war without the authorization of Congress."

Brown has said B1 program alternatives under consideration have ranged from outright cancellation of the program to building B1 fleets of varying sizes. The maximum would be the Air Force request for building 244 of the planes, estimated to cost more than $100 million each.

Although Carter spoke in opposition to the B1 during his campaign, he is now believed to be leaning toward at least limited production. Possibilities mentioned range from 90 to 160 planes.

House debate on the bomber lasted for two days, but the outcome of the bomber funds was never seriously in doubt.

Critics attacked the B1 on grounds of cost and the expectation that the Soviets will develop a "look-down, shoot-down" air defense capability in the 1980s that could neutralize the bombers for low-level, supersonic flight beneath the coverage of Soviet radar.

"We're only buying at best two, three or four years of deterrence," Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., said of the sleek, white-painted bomber. "I hope we shoot down this white turkey."

Schools ask $45.5 million

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

The total budget is higher by more than 8%, but local individual property taxes are lower on the preliminary Lincoln public school budget approved by the Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday.

Board members approved a more than $45.5 million tentative budget for 1977-78, with about $31.8 million of that coming from local property taxpayers.

That compares to a $41.9 million budget for this year, with about $30.6 million supported through the local property tax.

The increase in local tax funds will be offset by an expected 6% increase in total property values for the school district. This means that the current mill levy to support the school district will go down by more than 1 mill to an anticipated 56.351 mills.

The board also plans to lower the budget for the educational service unit by almost 30% to $132,800, with $112,800 coming from the tax levy. This will lower the current 0.3-mill levy to 0.2 mills.

But all these figures are not set in concrete. The budget figures, to be published for a July 11 public hearing, can be altered by the board at its final budget meeting July 26.

And any change in the predicted increase in overall district property values will change the mill levy. County Assessor Fritz Meyer is predicting at least an 8% rise in this value, more than the schools' 6% figure used for mill levy calculations.

What this means to the taxpayer is a decrease in property taxes for schools. Last year a person owning a house valued at $40,000 on the county assessor's books, paid $809.76 in property tax for the combined Lincoln and Educational Service Unit 18.

Based on the board's projected mill decrease, this home owner will pay $791.14 next year. And if Meyer's valuation increase prediction is correct, the tax payment for schools could drop to $767.30 (54.607 mills for the public school district and 0.2 mills for the service unit).

But this decrease in property tax for school support is being offset by an increase in state aid to schools. The district is anticipating a $1.3 million increase in state aid money bringing next year's state aid total to $6.75 million.

If a threatened petition drive which could eliminate the additional state aid is successful, the school will have to dip into reserves or levy an addition 2.5 mills, according to administrators.

In addition to average 8.6% salary increases for employes and utility rate hikes, the 1977-78 budget also contains an expansion in the special education services as the school system takes over the education of children formerly served by the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation and moves into helping more learning disabled children.

Even the total $45.5 million budget doesn't tell the whole story. Not included are federal tax funds of between $1.5 million to $1.9 million.

Little girl sees big doggie

Little lady, big doggie made for some double takes by passersby at Minden's Pioneer Village. The famed Victrola pooch was part of a showcase display, but the young visitor was very much for real. She is Maggie Morris, 15-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steven R. Morris of New Orleans. Originally from Cozad, the family was taking in the Nebraska attraction while back home on vacation.

Fireworks keep firemen on go

Careless use of firecrackers is keeping firefighters busy as the fireworks season swings into high gear.

Firefighters Tuesday doused at least three fires believed to have been caused by fireworks.

Two trees caught fire in separate incidents after youths set off fireworks in their hollowed-out trunks, officials said. One of the tree fires, at 2548 S. 48th St., was close to the scene of a grass fire two hours earlier at 48th and Van Dorn, believed to have been started by fireworks.

Use of fireworks in the city will be illegal after midnight, July 4.

'Fishies' get day in court

Seattle (AP) — The judge called it the fishiest case he's heard in 31 years on the bench.

Five thousand tropical fish — neon tetras, black skirts and silver tips — were brought into King County Superior Court as evidence in a trial involving 95,814 missing aquarium fish.

"My experience was limited to guppies and goldfish my children had when they were little," Judge Eugene G. Cushing said Tuesday, midway through the trial. "I had no idea that tropical fish could be so big — or so little.

"This is the first time there have been any fish of any kind in my court," he said. "It's been great — I've learned so much about fish."

Dragon Fisheries of Hong Kong sued Aquatics, Inc., of White Center, Wash., because Aquatics refused to pay $4,032 for shipments it claimed were 96,000 fish short.

The courtroom on Monday was littered with styrene plastic cases holding from one to 1,000 fish, some "no bigger than the end of my finger," the judge said.

"I had them bring in the fish because part of the issue concerns a claim on how they were packed, and the plaintiff says some of the fish could have eaten each other. I wanted to see just how small some of these fish are," he said.

But Richard McDuff, manager of Aquatics, testified that in-flight cannibalism was unlikely.

McDuff said the fish were shipped in light-proof containers and said fish won't eat other fish in the dark.

Throughout the trial there have been repeated references to the "DOAs" — fish who died en route to the receiver.

"They managed to clear up one point in the case," said Cushing. "They agreed that a certain number of fish can be expected to arrive dead."

New boss of jail points to 'errors'

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

The bright lights, television cameras and hordes of reporters were gone Tuesday.

Tempers had cooled . . . emotions were sapped . . . and Pat Rackers took a hard professional look at the events which put Lincoln in national headlines.

Rackers, the city's first corrections coordinator, spoke in a positive tone as he recapped the "unintentional errors" which led to a seven-hour ordeal in the city jail Monday night.

Four inmates took two hostages at knifepoint and demanded a getaway car while holding police, members of the Special Weapons and Negotiations (SWAN) team and the news media at bay. In the wee hours Tuesday, they surrendered. The hostages were released, the prisoners went back to their cells.

But Rackers job had just begun. Tuesday was the first official day of corrections department control of the jail. Ironically, the mantle had been passed during a City Council meeting that coincided with the jail drama.

The council, meeting in the old Federal Building, where it had moved as the County-City Building was evacuated, approved the takeover of the corrections department, effective Tuesday.

Rackers, no newcomer to corrections work, said the incident wasn't all that ironic. "Changes in administration of corrections facilities often lead to this type of thing," he said. But, change of leadership or not, there were other contributing factors, he added.

"We have a jail which, in terms of ability to detain and confine prisoners, is excellent," he said. "But we have to look at the strategic errors which caused the incident."

Jailer Michael Wooten had a set of keys that would open the steel door to the jail kitchen and the locked steel knife drawer in the kitchen, Rackers said.

Also, the design of the jail is such that two electric gates were open at the same time, allowing prisoners to congregate in a certain area, he added.

The four would-be escapees had armed themselves with a spoon "fashioned into a lethal weapon," something which corrections officials are "always on the lookout for," he said.

But they also had a knife, "probably brought into the jail by a work-release prisoner, who might have been threatened into the action," he speculated.

The latter is cause for a "more strict shakedown of returning prisoners," he added.

Additionally, prisoners need to be classified "with the more dangerous types segregated from the rest of the jail population," he said.

Noting the overall lack of "professional training the jail staff has had," Rackers said he plans to meet with all personnel later this week to "lay some new ground rules for jail procedure," in hopes of averting a similar incident in the future.

Monday's ordeal was the first escape attempt in the jail which involved the taking of hostages. Inmates Robert Bessent, Marvin J. Gerheardt, Robert G. Parker and Donald Routhier took jailer Wooten and Deputy U.S. Marshal Jack Douglas, a former Lincoln policeman, into custody during their unsuccessful escape attempt.

Routhier, 22, of Niagara Falls, N.Y., was believed to be the ringleader. He was awaiting transfer to the Nebraska Penal Complex to serve a three- to five-year term for armed robbery in a February incident at the Congress Inn, 2001 West O St.

His partner in the Congress Inn robbery, Bessent, 23, of Las Vegas, Nev., was facing a similar sentence. The pair were arrested five days after the robbery in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Gerheardt, 32, formerly of Wilber, was bound over last week to district court on a burglary charge. Parker, 24, no address, was reportedly a federal prisoner in jail on grand larceny charges.

Rackers said the four are being held on 24-hour lockup pending the filing of charges. County Attorney Ron Lahners said he expects those charges to be filed sometime Wednesday in Lancaster County Court. Federal charges of assaulting a federal officer are expected to be filed in U.S. District Court in Lincoln sometime in the next two weeks, according to authorities.

City Council Chairman Dick Baker praised the action of police in handling Monday night's incident. In a letter to Police Chief George Hansen, Baker said:

"The ability to handle the situation without injury to the hostages and without giving concessions to the demands of the prisoners speaks to the high level of professionalism displayed by the department.

"Special commendation should be due to Assistant Chief Roger LaPage for the way he directed the situation and to the two negotiators, Officers Gary Engel and Ed Winters."

The incident wasn't without its lighter moments. A prisoner on work release, trying to get back to the jail before his curfew time, couldn't get into the building. He was told he'd have to wait by officers who, nonetheless, kept an eye on him.

Jail hazards checked

With a thwarted jailbreak under his belt, City Corrections Coordinator Pat Rackers has turned his attention to other hazards which could befall the Lincoln city jail.

Among them, a fire similar to the one Sunday that left 42 inmates and visitors to the Maury County Jail in Columbia, Tenn., dead. Fire investigators determined the deaths were caused by cyanide gas poisoning from smoldering padding in a juvenile cell, Rackers said.

Tuesday, samples of all the materials used in the local jail were sent to a testing lab to determine if they are fire retardant, and, more importantly, if they "smolder with toxic fumes," Rackers said.

Noting that the Tennessee deaths occurred in a period of four minutes, Rackers said few prisoners can be evacuated in that length of time.

"We'll make the necessary changes to insure a safe jail," he added. "We've got some problems that we've known about for a long time. Unfortunately, it often takes a tragedy to bring them to our attention."

Oil fees turned down in Alaska pipeline bid

Washington (UPI) — The Interstate Commerce Commission Tuesday unanimously rejected high transportation rates proposed by the owners of the Alaska pipeline, ordering the oil companies that own the pipeline to cut their fees by some 20%.

The commision said it turned down the proposed fees because the companies wanted to charge twice for interest they are paying on money borrowed to constuct most of the $9.7 billion pipeline.

ICC Chairman Daniel O'Neal predicted the companies will challenge the commission's ruling in court.

O'Neal said the ICC has ample power to force the companies to pump oil through the 800-mile pipeline if they try to refuse to do so under the lower rates, as some of the representatives hinted Monday they might.

The eight companies that own the line — Amerada Hess, Atlantic Richfield, British Petroleum, Exxon, Mobil, Phillips, Sohio and Union — had proposed rates ranging from $6.04 to $6.44 a barrel to take effect starting Thursday.

The commission rejected the proposals from all but Phillips, ordering them to submit new proposals ranging no higher than $4.68 to $5.10. It did not act on the Phillips' proposal because that company's rate is not scheduled to go into effect until July 20.

The nine members of the commission Monday heard oil company arguments in favor of the proposal and challenges from the Justice Department, the State of Alaska, the Artic Slope Regional Corp., representing Alaskan natives and the ICC staff, all of whom claimed the company proposals were illegal and excessive.

Commission members studied and debated their possible courses of action in closed session for more than five hours Tuesday before their unanimous vote.

O'Neal said a key factor in rejecting the company requests was that they would have provided an 8% return on the value of the pipeline while counting the huge amount of interest on borrowed money twice in arriving at that value.

He said the commission set as its maximum a 10% return on the pipeline's value with the interest counted only once.

In using that formula the ICC said the maximum fees it would approve are $4.85 for Hess, a $1.59 cut; $4.91 for Arco, a $1.13 cut; $4.68 for BP, a $1.67 cut; $5.10 for Exxon, a $1.17 cut; $4.84 for Mobil, a $1.47 cut; $4.70 for Sohio, a $1.46 cut, and $4.89 for Union, a $1.20 cut.

The reductions will mean little to consumers in the lower 38 states, who will pay about the world price for Alaskan oil under rules set by the Federal Energy Administration.

It will, however, add millions to the state treasury in Alaska and to money the Eskimos have for schools, roads and hospitals.

Alaskan officials have estimated every penny reduction in the transportation fees will mean $1 million a year for the state. That is because transportation fees are subtracted from the selling price before the state's 12.5% royalty on each barrel of oil is calculated.

Although the commission technically invited rather than ordered the companies to submit lower fees, its decision had the effect of an order.

O'Neal set no deadline for the submission of new rates because North Slope oil still is flowing down the pipeline toward the port of Valdez on Alaska's south coast, and it will be some weeks before the line is ready to go into operation.

Personalities

Chancellor status uncertain

NBC newscaster John Chancellor is reportedly being sought by CBS News to replace Eric Severeid, who will retire in November. However, Tuesday's New York Times said CBS had denied the report.

Nixon gets second chance

Richard Nixon, who once asked people to "sock it to me" on the television show "Laugh-In," has been asked to appear on the show's return special in September.

Producer George Schlatter said he also is negotiating with Cuban Premier Fidel Castro for a series of one-liners for the show.

Young raps Idi

United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young said Tuesday in Boston of Ugandan President Idi Amin — "You wouldn't be very far wrong if you said he was an African Hitler." Young spoke on WCVB-TV's "Good Day Show."

Composer is 75

Composer Richard Rodgers celebrated his 75th birthday Tuesday with his family and friends in New York, a spokeswoman said.

Todd's remains found

Producer Michael Todd's remains were believed recovered Tuesday in a Chicago suburban cemetery only a short distance from the grave where he had been buried, police said. The remains of the late husband of actress Elizabeth Taylor were stolen from his grave during the weekend.

Astronaut to run

Former astronaut John Swigert, 46, announced plans Tuesday to run as a Republican in 1978 for the seat of Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo. He said he would resign Aug. 31 as staff director of the House Committee on Science and Technology.

Going like hotcakes

Viscount Newport, who last year met inflation head-on by opening a posh London caviar restaurant, has sold a quarter of a ton of the costly fish eggs in the first 12 months of his Caviar Bar. "There are always people about with money for something special," says the 29-year-old entrepreneur. "The best time is in a big economic slump."

Queen saluted

Queen Elizabeth II, a monarch who doesn't care for loud noises, was saluted Tuesday by British sailors who boomed a muted salute across the waves in Spithead, England.

House gives up one raise for another

Washington (UPI) — The House voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to give up an estimated $3,600 a year cost of living pay raise in what some members said was a move to save their larger $12,900 salary boost that will come to a vote on Wednesday.

The House approved the Senate-passed bill 397 to 20 and sent it to the White House.

It would deny members of Congress, the federal judiciary and executive level federal officials, including Vice President Walter Mondale but not President Carter, an estimated 6.3% pay boost on Oct. 1.

The House Wednesday will face an effort to cut back the current $57,500 per year member's pay to $44,600, the level that prevailed before a 29% pay boost went into effect March 1.

The measure approved Tuesday affects the annual cost of living pay which Congress put itself under two years ago. The mass of rank and file federal employes had been receiving that annual increase since 1967 and will get the October raise despite passage of the bill.

"Some members feel that it would be politically obscene for Congress, in these times of economic stress, to get two pay raises in one year," said Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., manager of the bill. "To take the March increase and then this increase represents a kind of double'dip."

But, said Solarz, "Don't get confused. The vote today is on whether we want to take a pay raise. Tomorrow we will be voting on rolling back our pay."

"The timing represents a charade," said Rep. Charles Whalen, R-Ohio, who was barred under the procedure from offering an amendment that would say members of Congress voting themselves a pay raise could not get it until the next Congress.

"We're just putting up a smoke screen in this bill to cover tomorrow's vote. We aren't fooling anybody," said Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

"The fact this bill is here today is to kind of give us a little conscience vote so we will feel better tomorrow in voting to support the appropriations bill," carrying $9.8 million to cover the March pay boost through Sept. 30, 1978, said Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif.

Senate would cut funds for busing plans

Washington (UPI) — The Senate voted Tuesday to prohibit use of federal funds to require school districts to adopt desegregation plans such as "pairing" of schools involving busing.

The action came in a 51-42 vote rejecting a proposal by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., to delete anti-busing language from a $60.7 billion appropriation bill to run the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare during 1978.

Brooke said the language would make the federal government "a partner in segregation."

The language in question — which still faced further challenge by other amendments — had been proposed by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., and approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Eagleton said busing in big cities is a "foolish concept" which will cause white flight and in the long run lead to the isolation of minorities.

For two years in a row, Congress has forbidden HEW, by denying it funds for the purpose, to require school systems to bus children beyond their nearest school. The provision is not in effect because it is being tested in the courts, and it expires in September.

It also has been interpreted by HEW to require pairing of schools and similar methods of desegregation which may require busing. An example of pairing would match a black and a white elementary school with each other so that both races attended grades 1-3 in one and 4-6 in the other.

To close this loophole, Eagleton and Sen. Joseph Biden, R-Del., persuaded the Senate Appropriations Committee to include in the bill sent to the Senate floor a provision saying none of the money could be used by HEW to require pairing-type desegregation plans involving busing.

The House version of the bill contains a similar provision.

Brooke, urging the Senate to delete that language, said: "I believe that this society must be equal, and free, for all the people . . . if it means busing to end unlawful segregation, then I support it."

Eagleton displayed figures on a chart showing that New York City's schools are 67% minority, Chicago 70.4%, Detroit 81%, Kansas City 68% and the District of Columbia 96%.

He said busing will not desegregate those school systems but, through white flight, will raise the percentages.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., called Eagleton's proposal "a rearguard action against human decency." He noted President Carter is urging other countries to honor human rights and asked: "Are we practicing what we preach?"

In other action on the bill the Senate:

— Rejected 63-31 a proposal of Sen. S. I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., banning the federal government from forcing contractors or institutions receiving federal aid to give special consideration to minorities in hiring and admissions. A similar amendment was adopted by the House.

— Rejected a proposal by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., to roll all increases in individual programs contained in the bill back to levels proposed by Carter, a total cut of $1.8 billion.

Truman Library to expand

Independence, Mo. (AP) — A $2.6 million federal appropriation is expected this year for a major addition to the Truman Library and Museum, according to the General Services Administration.

Barring any problems, the 24,000-square-foot addition could be completed in two years.

Dr. Benedict K. Zobrist, library director, said the planned addition is an L-shaped wing that would enclose the northeast side of the courtyard where the former President is buried.

The wing would provide more display space, an education facility and a museum work area. The addition would provide a total of about 20% more viewing area, Zobrist said.

He said there are presently about 3,000 items displayed out of 13,000 items in the museum collection and the new display area would allow public viewing of more items.

The new wing would be the second federally funded addition to the library since it was built in 1957 through private donations.

Nixon points to tape transcripts in 1974 after he said he would turn them over to House investigators.

Nixon bid falters to gain control of tapes

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court on Tuesday rebuffed Richard Nixon's attempt to gain control of the 880 tape recordings and 42 million pages of documents left behind when he was forced from the presidency.

The justices, voting 7 to 2, ruled that Congress acted constitutionally in 1974 when it passed a law allowing the government to decide which materials may be controlled by Nixon and which may be made public.

The decision is the first step toward allowing the public access to most of the materials, a process that could take years and is sure to spark more lawsuits by the former president who resigned Aug. 9, 1974, in the wake of the Watergate scandals.

Included in the 5,000 hours of tape recordings are the 30 reels of tape played during the Watergate cover-up trial of Nixon's closest aides.

Still pending before the nation's highest court, in a case to be argued next fall or winter, is a lawsuit aimed at making copies of those 30 tapes available for reproduction into cassettes and records.

There was no immediate comment from Nixon. An aide at Nixon's home in San Clemente, Calif., and a lawyer here said they would not comment before reading the court's full decision.

The court rejected five specific claims by Nixon's attorneys that the 1974 law, called the Presidential Materials and Recordings Preservation Act, was unconstitutional.

The court said the act did not violate the separation of powers between the legislative and executive branches of government, did not violate Nixon's right to privacy or his presidential privilege of confidentiality, and did not significantly interfere with his rights of association.

The justices also ruled that the law was not an illegal "bill of attainder" — a law aimed at punishing an individual whose guilt has not been established in the courts.

The law, and the court's decision, involved only the tapes and papers from Nixon's 5½ years in office. But one of the court's dissenters, Justice William H. Rehnquist, said the Nixon case could affect all future presidents.

His contention was directly rebutted by Justice John Paul Stevens.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. wrote the majority opinion, joined by Stevens and Justices Potter Stewart and Thurgood Marshall.

Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and Bryon R. White joined in most of Brennan's findings.

Rehnquist and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger dissented, saying Nixon, like every president before him, should be allowed to decide which portions of the presidential materials he generated to give to the government for public consumption.

During Nixon's three-year battle to control the materials, the tapes and documents have been stored at the White House and the National Records Center in Suitland, Md.

Nixon and other officials of the executive branch have been allowed access to them, but the General Services Administration was made custodian of all materials by the 1974 act.

The law requires the GSA to recommend to Congress regulations allowing public access to the documents. Under those regulations, not yet approved, government archivists are to sift through the huge volumes of materials and decide which are private — to be returned to Nixon — and which are of "general historic value" and should be made public.

Congress passed the law shortly after Nixon's departure because it considered him an "unreliable custodian" of the tapes and papers, and considered it likely that Nixon might destroy some material that could benefit the investigations of the Watergate special prosecutor.

Former Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, contacted at his law office in Houston, expressed satisfaction with the ruling. He said he believes the materials are government property, but considers it appropriate that Nixon should have access to them in writing his memoirs.

The law, signed by then-President Gerald R. Ford on Dec. 19, 1974, nullified an agreement Nixon had reached with the General Services administrator giving Nixon control of the tapes and papers and arranging for their shipment to San Clemente.

"We, of course, are not blind to (Nixon's) plea that we recognize the social and political realities of 1974. It was a period of political turbulence unprecendented in our history," Brennan's opinion said.

"Unfortunately, however, today's decision countenances the power of any future Congress to seize the official papers of an out-going president as he leaves the inaugural stand. In so doing, it poses a real threat to the ability of future presidents to receive candid advice and to give candid instructions," he said.

Californians' water-saving efforts are going too far

San Francisco (AP) — Drought-conscious Northern Californians have done such a good job of conserving water that their lawns are dying, their health may be suffering and one water company is losing money.

Despite the continuing rain shortage, officials in several communities are warning residents they may have gone too far and should relax their conservation efforts.

"The people cut back almost 57 per cent. We only required a 25 per cent decrease," said Matt Whitfield, manager of the Alameda County Water District across the bay from San Francisco. "The people have been so good at saving water it was getting worrisome."

The Alameda district ended mandatory rationing this week. Whitfield said the immediate reaction in the 61,000 households was disbelief.

The much larger San Francisco Water District — which had asked its 1.7 million customers to cut water use by 25 per cent — is saying now that unless consumption increases, rates will have to rise to make up for lost revenue.

In a statement last week, the San Francisco district told customers not to let their lawns die for lack of water. Consumption cut by the requested 25 per cent should leave enough water to keep their grass alive, the district said.

But, Eugene Kelleher, the district's assistant general manager, said Tuesday that "many of the people are cutting back by as much as 50 per cent, completely eliminating all outside water and cutting way back inside, too.

"That could create some health problems. Now we're telling them they can use a little more water — take some extra showers if you were only taking one a week, water your lawn — as long as they stay inside their allotment."

But north of San Francisco, in parched Marin County, water officials welcomed their customers' zealousness in curtailing water use by the requested 57 per cent. "Our customers are still exceeding our goal, and that's fine with us," said Jules Tham, administrative assistant of the Marin Municipal Water District.

Rainfall for the 1976-1977 rainy season is about half of normal for the second year in a row over most of Northern and central California. Besides mandatory rationing in many urban areas, water allotments from reservoirs have been cut drastically for farmers.

Novi Saie, Yugoslavia (AP) — General Motors Corp. and Livnica Zeleza I Tempera of Kikinda, Yugoslavia, have signed an agreement on a joint venture to build an auto parts production plant.

The plant, which will employ about 1,000 workers when it opens in 1981, calls for a $60 million investment.

Scherer takes proper action on liquor license matters

City Councilman Leo Scherer again has done the right thing in refusing to vote on three liquor license applications which was before the council Monday night. Scherer, who owns and operates Arnold's Tavern, declared a conflict of interest. He has done the same on prior occasions. And he said during the recent campaign he would declare such a conflict.

What else could he do?

Scherer rightly believes that new liquor licenses in the city could affect his licensed business. We share that belief. Lincoln's ceiling on liquor licenses, although rather leaky, still gives existing licenses artificially high values. It can be argued that license values increase or are diminished by any fluctuation in the number of licenses operating in the city. An existing license holder has a direct interest in that number. The competition-for-business factor is likewise obvious.

Scherer goes beyond claims of integrity and demonstrates his by declaring a conflict and refusing to vote on matters which could affect his private business.

In direct contrast to Scherer's action, Councilman Joe Hampton, also elected this spring, went ahead and voted denial on the three licenses in question Monday night. Hampton holds the liquor license for East Hills Supper Club.

Hampton says his private attorneys have told him there are times he can vote on liquor license applications and times when he shouldn't, because of possible conflicts. Monday night, obviously, was one of the times Hampton felt he could vote.

It should be emphasized that Scherer also said he declared a conflict on the advice of City Attorney Charles Humble. Humble said Hampton did not ask for advice on the liquor applications on Monday's agenda.

But it can be concluded that Humble's advice to Hampton, had he been asked, would have been the same as the advice to Scherer: Declare a conflict and don't vote.

"I was elected on the basis I was a person of integrity," Hampton commented Monday.

Hampton could enhance his good reputation by not only avoiding what he perceives to be direct conflicts of interest but also the appearances of conflict, which can do much harm to the credibility of government.

Scherer took the proper course with regard to liquor licensing matters and in doing so has demonstrated his integrity.

Police were well-prepared

Organization, leadership, training and a fair amount of luck were on the side of authorities Monday night as a six-hour prisoner insurrection ended peacefully.

The potential for tragedy was there when four inmates grabbed a jailer and deputy federal marshal and demanded to be released. Somebody could have been seriously hurt, or worse. But all concerned kept their heads about them and, using time as their best ally, authorities convinced the inmates to release their hostages unharmed and give themselves up. Police negotiators were successful in convincing the inmates of the hopelessness of their position and what a failure to give up could mean.

To the outsider, it seems that the Lincoln Police Department was well-prepared for such an incident. One could guess that one reason hostages, prisoners and others were not harmed in the ordeal — except for scratches suffered by the two hostages — was that the police did not overreact to the situation; the inmates were not pressured into losing their heads.

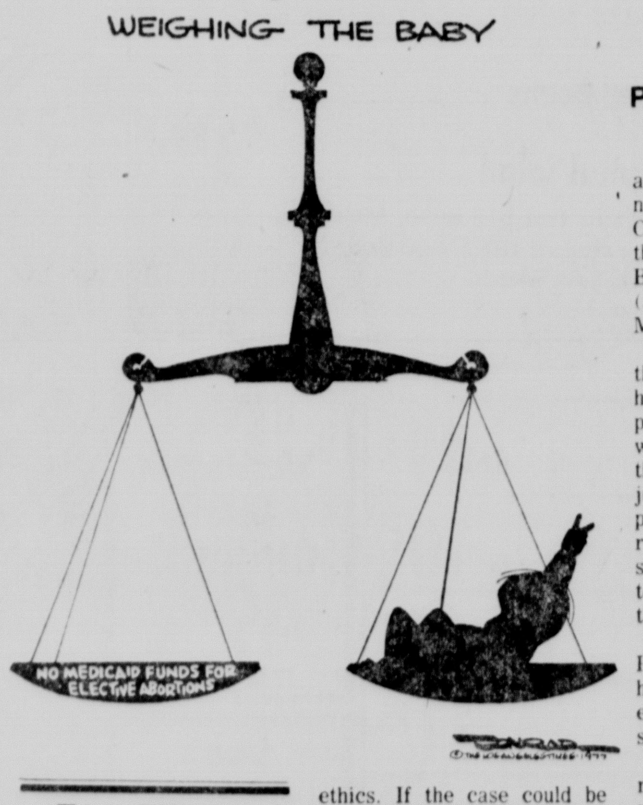
The department's response seemed well-coordinated, too, by Assistant Police Chief Roger LaPage, conferring periodically during the incident with Chief George Hansen, who was out of the city Monday night. Negotiations with the prisoners were handled by personnel trained in that specialty. The evacuation and sealing off of the County-City Building for the protection of those who had been working inside and for bystanders outside also seemed to come off without a hitch.

All in all, the police department seemed well prepared for the emergency.

But luck had a part, too. One can easily imagine what might have happened, no matter how well-prepared the police are.

All's well, however, that ends well.

Kitchen-table justice



WEIGHING THE BABY
NO MEDICAID FUNDS FOR ELECTIVE ABORTIONS
CONRAD

Tom Wicker

New York — If you're a pregnant woman with enough money to pay for an abortion in a hospital, you've got an ironclad constitutional right to have that abortion. If you're a pregnant woman without enough money to pay for an abortion in a hospital, you've got an ironclad constitutional right either to beg or borrow the money, or to have yourself butchered on a kitchen table off some back alley.

So ruled the Supreme Court of the United States last week, in an opinion consonant with the views of the Carter administration and to which Congress seems about to give further legislative force. Thus, with the support of all three branches of government, triumph inequity, poverty, misery, the welfare culture and the billions of tax dollars it annually consumes.

The first step down this strange course was taken by Congress last year when it adopted a ban on the use of Medicaid funds for elective abortions, those not undertaken for therapeutic reasons.

A federal court, acting on what it and everyone else thought was the Supreme Court's guarantee of the right to an abortion in a 1973 decision, set aside enforcement of this ban until its constitutionality could be tested.

Enter the Carter administration, in the person of Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano. He said he would not support the use of federal funds for abortions, and President Carter backed him up.

Possibly owing to that encouragement, this year the House of Representatives went even further than Congress had last year; it passed a ban on the use of Medicaid funds for any kind of abortion, even to save the life of a mother.

At that point last week, the Supreme Court acted on cases from Connecticut and Pennsylvania, ruling that (a) the constitutional guarantee of the equal protection of the laws was not violated by a state decision to use Medicaid funds for childbirth but not for abortions; and (b) it was not unreasonable for a state to pursue its "valid and important interest in encouraging childbirth" by refusing to pay for abortions.

The next day, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved the House ban on Medicaid abortions but amended it to permit therapeutic abortions required by threats to the physical well-being of the mother, child after birth or both.

This provision, which apparently is about all that can be hoped for in the Senate, coincides with the Supreme Court ruling in that it guarantees affluent or middle-class-women the right to abortions on demand, while preventing the use of government funds to pay for elective abortions for women who cannot otherwise pay for them. The latter must either have their babies, at even greater cost to the taxpayers, or seek out some fly-by-night amateur for a kitchen-table abortion.

Aside from a person's moral and ethical views on the larger question of abortion, the situation wrought by Court and Congress is insupportable. It plainly discriminates against a class, since a right guaranteed to the rich is denied in practice to the poor.

The real questions here are not of morality or religion or ethics. If the case could be made against legal abortion for anyone, that would be at least equitable among women, although a long step backward for them all. But to make the poor alone ineligible for abortions defies justice, common sense, rational policy and the federal budget.

As Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts put it, the ban on Medicaid funds for abortions is "nothing but a means test saying who's allowed to have an abortion." And as Mr. Justice Harry Blackmun, in dissent, chided his colleagues: "There is another world 'out there,' the existence of which the Court, I suspect, either chooses to ignore or fears to recognize. And so the cancer of poverty will continue to grow."

The figures that support him are as depressing as they are impressive. Medicaid funds have paid for abortions for as many as 300,000 women a year at a total cost of $50 million. Sixty per cent of the nation's 1.1 million abortions a year are performed in clinics for the poor — and only 29% in those private hospitals in which the Supreme Court absolutely guarantees the right of a woman who can afford it to an abortion on demand.

Washington — Evidence revealed last week indicates the Defense Department intends to go ahead with the development of its highly controversial neutron weapons program, no matter what the rest of the world thinks about it.

What appears now to be in the offing are so-called neutron "killer" shells which can be fired from conventional eight-inch and 155 mm. artillery guns.

Unlike conventional shells, these kill victims not by explosion or fire, but rather by radiation alone. As an Army spokesman pointed out, buildings and other objects are left standing; only the people are done in.

It is the Army's view that, besides the obvious material benefits of leaving real estate untouched, the neutron concept is more humane, since limbs and such are not torn off. And it may be so, from the point of view of those who must come along and clean up the mess. But any knowledgeable scientist will tell you that death by radiation is a horrible and grotesquely painful way to go.

Moreover, the real threat posed by these new weapons is that they are more likely to be used than conventional nuclear weapons, simply because they don't wreak visible havoc.

They conjure up no visions of flattened, burned-out cities. There are no specters of Hiroshima-like victims haunting civilization with their scars years after the explosion. There won't even be any pictures of contorted, bullet-riddled bodies tossed into mass graves.

No, with neutron weapons, people just get sick, violently sick and die. More like a plague than a war.

That is not what war ought to be about. War ought to be hell. It ought to crash cities, spoil lands, and devastate not only man but everything around him. In fact, the more damage war does the better, because the more damage it does the less likely men will be to wage it. Men value life, yes; but men at war value property more. Property, after all, is what wars are fought over; and the threat of having one's own national property destroyed is a great deterrent to fighting.

Neutron weapons, if they are allowed, will make war easier by removing that deterrent.

It's an all-round bad idea. We need it like the plague.

Karamanlis: democracy's strong

By Yorick Blumenfeld
ERR Staff Writer

Athens — Along the coffee houses on Kolonaki Square, the favorite subject of speculation is the future of Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis. Some maintain that the Greek leader, who was 70 in February, cancelled his recent trip through Western Europe because of ill health. Others suggest he is carefully preparing to step down as prime minister. But the rumors themselves confirm the key function of Karamanlis in Greek political life.

Within the past three years Karamanlis has restructured this country's political fabric. When Karamanlis took over in July, 1974, after the collapse of the military dictatorship, he quickly reintroduced democracy and stability. "I gave Greece a new government, settled the question of the monarchy, and got a new constitution approved," he said recently.

The political left, to be sure, attacks Karamanlis as a dictator. The right regards him as pro-Socialist. Karamanlis, however, skillfully has managed to balance the political passions of both sides far better than any other Mediterranean leader.

The extreme rightists no longer have direct lines to the army, the bureaucracy, or the police. Gen. Dionysios Arbouzis, the commander-in-chief, has said, referring to the 1967 military takeover: "The experience gained by the officers was so bitter that at least for a generation I can see no (military coups) recurring." However, a public-opinion poll published in Eleftherotypia, a leftist daily, suggested that a new election would drastically reduce the popularity of Karamanlis' New Democracy Party (Nea Dimokratia). Parliamentary elections are scheduled in the fall of 1978.

There are many here in Athens who think Karamanlis has been too lenient in bringing the criminal elements of the former dictatorship to trial. Amnesty International has criticized the government for not undertaking "a thorough, centrally co-ordinated investigation of the (military) junta's system of torture."

Andreas Papandreou, the stormy Socialist leader, says the Karamanlis government is a continuation of the junta by other means. Papandreou maintains that attacks by the extreme right against left-wing book shops and leftist party offices are an indication that the rightists feel themselves immune from prosecution. Karamanlis, however, asserts that mass trials would have created very serious problems in the future.

His most difficult challenge remains the Cypriot question. As a Greek, he says that the obstacle to a political settlement on Cyprus is due to the "lack of moderation and reason on the part of Turkey." The Greeks want Washington to apply far more pressure on the Turks to pull back militarily on the divided island.

Although anti-Americanism is less evident here than it has been in recent years, U.S. attempts to deal evenhandedly with both Greece and Turkey are not looked upon kindly. Athenians feel that Washington owes Greece preferential treatment.

Malone area understandably concerned

Today's Mail

Part of the dream

Lincoln, Neb.

Some of us in the Malone area feel we were not properly notified by the mayor and the City Council on the subject of the Community Development Block Grant Program (application made to HUD May 17, 1977).

What concerns the people of this area is — what is going to happen to them? There are people in this area who do not wish to sell their homes. If they do sell, will they receive just compensation for their property? It is enough to relocate without financial strain. Those who do not wish to sell should not be forced into this position.

The Pilgrims founded Plymouth colony in 1620 and it has been the American dream ever since to own a home and a spot of land.

Are other areas in this city receiving loans or grants to repair their homes? This area wishes to be treated fairly, and not be discriminated against.

Payments to aliens

Lincoln, Neb.

Much is said about the illegal alien in the United States taking jobs from our citizens. I feel most of the jobs this group does are the menial jobs the unemployed wouldn't do, anyway — field work, orchards and vineyards.

The sponsored aliens who are brought into the United States and go directly to the welfare department are the ones for the taxpayers to be concerned about. "60 Minutes" one Sunday night interviewed one sponsor in Yonkers, New York. He collects $300 a month rent from the New York Welfare Department for each family he has sponsored. He has purchased a large complex of apartment buildings already. The more families he brings over, the more buildings he can purchase, and soon these aliens will become citizens — sponsoring more families to leech off the welfare system. There is nothing illegal about it, he says.

The New York welfare cannot collect from the sponsor because the welfare does not demand repayment of funds.

The work permit alien comes to the United States at about age 59 — works two jobs in industry and whatever to get his 21 quarters paid into the Social Security system at the highest wages he can. He then returns to his homeland at age 65 and collects American Social Security every month, living like a king on the taxpayers' money. We Americans have been working and paying into Social Security funds every pay-day since 1936.

Next we have the refugees who wouldn't fight a war in their own country. Their main interest was to exploit the lonely American soldier through prostitution or dope. Perhaps they become the rich ones. The refugees in the Des Moines area and probably elsewhere found a way to divide their money among their children or place it in savings or trust funds so they were able to qualify for welfare. The working class refugees are hired by industry because they supposedly do a day's work for a day's pay.

The head of the immigration department has no idea how many sponsored aliens there are in the U.S. The New York welfare department has no idea how many of these are on welfare. There has not been an alien deported for being on welfare since 1948, Harry Truman days.

It is time to clean out the immigration department, overhaul the welfare system and stop Social Security checks from going to aliens overseas. Let's be concerned about the legal aliens who rip off the taxpayers.

MARIE DENNIS

Worse and worse

Lincoln, Neb.

Things don't change for the better any more, but, rather, they just seem to get worse. We have to decide on whether to commit ourselves for the next 20 years on a $29 billion airplane that is a monument to civilization's insanity, business feels abused because people object to its abuses, Congress has relied on handouts from special interests so long that it can't distinguish right from wrong, the world now looks upon the United States as the second most corrupt nation, the last great individualist, the farmer, now demands dole just as business and the poor people, and more and more we are looking like a banana republic.

What's the answer? How about stopping the buying and selling of our elections to the highest bidder? Stop lobbying in the sense that they are permitted to buy gifts, treat, hobnob, entertain, be overly numerous and present, be secretive, finance, intimidate, etc.

Russia can readily observe how our emotions and bias run so that they can do or not do things that will affect the outcome of our elections. Batistites have become involved in governmental crimes, Korea — the land noted for corruption — has bribed U.S. congressmen ostensibly, Arab oil influence has overnight changed our relationship with Israel and her neighbors, Iran hired a senator's wife to advance their persuasions, and major nations of the world hire prestigous American lawyers to advance their interest at gigantic fees. It is not impossible that Cuba has assassinated our President, and is perhaps the most logical speculation. Good, clean, open, independent representation financially beholden to none will hopefully strengthen every unit of our society while exerting imagination and courage to solve our escalating problems.

CRYSTAL

This is democracy?

Lincoln, Neb.

The citizens of Lincoln have decisively turned down urban renewal at the polls in recent years.

Now, in 1977, unknown to citizens and voters, they have sneaked in through the back door the dead cat with a new name: Urban Development.

—The city will acquire in whole or in part property to be cleared, demolished, removed and rehabilitated.

—The city will purchase land and turn it over to a developer for construction of multiple housing.

—The city has designated multiple housing as land use for the Malone aera.

—The area south of R St. to O St. and west of 27th to the designated flood plain is scheduled for the construction of apartments with 6-14 dwelling units per acre.

—The area north of R St. to the Missouri Pacific tracks and west of 27th to the flood plain will have a recommended density range of 15-25 dwelling units per acre. These will be based on assemblage of redevelopment areas and based on townhouse or garden apartment units.

New development plans call for the development of the area at the expense of the present residents and homeowners who occupy their own property.

ANTHONY ESQUIVEL

Save the park

Lincoln, Neb.

I venture to say that the unspoiled beauty of Wilderness Park will be worth more in ten to twenty years than a $225,000 bridge bisecting this bridge across Salt Creek. Old Cheney Road should be discontinued west of 14th St. The idea of making it a four-lane highway to be commercialized like Cornhusker Highway is absurd.

Let Old Cheney Road begin at Old Cheney, wherever that is, and end at 14th. Then Wilderness Park will benefit.

LLOYD HENDRICKS

Boughn position

Norfolk, Neb.

I have been asked by many of my constituents to clarify my stated position of opposition to the abandonment of the 172 miles of railroad track between Norfolk and Winner.

The primary consideration constituting the foundation of my approach to this matter is the energy crisis as predicted by many highly respected individuals in our society.

The energy situation at this time is in a most flexible posture. We have been warned by the President of the United States that energy-wise we face a national disaster.

With relation to energy, the eventualities regarding transportation in the next three decades are fraught with dire potentialities. In the coming years, will we have any form of auto transportation that will conform to today's realities in a passenger sense? Will the ensuing decades reveal an astounding rupture of our over-the-road truck transportation system as it is taken for granted today?

Keeping these questions in mind, we also ask ourselves: Is it wise to abandon any railroad track mileage at this time in light of energy predictions? Can we afford to dismantle the tracks of the C&NW between Norfolk and Winner, thereby removing what in the future could prove to be the principal transportation means for some 22 villages and towns between those terminal points?

In my opinion, such a step must not be forthcoming. This is certainly not the time to be eliminating any means of proven transportation. This abandonment must not be permitted. Our uncertain transportation future mandates such a decision.

The extra mile

Lincoln, Neb.

A few weeks ago I accepted a job offer as director of Parks and Recreation in Yakima, Washington. Since that time, many kind words have come my way concerning the job I did as superintendent of parks for Lincoln. I would like to thank all the citizens of this great and beautiful community for their efforts in keeping the parks and recreation programs second to none.

The important part to understand is that the parks have been upgraded over the years, due in small part to my position. The real heroes in park work are the many supervisors and workers who get the job done. They have enthusiasm and pride to go that extra mile and do an assignment to perfection.

My thanks again for the privilege of serving the citizens of Lincoln.

Carter plan leaves Israel stunned

United Press International

Israel was stunned Tuesday but Arab nations applauded President Carter's proposal that Israel withdraw from all territories seized during the 1967 Mideast War.

"This was not expected and we are astonished," sand a high-ranking Israeli source of Carter's latest peace initiative.

However, Egypt called the change in U.S. policy "pro-Arab" and Jordan hailed it as "a positive new step."

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III outlined the proposals Monday and said they were based on U.N. resolutions passed after the 1967 Arab-Israeli War and the 1973 Yom Kippur War.

He said the Carter administration, which is pressing for a Middle East peace conference this year, interprets the resolutions to mean that Israel should withdraw "on all fronts of the Middle East — that is Sinai, Golan, West Bank and Gaza.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan rejected what he said was an implication of Israeli intransigence in the new peace initiative.

In a statement, Dayan said: "There is no foundation to the assumption implied in the (U.S.) statement that Israel excludes any territory from the framework of future negotiations with the Arab states."

Other Israeli officials said the U.S. proposals were likely to encourage extreme Arab demands.

The State Department's action was given front-page treatment in Egyptian newspapers. A headline in the newspaper Al Akhbar said "an American warning to Israel."

The Middle East News Agency said the American position was "very strong and should be considered as an emphatic message to Israeli Premier Menahem Begin."

The agency said the proposals were "pro-Arab" since they did not mention "the Israeli demand for establishing diplomatic and trade relations with Arab states" as part of an overall settlement.

Arab and Israeli officials agreed that the most controversial aspect of Carter's plan concerned the volatile west bank of Jordan.

Israel has an emotional and historical claim to the territory going back to biblical times. However, the Carter administration has suggested that the territory might serve as a Palestinian homeland linked to Jordan.

Israeli officials also said the timing of the new proposals was unfortunate, coming within a month of Begin's scheduled trip to Washington.

They had hoped for an end to the exchange of public statements and rebuttals prior to Begin's scheduled meeting with Carter July 19.

Cannons fuel classical gas

Escondido, Calif. (UPI) — Charles Marsh is getting his cannons ready to play with Andre Kostelanetz in San Diego in August.

That's right, cannons.

Marsh embarked on his symphonic career in 1966, after he had been collecting cannons for six years. That year Zubin Methta of the Los Angeles philharmonic asked Marsh if he could fire off his cannons in time to Tchaikovsky's "The 1812 Overture."

That was a 17-shot participation.

Since then, Marsh has expanded his repertoire and does as many as 188 cannon shots in accompaniment to Beethoven's "Wellington's Victory."

Audiences need not fear, however, because the cannons don't fire projectiles.

Relying on his experience as an electronics engineer, Marsh devised a remote console to set off the cannons' powder charges.

In the early days, when Marsh relied on manpower to fire the individual cannons, "the timing was never very good," he said. The cannon firers usually couldn't read music, "so it never worked out too well."

China unwilling to broaden exchanges

(c) New York Times

Hong Kong — Peking has rebuffed an effort by American academic organizations to expand the scope of scholarly and scientific exchanges with China, saying that this must await full normalizations of relations between the United States and China, the president of American Council of Learned Societies disclosed Tuesday.

Characterizing the only recent trips by Americans to China as "scholarly tourism," he also reported growing uneasiness over visits by Chinese to such institutions as the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Bell Telephone Laboratories that exceed the scholarly catagory and are not being reciprocated by the Chinese.

Dr. Robert Lumiansky, president of the New York-based council, said senior Chinese officials have repeatedly made clear Peking's position during a just completed visit to China by leaders of the Committee on Scholarly Communication with the Peoples Republic of China, a national group that coordinates academic exchanges with China.

Among the Chinese officials who met with the group was Chin Teng-kuei, a vice-premier and the fifth ranking member of the Communist Party hierarchy who, Lumiansky said, had been "tough" and "blunt" on the need for the United States to break its security treaty with Taiwan and pull out the remaining U.S. military forces on the island before scholarly exchanges increase.

Peking's refusal of the proposed expansion is consistent with earlier Chinese statements on relations with the United States. But in the past few weeks some analysts believe Chinese officials have begun using a somewhat harsher tone in pronouncements involving Washington, including strongly-worded references over the past few days about U.S. policy in Africa and South Korea.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is scheduled to make a trip to Peking in late August, the first by a ranking member of the Carter administration.

According to Lumiansky, the group from the committee had gone to Peking in hopes of persuading the Chinese to broaden the current program of exchanges, which have been limited to relatively brief tours for American and Chinese delegations. The group proposed that the Chinese allow longer research trips, student exchanges, and the creation of language exchanges for both teachers and students. Similar programs exist between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Lumiansky reported that there has been growing "uneasiness" among U.S. universities and individual scholars and scientists over the "seemingly increasingly superficial trips" which are all that the Chinese currently allow.

He said some institutions are also unhappy that they had been asked to receive numerous Chinese delegations while being turned down in their requests to send groups to China. The Bell Laboratories have hosted eight Chinese delegations, he said, and MIT six groups.

Another member of the group that accompanied Lumiansky added that there was some concern that the Chinese want to send a number of delegations to study advanced U.S. technology, often with commercial applications, which do not really fall into the scholarly category.

He noted that the delegations the Chinese have sent have been almost all scientific and technical groups, with few delegations from the arts, literature, history or the social sciences.

Lumiansky said that there had also been a problem with achieving parity in the number of delegations from the two sides, since the Chinese have sent 25 groups to the U.S. and have permitted only 19 from America. Last year the committee gave Peking a warning that it was prepared to call off the exchanges entirely unless parity was achieved, Lumiansky said. Next year each side will dispatch six groups.

Lumiansky noted that since other countries which have normal relations with Peking have also not been permitted to send scholars to do research in China, he was "pessimistic" about the future of the academic exchanges with China even if Washington does establish full relations with Peking.

Too loud for Amy

Noise from a 21-gun salute got to Amy Carter Tuesday as she watched her dad, President Carter, greet Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez on the White House lawn.

Reporter just sad over Soviet tactics

New York (UPI) — Robert Toth, the American reporter interrogated for two days by the Soviet KGB, said Tuesday the most chilling aspect of his arrest was learning he and his family had been watched since their arrival in Russia in 1974.

Although he offered the KGB only his entry date into the country, Toth said one of the statements written after his interrogation included information on a visit made to relatives in the Soviet Union soon after their arrival.

"The most chilling part . . . was that they had apparently been watching me for a period of time," Toth said at a news conference sponsored by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry.

Toth, the Moscow correspondent for the Los Angeles Times, was picked up June 11 for receiving allegedly "secret" material in a paper on parapsychology, which he described as "a bit of a joke in itself."

The real reason, he said, was his friendship with Anatoly Schcharansky, one of the most celebrated Jewish "Refusedniks" who are trying to leave the Soviet Union.

"They were very made at me because I was very close to Schcharansky and they wanted to shut off the flow of information about Jewish dissidents in the Soviet Union," Toth said.

Despite a hectic ride at gunpoint through the streets of Moscow to Lefortovo, famed for its KGB interrogations, Toth said he remained for the most part unafraid.

"They're so unscrupulous, they used to make up phony pictures and splice tapes and it's all so silly nobody's going to believe it anyway," he said. "I figured at the worst I'd get a year or two in jail."

Toth said the first day he was interrogated was hot and muggy and the windows in the interrogation room were closed.

"It was uncomfortable to say the least. They kept calling me a liar," he said recalling the incident.

The interrogation, according to Toth, involved mostly questions about his meetings with Schcharansky. But because the two always met openly — Toth even drove his very noticeable Volvo to their meetings — they had nothing to hide, he said.

What the Russians hadn't counted on, he said, was the strong backlash over his arrest from the American government and public. He credited both with getting him out of the Soviet Union.

"I'm not so angry at the Russians, as sad they're acting so stupidly," said Toth. "They just don't appreciate the depth of sentiment in the U.S. Jewish community and the pressure on Congress."

He described the Soviet activist Schcharansky as a "warm, assertive" man capable of playing five games of chess at one time — blindfolded.

"All this nonsense about espionage and treason against him is a bunch of baloney," said Toth. "His only purpose has been to get out of the Soviet Union."

'Man from Atlantis' swims off with top TV ratings

New York (AP) — NBC's Monday night movie, "Man from Atlantis," was the top-rated prime-time television show last week, according to A.C. Nielsen figures made available Tuesday.

An ABC comedy special telecast before the Monday night baseball game was the least-watched of 64 rated shows.

Nielsen said national averages for the week ending June 26 put ABC back in first place with a 14.8 rating, which represents an estimated 10.4 million households.

In order, the top 10 shows were:

"Atlantis," 25.1 rating, or 17.9 million households; "Charlie's Angels," ABC, 24.2, or 17.2 million; "Laverne & Shirley," ABC, 21.4 or 15.2 million; "M.A.S.H.," CBS, 20.7 or 14.7 million; "Happy Days," ABC, "How to Break up a Happy Divorce," NBC's Sunday movie, and "One Day at a Time," CBS, each 20.4, or 14.5 million; and "Quincy," NBC, and "Baretta," ABC, both 18.9, or 13.4 million.

Americans among group archbishop will ordain

Econe, Switzerland (AP) — Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre went ahead Tuesday with plans to ordain 14 priests, including some Americans, using traditionalist rites in defiance of Pope Paul VI and risking excommunication.

On the eve of the ordinations scheduled for Wednesday morning, the Vatican radio reminded all Roman Catholics that absolute and unconditional loyalty to Pope Paul VI was "imperative." It said the Pope "continued to hope, even against all hope, in repentance" by the defiant French prelate.

Several thousand supporters of Archbishop Lefebvre were expected to attend the ceremony in this hamlet in the southern Swiss Alps where his seminary is situated.

The former archbishop of Dakar declined to talk to reporters in advance of his sermon for the ordination. His spokesman said the new priests and 22 subdeacons to be ordained will be identified only shortly before the ceremony but confirmed there were "a few" Americans among them.

But the ordination seems certain to be another open defiance of the Pope, who has threatened the archbishop with possible excommunication. Excommunication bans a Catholic from taking the sacraments and is the severest punishment of Roman Catholicism.

The archbishop rejects many of the positions taken by the Vatican in Church politics and in changing the liturgy. He opposes the Pope's efforts to reach a detente with Communist countries and the increasing contacts between the Roman Catholic Church and other churches.

He also rejects recent liturgical reforms, particularly the saying of Mass in modern languages instead of Latin.

His supporters come mainly from France, West Germany, Italy and Switzerland where the traditionalist movement against the reforms of the 1962-65 Vatican Council has picked up momentum in recent months.

The seminary, the traditionalists' spiritual headquarters, was not impressed by the threat of excommunication contained in a recent papal letter to the archbishop.

"We have heard so many such threats before," a spokesman said while confirming the ordination would be held as scheduled.

Traditionalist sources claimed to find a milder tone in the Pope's address Monday at the installation of five new cardinals. Most of the address dealt with church unity and Msgr. Lefebvre.

They also cited reports that West German Catholic bishops were trying to mediate between the Pope and his rebellious archbishop. Confirmation of any such mediation attempt was not available from German Catholic sources Tuesday.

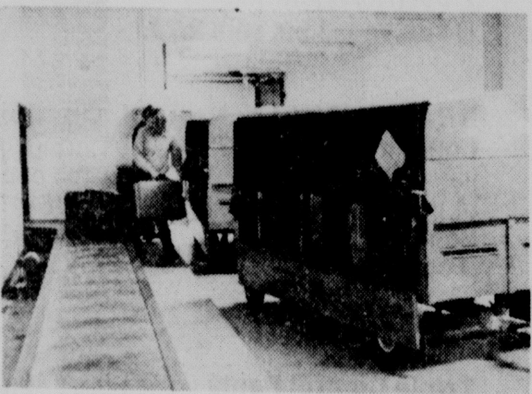
Golf bag cover torn in transit

To ask a question, call 477-2121 or write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, Neb. 68501.

Torn over tear

I wrote to Braniff Airlines in March about a golf bag cover that was torn in transit from Miami to Tulsa last January. I have written twice, and on both occasions, not gotten any response. Any help would be appreciated.

P.R. Wagner, Lincoln



ACTION LINE: A Braniff passenger service spokesman in Dallas had your file in front of him when we called. The Dallas office believed the complaint was being handled by the Tulsa office. After your letter arrived, the Dallas office decided to process your complaint directly. Your check, with Braniff's apologies, is already in the mail.

Brewin over Gruen

My wife received a Gruen digital watch as a gift in 1976. It needed repairs so I returned it to the company along with a check for $24. After many weeks of waiting and after at least three letters, I still do not have the watch. Can you help?

A.D. Egbarts, York

ACTION LINE: At least we're ticking. A Gruen customer service spokesman was unable immediately to determine what happened to your wife's watch. They will check their orders and get back to us with an answer. We'll keep you posted.

More watches to watch

In January I mailed my watch to Westclock in Chicago for repairs. A UPS tracer tells me it was received but I have written to Westclock without results.

Mrs. Paul Harms, Lincoln.

ACTION LINE: Westclock said they will check their files and contact you directly about your missing order. Keep us posted.

Translation please

I have been reading of the "Likud," the new right wing party that has come to power in Israel. What does it mean — is it an abbreviation?

M.J., Lincoln.

ACTION LINE: Nope, Likud is Hebrew for Unity.

ACTION LINE UPDATE: We recently heard from American Consumer, Inc. of Philadelphia about a refund request by C. G. Yurth. The company says the refund check is on its way.

Allergy suspected as factor in croup

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

To Your Good Health

Dr. Dr. Thosteson: My son is almost three years old. Since his first birthday we have had him hospitalized four times with the croup. He had it another time, but we were able to treat it at home.

Since his first birthday he has also developed some allergies. They are hard to pinpoint, but we suspect detergents and animals with long hair. His eyes water, turn red and swell, and he gets a rash.

Our doctor says he will outgrow the tendency to have the croup, and he has prescribed a cough syrup to give at the onset of the croup.

Do you think we should see a doctor specializing in allergies? — Mrs. T. M.

Croup is a high-pitched barking cough accompanied by labored breathing. There are two kinds. "Spasmodic" croup is more frightening than serious. It usually accompanies a nasal discharge and throat hoarseness. There is very little fever involved and it is usually controlled with hot steam and syrups to promote mucus release. Syrup of ipecac in small doses has been effective.

The other kind of croup is more pronounced — a similar barking cough, but accompanied by severe breathing difficulty because of closed air passages. It has a really long name, "laryngo-tracheo-bronchitis," and it is a form of bronchitis.

This is often an emergency problem requiring hospitalization. It is usually related to a respiratory infection, and there is high fever (up to 105 degrees).

In this, steaming doesn't help and antibiotics are required to fight the infection.

Allergy can very definitely be a factor in the cause or severity of croup, and I would advise you to seek the advice of an allergist. I hope you already have removed the sources of animal dander, a common offender.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know what medicine is used for vascular headaches. — Mrs. W.H.A.

Because vascular headache stems from a spasmodic dilation (widening) of the blood vessels serving the head area, medicine to constrict these vessels is usually prescribed. Any of the ergotamine preparation is effective. The technique of biofeedback has been reported to be effective in such headaches.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Health Tip

If you camp or hike where ticks thrive, cover-up. Tick repellents usually in powder or spray form are available to treat clothing. Check your hair and skin occasionally. (Do not forget your pets either.) If a tick is attached, the Nebraska Medical Association advises you to pull it off gently, preferably with tweezers, paper or cotton.

A drop of turpentine may cause the tick to back out, dislodging itself. After removing the tick, disinfect the bite with alcohol or some other antiseptic. Never crush a tick between your fingers or finger nails.

Counseling helps both employes, businesses

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

When a longtime employe began showing up late for work, unshaven, hung over, liquor on his breath, the supervisor called a counselor at the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD) with a question:

"Can a guy become an alcoholic in one month's time?"

The employe, whose work performance had noticeably slipped, was asked to visit with the counselor and within 20 minutes the root of his problem came tumbling out.

"If you think you're so damn smart, what would you do if your 15-year-old daughter was pregnant?" he asked the counselor.

The man was referred to Family Services Association for help. His family problems were worked out and he returned to work where his job performance and attitude went back up to its former good level.

The employe was helped with a personal problem; the company saved money in lost time and production. These two gains are the primary benefits of the Employe Assistance Program, a three-year-old service offered to Lincoln-area employers.

Currently 43 companies, ranging from a small law firm to the 1,800 employe telephone company, are paying two dollars per employe each year for this service.

The two full-time counselors and a director in th program train company supervisors to spot and document deteriorating job performance, then to confront the employe with the facts and suggest counseling help.

Supervisors are not expected to, are even discouraged from actually providing counseling themselves. The supervisors' job is to document and confront on-job performance. "But it's easy to be caught in the trap of helping with problems, of feeling sorry or giving advice," said Mary Carper, former program director.

Counselors work with the employes and family members to sort out the problems and direct them to local help.

Although the program is under the LCAD umbrella, not all employe problems are addiction reiated.

The employe with the pregnant daughter was a social drinker who began imbibing more heavily during that crisis. "How was he going to tell his wife? his pastor? . . . his whole world fell apart," said counselor Donna Sutton. "He sedated his feelings for a while."

In a study of the more than 230 individuals counseled during the last two years, 40% had alcohol or drug addiction problems.

The counselors also talked with individuals who had emotional problems (27%), marriage problems (13%), and just plain job disatisfaction (3%), according to the study.

They have worked with rape victims and victims of incest. And they have spent time with employes who just needed an hour or two to think out a problem, who wanted a temporary listening ear.

"There are so many, many problems," said Ms. Sutton.

Self referrals, those who come in without any supervisory prodding, account for more than half the counselors' work.

A wife comes in after her husband's second drunk driving charge; a mother comes in to discuss her son's drug habits; parents whose daighter is losing her sight come to find help in coping and locating yraining programs for the girl.

The counselors do not get involved in long-term counseling; they focus on "motivational counseling," helping the individual pinpoint the problem, then offering alternative solutions and referring them to other agencies such as Lancaster County Mental Health, Family Services, alcohol and drug treatment centers.

Later the counselor will follow up to see if the person has gotten help from the referral agency, if there are other problems.

But nothing goes into personnel files. The problem does not get documented to follow the employe from job to job, stressed Ms. Carper.

Only when an employe has been sent in by his supervisor does the company even know he is getting help, she said.

This early intervention is intended to help with problems before they become so severe that jobs are lost and welfare has to take over, said Ms. Carper.

Counseling for employes is not new. Very large companies like Burlington Northern and Northwestern Bell have in-house counseling services, something that no Lincoln company could afford.

The fact that a company chooses to join this consortium is a good indicator of the climate in that company — of a good, healthy atmosphere, said counselor Paul Soergel.

The $55,000 annual program, funded one-third by the employer fee plus grants from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, the State Drug Commission and the Division on Alcoholism has gained some acclaim. It was cited by the NIAAA as one of the two best consortiums in the nation.

But its real success is measured more in the dollars saved and in the lives of men and women who have found help.

Bubble of heroic railroad building era burst

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Book Review

Building a railroad across America was a glorious dream, a national goal, pioneering progress, a technological marvel, the stuff of legends.

Or so we've been told.

But now comes Dee Brown, author of "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee," to say that building the transcontinental railroad was bribed congressmen, land grabs, robber barons, uprooted societies, scandals of enormous proportions.

In "Hear That Lonesome Whistle Blow," Brown gives us a new look at the Great Race to Promotory, a story devoid of glory and full of outrage.

The first Iron Horse arrived in America in 1829. By 1854, the Chicago & Rock Island's Locomotive No. 10 had reached the Mississippi River.

"During that brief span of years," Brown says, "the development of locomotives and the building of tracks for them to run upon had been amazingly swift, even more so than was to be the development of automobiles and paved highways in the twentieth century."

And the race had just begun.

Brown's unique historical perspective retells this story in terms of greedy excess and big profits for the promoters of famous names — the Union Pacific, the Central Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka and Sante Fe.

And he tells of the greed of others.

Steamboat operators were the first to battle the railroads, hoping to retain their monopoly on westward transportation. Steamboat men fought to keep railroad men from bridging the Mississippi.

But the railroaders had a sharp Illinois lawyer — one Abraham Lincoln — to argue their case. Soon, Lincoln had land in Council Bluffs where the tracks would span the Missouri River, and the railroaders had their bridges.

From there, it was nothing but a land grab.

As the iron rails were laid, railroad promoters gobbled up 155 million acres of the public's land — more than one-fourth the Louisiana Purchase, nearly one-ninth the entire land area that was then the United States.

Railraod promoters bribed congressmen from the start, hoping for votes for their particular routes west.

Government inspectors would complain of shoddy, too-quick construction.

Railroad surveyers selected roundabout routes for their tracks, not direct ones, so their land grants would be even larger around places like Omaha.

Laborers — thousands of Chinese coolies and Irishmen — died.

"As in war," Brown writes, "the longer the contest continued, the more ruthless, reckless and callous the leaders of the contending railroads became toward their own workmen . . . The U. P. undoubtedly lost the most workmen from exposure and from diseases contracted in the squalid dens of prostitution that followed the tracks westward. Almost no medical facilities were provided by either railroad company."

Then, there were the 1873 newspaper reports of widespread government corruption:

"As Congress began a typically mild investigation of itself in 1973, there appeared to be no way of concealing the fact that the Vice President, the Vice President-elect, chairmen of important committees in the House, a dozen Republican party leaders of both House and Senate, and the Democratic floor leader of the House had all accepted bribes . . ."

And, of course, the railroads helped to nearly destroy the Plains Indians, who had been promised their western land "as long as the grass shall grow or the waters run."

But when the Iron Horse began to run, an obliging government gave the railroads Gen. William T. Sherman, of Atlanta-burning fame. Sherman had come to regard the railroad "as a holy endeavor that must be defended at all costs against such 'a worthless set of scamps' as the Plains Indians."

So Sherman sent Gen. Philip Sheridan west, an army commander who believed "the only good Indian was a dead Indian." And Sherman issued his orders: "To track down and kill any Indians sighted near the railroad."

It's not a pretty story, obviously, but one Brown handles passionately, vibrantly and most importantly, from a new point of view.

Brown doesn't give us popular history. But he does give us Thomas Durant, the driving force behind the Union Pacific, to whom "the making of money was the only reason why a man should spend his time and energies at railroad building. Pride of accomplishment, the excitement of opening new frontiers, and fulfilling society's need for transportation meant nothing to him."

Read Brown's version of the story and wonder no longer why that train whistle was lonesome. With men like Thomas Durant at the throttle, Dee Brown says the railroads deserved few friends.

Opening lead — three of spades.

Underleading an ace on the opening lead against notrump is perfectly normal, but it is generally poor policy to do so against a suit contract. In notrump contracts the aim is usually directed to establishing a long suit, and leading away from an ace is standard operating procedure.

But the motivation is entirely different in defending against a suit contract, and in the long run it is a losing proposition to underlead aces on the opening lead. Declarer can sometimes take advantage of this concept and shape his play to suit it. Here is such a case.

West leads a low spade. If declarer plays the king from dummy, he goes down after East takes the ace and returns a spade. South later loses a heart and a club and fails by one trick.

But if South assumes that West would not underlead the ace of spades, which is surely a reasonable assumption, he follows low from dummy at trick one. Once he does this, the contract is foolproof.

East wins with the jack, but what can he do next? If he cashes the spade ace, South does not lose a club trick; if East makes a neutral return — say, a trump — South easily makes four.

Declarer wins the trump with the ace, plays a diamond to the king, a trump to the king, and cashes the A-Q of diamonds, discarding the K-8 of spades from dummy. Declarer now takes a club finesse, which loses, and West later makes a trump trick, but South makes the contract.

Climbing up with the king of spades at trick one seems to be a normal play, but this apparently innocuous move can cause much more damage than meets the naked eye.

'Tow-A-Drunk' promises to take you and your car home

Vancouver (UPI) — A car towing firm offering a service called "Tow-A-Drunk" has come to the rescue of the driver who has had one too many drinks and has the sense to recognize it.

"We felt the reason a lot of people drive after they've been drinking is because they want to have their car when they wake up the next morning," Unitow Service Inc. vice president Gary Tarantino said.

"So we decided to offer this kind of a service where we'll tow your car home and give you a ride in the tow truck."

Tarantino said the new service, costing $20 for an in-city tow, was unique so far as he knew, adding he thought it would be a winner with the public.

"We scratched our heads for a week trying to think of a name that was a little more subtle," he said. "But it was difficult. We finally printed up cards saying 'Tow-A-Drunk, both you and your car arrive home safely.' "

Tarantino said hotel managers and bartenders whose establishments the service advertises in were "extremely impressed by the idea."

Paint brush adapts

Jersey City, N.J. (UPI) — A manufacturer here is cutting the cost of paint brushes in introducing a brush with two interchangeable heads that snap on and off. The polyester filament bristles can be used for both latex and oil base paints.

The brush is rustproof and impervious to all solvents, says the manufacturer.

Tax break in cards for adding insulation

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant
Quinn

New York — Millions of homes in this country are improperly insulated, including, perhaps, yours. Dollars seep through the walls and ceilings every time you turn on the furnace or the air conditioner.

The House Ways and Means Committee just approved a tax break that would save you 20% of the cost of improving your insulation (up to a maximum saving of $400). It has yet to be passed by Congress as a whole, but some kind of tax credit is apparently in the cards.

As a homeowner who thinks he might want to take advantage of that credit, you have three questions to ask yourself: (1) Does my house actually need more insulation? (2) Does it make financial sense to insulate? (3) If so, which of the several types of insulation on the market are best for the job?

There is a quick way to evaluate your present insulation. If you can get into the attic, check the type and thickness of what's there. If it's insufficient, you can guess that it's similarly thin in the walls and floors.

The cheapest time to add insulation is when the house is under construction (or being ordered from a builder).

With an existing house, it's generally simple to add insulation to the attic. But putting more into the walls usually involves taking off the siding and blowing loose material into the spaces between the studs — an expensive job.

"If I were insulating my home, I'd first caulk up the cracks, then add to the attic and put in storm windows," says Richard Kutchnicki of the National Association of Home Builders. "That may save enough heat so that it doesn't make financial sense to reinsulate the walls."

In buying insulation for a new or old home, don't judge materials by their thickness. One material six inches thick may have less insulating value than another that's only two inches thick.

The thing to check is the R value, which should be marked on the package. (If it's not, look for other insulation.) This tells the material's resistance to heat loss. The higher the R value, the more effective the insulation.

A store that sells insulating materials, or your local building inspector, can tell you what R values are now recommended for floors, walls and ceilings in your area. The amounts have gone up; where R13 used to be enough for ceilings, for example, it now may make cost sense to go to R30.

The easiest for the do-it-yourselfer is the batt-type, mineral wool insulation that comes in standard lengths. The NAHB research foundation has started a quality-check program for this material, to be sure it lives up to the R value stated on the package, and so far two leading manufacturers have joined (Johns-Manville and Owens-Corning).

Other insulation materials for blowing into walls are cellulose (from old newspapers) and urea formaldehyde foam. Use of cellulose is picking up because it's a little lower in cost and higher in R value than mineral wool. However it's less fire resistant (despite being treated with fire retardant chemicals). For that reason, professionals advise against using it under the eaves, where it's more accessible to flame.

Some cellulose insulations corrode metals. Your best bet for avoiding problems is to look for manufacturers whose packages state that they meet the standards set by the National Cellulose Manufacturers Assn.

Urea formaldehyde foams shrink a little over time, which reduces their R value. There are other potential problems, such as odor and moisture, if the material isn't installed properly.

"Proper installation by an experienced and reliable firm is the key," says Frank J. Powell of the National Bureau of Standards. "Otherwise you may not get all the heat savings you expect."

Nobody wants to serve in town government

Littleton, W.Va. (AP) — They held an election here, and nobody came.

Mayor David Roberts, the five members of the council, and the town recorder all grew tired of the burdens of office in this town of 333 souls in the northern part of the state. All of them let the March 30 filing deadline go by without filing for re-election.

To their surprise, nobody else wanted to run, either.

They came up with a solution — make it a write-in contest.

But when the victors were announced, nobody wanted to serve.

In the write-in balloting, 41 votes were cast. Twenty persons got votes for town council, four for mayor and six for recorder.

Eventually, Roberts was persuaded to accept once more the $15-a-month job of mayor, for which he had gotten the most votes.

And Roberts' wife Carol found herself agreeing to serve another term as town recorder, which pays even more than mayor — $20 a month.

"We called everyone else on the recorder list," she said, but no one else would serve.

She says the problem stems from the town's current efforts to find more water. There's just too much paperwork associated with efforts to drill three new town wells. As an example, she says, the recorder finds herself working two or three days a week just to keep up.

Script isn't followed on South Pacific isle

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

Avarua — A blue water and blue sky day on Rarotonga. Barefoot. A cold can of New Zealand beer in hand. Warm air blowing across a white sand beach.

No movie company has ever set up cameras in the Cook Islands. No writers printed stories of lush and willing South Seas maidens. There's one painter — an American — who's been here for years.

The scenery is tropical. Sunstruck water, creaming white as it smashes on the reef. Banana plants. Coco palms. Thickets of arrowroot. Dark green taro patches.

But there isn't a thatched house on the island. Under New Zealand ownership, they built trim little boxy cottages.

(How can you write passionately about the South Pacific when they don't give you the props?)

☆ ☆ ☆

I said: "What about crime, John?" I hired John and his car. It's a new Air New Zealand route and they flew in a covey of journalists and travel agents.

Crime, said John, is an occasional fight. Usually at the Banana Court. Handily, it's right alongside the police station.

Maybe it's different at night. But in daytime, the Banana Court is a raunchy little bar.

I said: "John, they ought to close this place down. It's enough to make a South Seas writer throw his typewriter in the ocean."

☆ ☆ ☆

Avarua is the major village on Rarotonga. An antique limestone church from the days of the London Missionary Society. A post office. A modest building for Premier Sir Albert Henry and his Ministers.

"What do young people do for fun, John?" They play soccer," said John.

(I thought: "Heavenly days, I'll never get a column out of this.")

A bartender at the new Rarotongan hotel said: "There is a custom here they call creeping."

A young man creeps at night to the house of a girl who is the pineapple of his eye. "If she likes him she lets him in.

"If she doesn't, she calls out a string of words. They must be certain words, always used by our people."

(Not exactly, "Rape!" More like, "What the hell do you think you're doing here?")

I said: "Then all the villagers get up and chase him?"

He said: "Yes. And if they catch him he is very much ashamed."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I realize that the water shortage in my area has caused a great deal of inconvenience for some, but count us as a couple for whom it has been a real blessing.

In an effort to conserve water, my husband and I decided to try bathing together, and all I can say is "WOW!" It has opened up a whole new series of experiences for us. (He's 36 and I'm 35, we've been married for 14 years, and we have three children.)

To those who would scoff at this lovely kind of togetherness, if you haven't tried it, don't knock it.

JIM AND JANE IN MARIN

DEAR J AND J: Can it then be said that "the family who bathes together stays together"?

DEAR ABBY: You claim there's no such time as a "'frigid-dear' — only clumsy men."

As a former "clumsy" man, let me assure you that many men are conditioned through repetition to be clumsy. "Not tonight, I have a headache," or, "Well, okay, go ahead, but hurry up and get it over with.")

Thanks to Dr. Freud, I found someone to "untrain" me.

DAVE IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR ABBY: Our dear and saintly minister preaches a beautiful sermon every Sunday morning, and at the conclusion of each service he goes to the rear of the church to shake hands with all the members of the congregation as they go out the door.

The problem is that he grasps each hand and squeezes it as though he were cracking nuts!

My poor mother, with her hands gnarled by arthritis, waits in line as though she were going to her execution!

I'm sure our minister reads your column, Abby, so if you print my letter, he may recognize himself and take the hint. Thank you.

W.

DEAR W.: Your mother — and all the rest of you out there for whom an enthusiastic handshake is painful — should not hesitate to say, when extending a hand in greeting, "Gently, please — arthritis!"

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Encose stamped, self-addressed envelope please.

Everroad is considering entering Senate campaign

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Although he's reluctant to talk about it now, former Lt. Gov. John Everroad of Omaha is taking a look at next year's U.S. Senate contest.

"Wait until the first part of August," he said Tuesday. "I'll decide one way or the other about then."

Everroad's name has not been on the long list of GOP Senate prospects until now.

And he's not sure he'll stay on the chart of potential candidates very long.

Everroad did give consideration to Senate races in 1970, 1972 and 1976 before ultimately deciding not to run.

"I've got some business arrangements that have to come first," the 64-year-old diesel truck engine supplier stressed. "Then I can think about it."

The lengthy GOP list of prospective Senate candidates stretches from Don Shasteen, administrative assistant to retiring Sen. Carl Curtis, to former Republican State Chairmen Milan Bish of Grand Island and Bill Barrett of Lexington.

Bish headed Ronald Reagan's successful 1976 presidential primary campaign in Nebraska and chaired the state's delegation to the GOP national convention in Kansas City.

Barrett was chairman of former President Ford's Nebraska campaign.

Other Senate prospects — generally considered less likely — include 1st. District Congressman Charles Thone of Lincoln, Attorney General Paul Douglas, State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson and State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood.

Everroad, who served as lieutenant governor during Norbert Tiemann's 1967-71 term as governor, said he generally agrees with the former Republican chief executive's remarks last week about the need for "new blood" and new leadership within the Nebraska GOP.

"Let's put it this way," Everroad said. "I don't think Tiemann was wrong.

"I think the party needs new faces. We need some young people. A few new guys are showing up and I think we should make room for them.

"The Republican Party needs new leadership . . . not the Old Guard."

Everroad thinks party leaders have "made some mistakes," and one of them apparently was to convince Edward Zorinsky that there was no room for him in last year's Republican Senate primary.

"I think they forced him to the other side," he said.

Zorinsky said he was urged to stay out of the GOP Senate primary race because the party leadership had settled on former Congressman John McCollister as its preferred nominee. Zorinsky said it was suggested that he run instead for McCollister's seat in the House.

Ignoring that advice, Zorinsky changed his voter registration from Republican to Democratic, entered his new party's Senate primary race, won it and subsequently defeated McCollister in the general election.

"That battle (between McCollister and Zorinsky) should have taken place in the Republican primary," Everroad said.

"The big guys in the party should have said: 'Let it happen in our primary.'

"The party shouldn't weed people out before the primary. If it hadn't, it might still hold that Senate seat."

Everroad said he thinks Democratic Gov. J. James Exon can be beaten in next year's Senate race.

"But it would take some doing," he said. "He's a good man and he's a friend. But I don't think Jim has been right on every issue."

Exon has not announced his 1978 intentions, but he is considered a possible, perhaps likely, Senate candidate.

Everroad was an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor in 1964, before winning the post in 1966.

Schmit's candidacy anticipated

Associated Press

A close political ally of State Sen. Loran Schmit said Tuesday he was confident that Schmit "will be offering himself soon as a candidate for the governor's race."

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp made that comment while simultaneously announcing he would seek a third Unicameral term from the 40th legislative district.

DeCamp, an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination to the 3rd District House seat in 1976, stated flatly that a previous "burning ambition to go to Washington is gone, completely."

Contacted in Bellwood, Schmit said he was looking at the governor's race "very seriously."

"The time is going to come before long that I'll make up my mind if I'm going to do anything," about seeking the GOP gubernatorial nod, Schmit said.

"A lot of people have encouraged me to run for various offices but they seem to think the governor's office is best in keeping with my previous nine years experience in the Unicameral," Schmit said.

Schmit is chairman of the Legislature's Committee on Agriculture and Environment and is regarded as one of the Unicameral's most powerful members.

Schmit failed in a 1960 bid to win a GOP House nomination.

DeCamp described Schmit as "probably my closest prsonal and political friend," and said he would be "working to assist Nebraska in electing Loran."

DeCamp, an attorney and chairman of the Legislature's Banking Committee, has been closely allied with Schmit in various legislative projects.

Friendship exchange program to be directed by McAllister

Gov. J. James Exon has announced the appointment of Jack MacAllister, president of Northwestern Bell in Omaha, to be director of the State's new Friendship Force.

Mrs. Pat Exon, the governor's wife, has agreed to serve as Nebraska's honorary chairman for the privately financed international citizens exchange program.

Exon said the Friendship Force grew out of a project begun by President Carter while he was governor of Georgia. The program has expanded to other states.

Under the exchange program, Americans will stay in private homes in other countries and an equal number of visitors will stay with Americans.

The first exchange, planned for July, will involve a cross-section of people from Atlanta, Ga., with residents from Newcastle, England.

By 1980, the so-called Friendship Flights are expected to average one a month from all 50 states, eventually involving 250,000 people.

MacAllister said Nebraska's first exchange probably won't be organized until late this year or early next year. In the meantime he said a committee will be formed to select the cities which will be involved.

Those who participate have no choice as to which city they will visit during a 10-hour tour. MacAllister said that rule was decided made to discourage people from thinking that the program is simply an inexpensive way to be a tourist. All flights will be chartered.

Resolutions believed not binding

Delegates to the National Women's Conference are not bound to support resolutions passed at state meeting, according to a legal counsel for the Washington office of the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year (IWY).

Nebraska's delegates elected Sunday call themselves pro-life, pro-family and pro-America; they are opposed to the equal rights amendment and abortion, which Nebraska resolutions support.

Donna Polk, and other members of IWY, are questioning the outcome of the election. They feel the state's delegation is not representative of all women in Nebraska.

David Wallace, legal counselor counsel for the IWY, has received challenges from other states claiming elected delegations are not representative. He said he told those persons to try to work out the differences locally.

Ann Bowen of Omaha, an elected delegate and leader of pro-life forces at the Nebraska Women's Meeting, said Monday she will check with an attorney "to see how, legally, we have to stand" on the resolutions.

"I will do whatever is honest and forthright," she said. "After that, I will follow my personal viewpoints and they are quite obvious."

A little, but meaningful, word was omitted from a previous statement from Ann Bowen of Omaha, leader of the successful pro-life, pro-America forces at the Nebraska Women's meeting.

"We had no assistance from outside Nebraska," Mrs. Bowen said.

Through an inadvertent typesetter error, the "no" was left out of the story in Tuesday's edition of The Lincoln Star.

Man's death said asphyxiation

Louisville (AP) — A Louisville man whose body was found Saturday by two teen-agers apparently died of asphyxiation, Cass County Sheriff Fred Tesch said Monday.

James L. Sherman, 36, apparently died Wednesday, Tesch said.

Sherman apparently was working on his pickup truck in a garage when he was asphyxiated, the sheriff said.

The ignition switch of the truck was on and the gas tank was empty when Sherman was found.

Planning panel quits in protest in Cedar County

Hartington (AP) — The Cedar County Joint Planning Commission voted unanimously to resign in mass, effective Friday, to protest the Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Act, popularly known as the Sunshine Law.

Planning Commission Chairman Willard Burney of Hartington said, "The members of the commission regret having to resign before their job is completed. But they feel it is more important at this time to take a stand for the right of the individual to privacy."

"We doubt if most public boards or commissions which are going to be affected realize the implications of this law," he said, and "we feel it is an evasion of privacy."

Marvin Hartung of Coleridge, one of Cedar County's three county commissioners, said Tuesday he sympathized with the commission's problem.

"I'm certainly in sympathy with the commission and I heartily agree with the action they've taken."

Hartung called the law ridiculous and said the public should be aware of its implications.

The county commissioners are concerned about the status of the planning commission, he said. They also are concerned that the legislation will make it impossible to get anyone to serve in voluntary capacities, he said.

Carter may meet Brezhnev

(c) New York Times

Washington — President Carter would like to meet with President Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Union — possibly this year — but no time or place has been fixed, the White House said Tuesday.

One possibility, officials said, was for the two leaders to hold an informal meeting in Alaska, similar to the three-day meeting held by President Ford with Brezhnev in Vladivostok in November 1974.

The White House said Tuesday afternoon that "The President is looking forward to meeting with Brezhnev at a mutually agreeable time and place."

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, meeting with a group of reporters Tuesday morning said the question of when such a meeting should be held depended on Brezhnev's willingness to meet with Carter.

The White House disclosed that Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's national security affairs adviser, discussed the possibility of a Carter-Brezhnev meeting last week with Ambassador Analtoly F. Dobrynin of the Soviet Union.

Such a meeting would be an informal one, aimed at clearing the air between the two countries and allowing the two leaders to meet each other. There now seems little likelihood that the two countries will be able to conclude a new agreement limiting strategic arms before the current, five-year accord expires on Oct. 3.

Vance said it was "unlikely" that such a new agreement could be arrived at by October, but that this in itself was not a cause for alarm. He has said repeatedly that it was better not to appear to be signing an accord in haste, and that it did not matter if the five-year accord lapsed so long as negotiations continued for a new one.

Brezhnev, who recently took on the role of chief of state to complement his more important position as general secretary of the Communist Party, has wanted to meet with Carter for some time.

But some Soviet officials have insisted on the likelihood of a new strategic arms accord before such a meeting should be held. That was also the view of the previous administration.

But Brzezinski and Carter both have said publicly that there was value in a Carter-Brezhnev meeting even without a new arms control treaty.

Common eyes budgets in 'briefing'

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

It took two hours of explanation, but after hearing him out the City-County Common members Tuesday night gave tentative approval to a $2,388,693 budget submitted by City-County Health Director E. D. Lyman.

They even granted some changes to make it more to his liking. Seven-tenths of a laboratory scientist position, eliminated by Mayor Helen Boosalis, was restored with a promise from Lyman to cut $10,000 to make up for it.

An attempt by County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton to block the elimination of a dental screening program at the Open Door Health clinic got nowhere. Dr. Lyman's argument that a full-time dental hygienist at $11,277 could provide better service than the $13,600 Open Door program won out.

Dr. Lyman agreed to investigate ways of continuing to serve low-income clients at Open Door by shifts in scheduling.

The Common did not act on an objection by Health Board chairman George Preece to $54,800 for alcoholism outreach at the Indian Center. The $16,786 position for director of chemical dependency programs was approved.

An attempt by Councilman Dick Baker to deny Dr. Lyman a cost-of-living and a merit raise was defeated. Lyman's salary will increase from $43,775 to $46,044, with an additional $2,756 merit increase which Dr. Lyman says he will refuse.

Also Tuesday night, the Common endorsed a $1,098,072 budget for the Commission on Aging, which will include extension of services to other counties in a 7-county region.

In addition, the city and county officials agreed to "very tentatively" budget $91,000 jointly toward purchase and remodeling of the former W. T. Grant Bldg., 1023 O St., as a multi-purpose senior citizen center.

The negotiated price for the property is being kept secret. A good share of the cost would be borne by the federal government.

Eric McMasters successfully chopped $29,486 from the budget of the Pre-Trial Diversion Program to win approval of a final request for $176,795. The controversial position of evaluator, at a salary of $18,968 annually, will be phased out by next June.

As Councilman Joe Hampton said after the tiring, 3½-hour meeting, it was really only an advisory "briefing session" to prepare Council and County Board members for the votes that really count, when these joint budgets are considered by each body separately.

Momentum dulls 'Cabaret' impact

By David Meisenholder

Flash and dazzle abound as the University of Nebraska Repertory Theater opens its 1977 summer season with the Broadway musical "Cabaret."

Director Rex McGraw and his performers at times wowed their audience in Howell Theater with one of the most touching and truly entertaining American musicals ever written.

"Cabaret" not only has tuneful music and eye-pleasing dances but also has impact in its story line and lyrics.

But it was this impact with which the repertory company had trouble. The Tuesday night performance played to a small house lacked a unified consistency of quality.

When the musical began and the huge red sign spelled out letter by letter "Caberet," when the singers and dancers exploed the song "Wilkommen" (Welcome), when the orchestra played in tune and the dancers moved in the 1920 flapper style . . . all seemed to be wow.

But, generally, the musical continued to lose momentum.

Although Kathleen Morrow sang with professionalism, her acting just could not carry the leading role of Sally Sowles. Her supporting actor, Cliff Radcliff, seemed to try his best to keep the scenes on the move, but to little avail.

Actress Patricia L. Ryan who played Fraulein Schneider was outstanding throughout the evening. Her acting was superb, and when she sang "So What?" and "What Would You Do?" the evening took on needed glitter.

Another highlight was when Mitchel Tebo and chorus sang "Tomorrow Belongs to Me" — later to be reprised by the outstanding voice of Missy Critchfield who portrayed Fraulein Kost.

The technical aspects of this production are fantastic. The revolving stages by Daniel Proett and stage lighting by Jerry Lewis are something seldom to be seen in Lincoln.

Michael Cesario's costumes were well designed and the dances by Rich Rahn were exciting. Music Director Douglas Anderson's combo simply played too loud.

"Cabaret" continues in the Temple Building, 12th and R St., on various dates throughout the summer — being intermixed with three other productions by this impressive theatrical troupe.

VW denies plans to make motorcycles

Wolfsburg, West Germany (AP) — Volkswagenwerk AG denied published reports that it plans to make motorcycles.

A VW spokesman said the automaker had considered such a move as part of its effort to diversify, but rejected it as unfavorable.

Grain service inspection chief named

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Agriculture Committee has approved President Carter's nomination of L. E. Bartelt, former assistant director of the California State Agriculture Department, as head of the Federal Grain Inspection Service.

The service, an agency of the Agriculture Department, controls inspection of grain at all ports and supervises private and state grain inspectors at interior markets.

The agency was created by a 1976 law stiffening grain inspection regulations.

A group of parents from Morley Elementary School asked the Lincoln Board of Education to install soundproof walls in several areas used as open space classrooms.

The parents want to decrease the noise and confusion in the areas which can accommodate more than 100 students, said Earl Visser, who presented petitions with more than 100 signatures to the board Tuesday night.

Parents wanted to get their bid in for the walls before final budget decisions were made, Visser said.

The board made no decision on the walls but did increase wages for principals and all nonteaching staff before beginning final budget work.

The wage increases, in cents-per-hour for some employes, will average about 8.6% — the same average increase going to the teaching staff next year. However, raises for individuals and groups of employes will not always be 8.6% said Supt. John Prasch.

For administrators, including principals, increases will range from $945 to $2,041 per year with the annual salaries ranging from $17,030 to $29,515 depending on the job, years of experience and educational background.

The board also agreed to sell the city about 5 acres of school land for a park in the South Salt Creek Neighborhood. The $54,000 land price will be partially offset by a land exchange, with the city giving the school several alleys and vacated roadways.

Tuition charged to students attending the Lincoln public schools from other districts was raised about 18% for the next school year.

These tuition rates — $1,771 for elementary and $2,035 for secondary — are above the actual estimated per pupil cost per year but within the 20% addition allowed by law, administrators said.

Charges for nondistrict children in the special education programs range from $440 a year for speech therapy to $10,175 for profoundly handicapped children.

After some debate on the merits of an East High School class in quilting, the board approved a list of new junior and senior high school courses which will begin next fall.

"Where does quilting fall under our basic education scheme," asked Stan Linnertz.

The classes include an accelerated math program for talented junior high students in Culler, Dawes, Lefler, Mickle and Pound, new specialized art classes at Northeast and Southeast High Schools, debate at Lincoln High and philosophy at East High.

The board also received the mayor's energy award for energy conservation efforts during the past two years. Conservation measures included some remodeling, inservice training for staff, reduction in the use of natural gas and turning down 4,312 school thermostats in the evening and on weekends.

Lincoln man's hearing closed

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Council Bluffs Magistrate Dan McTaggart Monday honored a defense request to close to the public and the news media the preliminary hearing of a man charged with assault with intent to commit a felony sodomy.

Iowa law states that such a request must be granted.

McTaggart said he would rule later this week in the case of Douglas G. Voegler, 26, of Lincoln.

Exon: Support fails school aid bill 'referendum-proofing'

Gov. J. James Exon said Tuesday he doesn't think teachers and school board members supported the actions of their lobbyists who tried to make the school aid bill referendum-proof.

The Star erred in quoting Exon on that statement in a story which ran Tuesday.

The story mistakenly said Exon didn't think rank and file teachers and school board members supported education lobbyists' efforts to start a counter petition drive of their own should an effort be made to repeal the school aid bill.

That bill, LB33, which boosts state school aid by $20 million over the next three years, was vetoed by Exon. The Legislature overrode the governor's veto.

Exon said he didn't think many of the state's teachers and school board members approved of action taken by supporters of LB33 to make the law referendum-proof.

State senators and lobbyists for the Nebraska State Education Association and State School Boards Association tried to tie a direct appropriation of funds to the Department of Education in LB33.

A section of the state constitution says that a referendum may not be invoked against laws "making appropriations for the expense of the state government or a state institution existing at the time of the passage of such act."

Because the bill initially included the appropriation, supporters hoped citizens would not be able to vote on the $20 million appropriation, Exon said.

Exon said Monday he would not take an active role in seeking signatures on petitions to place the school aid question on the ballot. In 1974 enough signatures were obtained to place a $100 million school aid increase on the ballot. Nebraska voters repealed that law.

Last week officials of the education association and school board group said they would mount a counter petition drive to repeal LB518 if a petition drive were initiated against LB33. LB518 will increase exemptions on farm and business inventories and farm equipment from 62.5% to 100% over the next three years.

Maine pipeline aided by law

Augusta, Maine (AP) — A bill to speed up the processing of environmental permits for a $2 billion natural gas pipeline that would pass through Maine has become law over the veto of Gov. James B. Longley.

The Senate voted 28-2 to override the governor's objections to the measure aimed at helping the Tenneco Atlantic Pipeline Co. build a 210-mile portion of the pipeline across Maine.

Sen. Murphy says Exon made school bill 'deal'

Wayne (AP) — State Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City has charged that Gov. J. James Exon made "a deal with some factions of the legislature" over legislation to increase the money the state gives local education.

In a speech to the Kiwanis club Monday, Murphy said Exon agreed to send a bill adding $20 million to state aid, which he vetoed, back to the lawmakers in plenty of time for them to override his veto — "thus leaving the governor free to say he was not responsible for the tax hike" the bill would require.

The bill added $20 million a year for the next three years to the state's aid to education.

"The deal was made that he would veto it as a gesture and return it to the legislature within two hours so that it could, as he was aware it would, be overridden," Murphy said.

"He could have very nicely waited 24 hours to veto that bill and we could have done nothing about it."

Murphy said, "The governor sent that (bill) back knowing full well that he was adding that $20 million and the ultimate $60 million, and I don't think any political hay should be made on his part.

"I don't think he should hold the Legislature at a disadvantage because he had the ultimate last shot," Murphy said.

Exon vetoed the appropriation in the Legislature's final days.

Let's hear it for grand old Italian fighters, O'Brien and Murphy

By Roger Simon
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Only in America:

In a few months the kick-off celebration for the Italian-American Boxing Hall of Fame will be held in Chicago. This is a fine idea. Italian-Americans have made an enormous contribution to boxing and that should be recognized.

And what Italian-American boxing heroes are likely to be honored? Well, Marty O'Brien for one. And Kid Murphy and Steve Kid Sullivan and Jimmy Kelly.

If it occurs to you that the names of O'Brien, Murphy, Sullivan and Kelly do not sound like the names of men who just stepped off the boat from Palermo, then you are about to learn something from one of the strangest chapters in American history.

Take Marty O'Brien. A feisty little featherweight who fought in the late Twenties. He never became very famous then, but he is well remembered today. And that is because Marty O'Brien's real name was Martin Sinatra. And he had a kid named Frank, who, I believe, went into the singing business.

Now take Jimmy Kelly. Jimmy Kelly fought in Chicago in the days when everyone crowded onto barges in the Chicago River because boxing on city land was illegal. It was his first fight and was expected to go the usual 30 or 40 rounds. The rounds didn't have any set time. They ended when a guy got knocked down. If he could get up again, the next round began.

Well Jimmy Kelly was named Angelo Yario, which is what he wrote down for the ring announcer when the time came. The announcer took one look at the Italian scrawl and said, "And in this corner . . . Jimmy Kelly!"

Yario went on to win the fight, wondering all the time who the hell Jimmy Kelly was. "You're on a winning streak," his manager told him. "Keep the name Kelly."

The man who has researched all this is George Randazzo, who has been collecting pictures and information about Italian-American fighters for 30 of his 35 years.

"Italians couldn't get fights in the Twenties because the announcers couldn't pronounce their names,"Randazzo said. "So they picked Irish names instead."

Actually, Randazzo is being very charitable. The amount of prejudice against Italians and other immigrants entering America in the 1900s was considerable, and taking an Irish or some other more acceptable name was one way to avoid this.

The Jewish fighters of the time were in the same position as the Italians. Which is why lightweight champ Barney Ross was really Barney Rasofsky and welterweight champ Jackie Fields was known in the neighborhood as Jacob Finkelstein. And when Bushy Graham won the New York bantamweight title, the folks who knew him yelled, "Hooray for Izzy Schwartz!"

Even though ethnic Americans took different names they still got tremendous support from their countrymen. This often led to strange double lives. Johnny Dundee, for instance, was Joseph Corrara from Sciacca, Sicily. For reasons best known to him the little featherweight was always billed as "The Scotch Wop."

"There is nothing wrong with these men changing their names," Randazzo said. "But it is time to honor them under their real names. Even though the Hall of Fame will be for Italian-Americans, we intend to start a youth foundation for kids of all races and ethnic backgrounds."

Randazzo has managed to track down all the living Italian-American boxing champs in America. There are 21 of them and they have all agreed to come to the Hall of Fame kick-off dinner on Sept. 16. A little suprisingly, Randazzo has already sold 1,200 tickets at $50 per ticket.

"Let me show you this letter," Randazzo said, pawing through a stack of mail. He passed up letters from Frank Sinatra and Watergate judge John Sirica (who was once a professional fighter) and came to a letter scrawled in ball point pen across some loose-leaf notebook paper.

It was from the wife of Sammy Angott (Salvatore Engotti) who became lightweight champion of the world in 1943 by beating Willie Pep (Willie Papaleo). Angott was a walk-in slugger, a real brawler, but that was long ago. Now he is crippled with arthritis and is in a wheelchair. Because he has difficulty writing, his wife wrote the letter. She said it would not be easy to get her husband to the Hall of Fame dinner, but not to worry.

"Sammy is feeling a little better," she wrote. "He told me to tell you: 'I'll make it if I have to crawl.' "

Kelleher honored

Banquets honoring sports heroes are faily common around the country. Members of the Super Bowl championship team return home at the end of the season and are given the keys to the city, a ride down main street in an open convertible and a banquet for which the whole town turns out.

The same thing happens to Olympic winners — champs in every sport. Many cities organize 'Athlete of the Year' dinners.

Well, Newport Beach, Calif., has gone one-up on everybody else. That city just finished spending an entire week honoring ex-Colorado fullback Jim Kelleher. You might ask why, since Kelleher is from Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Newport Beach called it "Irrelevant Week." The reason Kelleher was the object of the city's affection was because he was the last man chosen in the NFL's football draft.

Actually, it was "Irrelevant Week II." All this nonsense was the brain child of a guy named Paul Salata, a one-time end for USC and the San Francisco 49ers. Appropriately, nobody seems to remember — or care — which end he played.

Congressional record

Kelleher's "week" was kicked off in proper style. California Congressman Robert Badham stopped the debate on the energy crisis, the concern over the cold war in the Middle East, or whatever else was being discussed, to enter the following in the Congressional Record:

"Mr. Speaker, it is with a sense of pride that I rise to pay tribute to Jim Kelleher, who has become in Newport Beach, California, a symbol of what is great in America.

"Kelleher is distinguished by the fact he was the 335th draft choice. The only reason he was not 336th is that they quit at 335. The important thing is that he probably will not play for an NFL team next year anyway, and besides, no one can remember who drafted him.

"So that my colleagues will understand the importance of Irrelevant Week, I should like to explain that when the surf is up and the westerly breezes are filling sails, pursuits such as study, high finance and office hours become irrelevant.

"As that great philosopher once said, 'It isn't whether you win or lose, it's whether or not you sit on the beach and have the right to play out your option.' So it is with Jim Kelleher, who may never even have an option to play out.

"The world is full of Jim Kellehers, who happily play out their options every week, unaware of the Chinese proverb which exhorts us all to fish or cut bait and warns that when the going gets tough, the tough say, 'Forget it, man, it's not relevant.' "

Jersey of the day

At the opening banquet last Monday, the Colorado fullback wore battered jeans and the jersey of the day. It was navy blue and said, "Kelleher — 335." Dozens of other sported the same shirt.

It seemed only fitting that his press conference started 45 minutes late. Nobody seemed to care. The reason it was delayed? His luggage had been lost at the airport. Perfect.

Among the guests were Miss Newport Harbor, Miss Balboa, Miss Corona del Mar and Miss Bayshores. They showered Kelleher with gifts. He was handed a horn. "One toot is for Miss Balboa, two toots for Miss Newport Harbor and so on," he was told. "I'll start tooting a little later," Kelleher said.

The initial celebration a year ago — Irrelevant Week I — went so well they've decided to make it an annual affair in Newport Beach. Kelvin Kirk, the 1976 winner out of the University of Dayton, immortalized the event by arriving a day late, taking the wrong plane home, later reporting to the wrong pro training camp and then washing out in just three days.

Among the week's activities for Kelleher was a tour of Universal Studios, a special College Night at Disneyland, a day at Hollywood Park where they had a special race named for Kelleher, then a trip to Las Vegas to climax the festivities.

Incidentally, it was the Minnesota Vikings which drafted Kelleher last. That caused organizer Salata to present Jim a jock strap. "When they start telling you that you can't carry Chuck Foreman's jock, you'll be ready," Salata said. "You can practice by carrying this one."

American teen surprise of Wimbledon

Wimbledon, England (AP) — John McEnroe, 18 years and 4 months old, upset Phil Dent of Australia Tuesday and became the youngest men's semi-finalist in 100 years of Wimbledon.

The fair-haired left-hander from Douglaston, N. Y., who plays as an amateur among big-money professionals, won 6-4, 8-9, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

He set another record at the same time. He is the first man ever to make the semifinals of the world's greatest tennis tournament after playing through the qualifying competition.

"I wasn't sure if I would get into the tournament at all," McEnroe said. "And when I did get in, I didn't expect to win more than a few games in each set."

The young hero of the centenary tournament now faces the No. 1 seed, Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., who defeated Byron Bertram of South Africa 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

The other semifinal will be between Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y., and defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden.

Gerulaitis overran Billy Martin of Palos Verdes, Calif., 6-2, 8-9, 6-2, 6-2 while Borg played some of his finest tennis to win 6-0, 8-6, 6-3 over Ilie Nastase of Romania, the man he beat in last year's final.

McEnroe, an excitable youngster with a white headband around his long, blond hair, had many moments of frustration before overcoming the 13th-seeded Dent. He threw his racquet, shouted at a linesman and fell full length on the grass more than once, holding his head in his hands.

But he brought his emotions under control and came from behind to win the last two sets—just when it looked as if Dent, nine years his senior, was taking control.

McEnroe's most prolific stroke was his backhand. He hit a magnificent backhand past the Australian to break service at 4-3 in the final set. It proved to be the shot that won the match. He kept his cool and held on to his service.

McEnroe's most despairing moment came in the second-set tie-breaker when he had set-point at 7-6 and double-faulted. He thought his second serve was on the line and argued with the linesman. The umpire told him to play on and there was some booing from the crowd.

McEnroe then lost the tiebreak 9-7 and sat on his chair with his head buried in his hands.

It was a long time before he recovered his poise. He lost his service in the first game of the third set, broke back twice to take a 3-1 lead, but lost his own service again twice in succession.

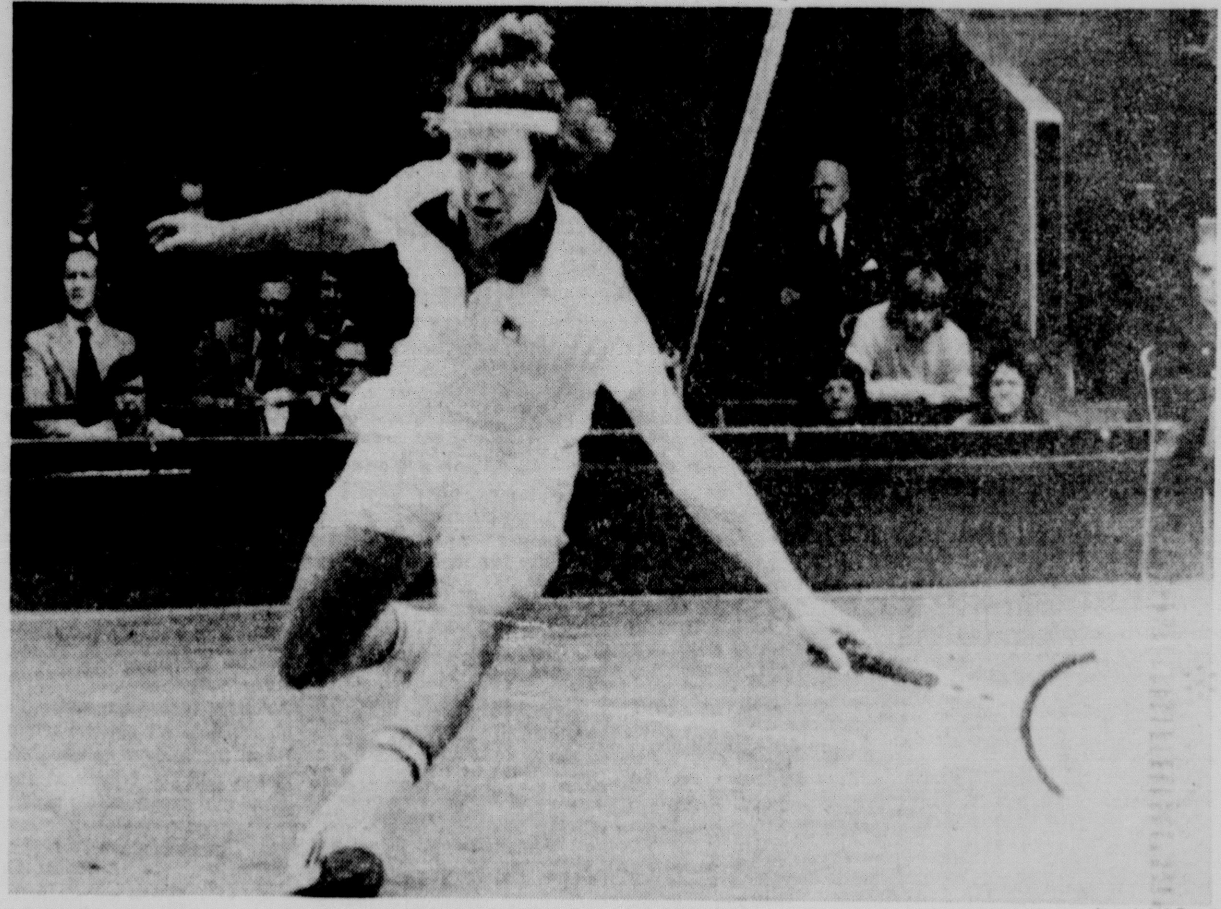
At this stage, McEnroe was making a lot of errors and few would have picked him to win. Then he settled down and started playing his best strokes again.

Dent contributed to his own downfall by double-faulting 13 times. His lapses played a vital part in the games that turned the match. He hit one doublefault in losing the seventh game of the first set—the only service break in the set—and two in the crucial seventh game of the final set.

McEnroe was listed No. 270 in last year's computerized world rankings, but he ranks second in the U.S. Junior list, behind Larry Gottfried.

He said he does not take prize money because he has been planning to go to Stamford University.

"But after my success here I shall have to talk it over with my parents," he said.



Associated Press

John McEnroe, the surprising U.S. 18-year-old, returns the ball against Phil Dent.

"Connors? No, I've never played him. In fact. I don't think I've ever even met him. But I would know him if I saw him."

Connors had to work hard for his victory over Bertram, a broad-shouldered man with powerful ground strokes.

Speed and power carried Connors to victory. He broke Bertram's service to win the third set 6-4 with a forehand that flashed past the South African as he stood on his baseline. The ball travelled so fast the Bertram made no attempt at a return.

It was the turning point for Connors. At one set all, he had battled in vain to establish supremacy throughout a hard and evenly balanced third set.

Bertram was under pressure from then on, but never stopped fighting. He had four break points in the third game of the fourth set before Connors won it. In the sixth game, Bertram had five advantage points, but eventually Connors hit two mighty forehands past him to capture his service.

Borg sped about the center court and angled his shots with such subtlety that Nastase was often immobilized.

The Romanian created the usual diversions. He held up play by arguing over line calls and later complained that a bird's feather had floated down in front of him.

The umpire, Jeremy Shales, picked up a telephone and told the tournament referee: "I am reporting Nastase for time-wasting."

He forgot to switch off his microphone, so the crowd of 15,000 heard it over the public address system.

Gerulaitis, who looks a little like Borg without a beard, reached the semifinals for the first time with a convincing win over Martin. But he was not satisfied.

"I didn't play particularly well, and I don't think Billy did, either," Gerulaitis said. "It was the first time I had ever played on the center court. It's pretty difficult out there with the wind blowing."

The semifinals are set for Thursday.

Bucks' rookies missing

Milwaukee (UPI) — In the NBA draft earlier this month the Milwaukee Bucks got three of the top players in the nation on the first round. But Tuesday none of them was on the court during the second day of the team's rookie camp.

Kent Benson, the No. 1 selection who has been signed by the Bucks, was sidelined by minor ankle injury and the other two first round selections were out with a different "ailment" — contract troubles.

Neither Marques Johnson, the No. 3 choice, nor Ernie Grunfeld, the No. 11 choice, were present because they haven't signed contracts with the Bucks. The camp runs through Thursday and the Bucks didn't think they would be there for any of the sessions.

Cauthen rides three winners

New York (UPI) — Seventeen-year-old Steve Cauthen, the nation's leading rider, competed for the first time as a journeyman jockey Tuesday at Belmont and rode winners in his first three mounts.

Cauthen lost his status as an apprentice jockey Monday. As a journeyman Cauthen will no longer ride with the benefit of a five-pound weight advantage.

Cauthen showed, however, that the weight difference probably won't affect him.

After sitting out the first race, Cauthen, who has won more than $5 million in purses over a 13-month period, began his winning streak by riding Crab Grass to a 2½-length victory in the second race. He followed with successive wins on Double Gemini (seven lengths) and Smokey Lantern (4½ lengths), before finishing out of the money in the fifth race.

Cip names Baack new grad aide

Tom Baack, former Nebraska basketball standout under Joe Cipriano from 1965-68, is returning to the Cornhusker basketball ranks to serve as Nebraska's graduate assistant, Cipriano announced.

A three-year starting forward at Nebraska, Baack was the Huskers all time leading scorer with 1,293 points, until Jerry Fort (1972-76) broke that mark with 1,882 points. The Fort Wayne, Ind., native holds the Nebraska and Big 8 record for the highest career free throw percentage, a .839 mark.

Born in North Platte, Baack worked for the National Bank of commerce for two years, following his graduation from the University in 1968. He then was a graduate assistant at Brigham Young University, under head coach Glenn Potter, who was an assistant coach under Cipriano from 1963-70. Since 1974, Baack had been the assistant basketball and head track coach at Green Mountain High School in Lakewood, Colo.

Barb Harris at training camp

Barb Harris of the Lincoln Swim Club is attending a two-week training camp at the U.S. Olympic Regional Training Center to Squaw Valley, Calif.

The camp, which started Sunday and runs through July 9, is part of the Olympic Development effort in identifying potential 1980 Olympians.

Billy Hunter hops aboard merry-go-round

Associated Press

Step right up, Billy Hunter. Welcome aboard the managerial merry-go-round. Just hand your line-up card to the man at the gate and away you go.

As a matter of fact, a lot of managers have been going away this season. Five teams have changed pilots in the first three months of the season.

Four of those clubs have handled the switches conventionally. One manager is fired and a new one is hired. Oakland owner Charles O. Finley has sacked skippers so frequently, he could probably do it in his sleep.

Oakland, of course, axed its manager. So did Cleveland, San Diego and the New York Mets. Goodbye Jack McKeon, Frank Robinson, John McNamara and Joe Frazier. Hello, Bobby Winkles, Jeff Torborg, Alvin Dark and Joe Torre.

Of that newly hired group, Winkles and Dark have both managed before. And, both have been fired before. It comes with the territory.

Then there is the fifth team, the Texas Rangers. They are Hunter's new employers . . . but before he gets to feeling too secure, the ex-Baltimore coach should remember that he is the fifth guy to make out Ranger line-ups this season.

This has been a slightly bizarre season for the Rangers— especially for the men in the manager's seat. They started with Frank Lucchesi, who got himself decked in spring training by one of his players and then decked during the season by management.

When Lucchesi got sick one day in Boston, coach Pat Corrales managed the Rangers in a doubleheader. They responded by losing both games.

Then, when the Rangers got sick at the turnstile, Lucchesi was fired. His replacement would have been Eddie Stanky, but he also got sick—homesick after a single game.

That produced coach Connie Ryan, a one-week interim choice who lasted only until Hunter, hale and healthy, could be hired.

For those interested in managerial trivia, Lucchesi finished his term at Texas with a 31-29 record. Ryan was 1-4 and Corrales 0-2, although some people insist on counting those games under Lucchesi's log. The most successful Ranger skipper, of course, was Stanky, who left with a perfect 1-0 record.

The first manager to lose his job this season was McNamara at San Diego. He was a fallout victim of the winter player revolution. Owner Ray Kroc had invested large numbers in the free-agent market and when the Padres lost anyway, Kroc figured the best solution was to send McNamara packing.

He was replaced by Dark, who until then was coaching first base for the Chicago Cubs. When Dark left for San Diego, the Cubs offered his job to Stanky, who turned it down, preferring to remain on the college campus—at least until Texas came around. In fact, it turned out that Stanky preferred to remain on the college campus after Texas came around, too.

Another free-agent victim was New York's Frazier. The Mets stayed out of the big contract war and when the team floundered on the field, the manager was the target. Finally, he was sent on his way and replaced by Torre, who is going around for the first time.

Cleveland was hailed for being the first team to hire a black manager when Frank Robinson became the club's pilot in 1974. The Indians also became the first team to fire a black manager, replacing Robinson with coach Jeff Torborg, who won seven in a row after he was named. Cleveland had also won two in a row just before Robinson was canned, proving that even winning sometimes can't save the manager's job.

The strangest firing had to be McKeon at Oakland. He had a team that was decimated by the free-agent exodus and was just one game under .500 at 26-27 when Finley gave him the thumb.

McKeon, of course, has been fired before and, if it is any comfort to him, Finley has fired managers before.

Hyland, Deeter lead in city golf test

The list of leaders at the end of the first round of the Lincoln City Women's Golf Championships isn't going to surprise anyone.

Defending champion Jean Hyland, who has captured the title six of the last seven years and has claimed the crown 14 times in all, is tied for first.

Deadlocked for the lead after Tuesday's opening round at the Hillcrest Country Club is Jane Deeter, who finished fourth last summer. Both recorded seven-over-par 83s.

Four shots off the pace in third place is nine-time champion Dorothy Schwartzkopf. She won two years ago and tied with daughter Christie for second place last summer.

Deeter, who just completed her sophomore season for the University of Nebraska women's golf team, was in an excellent position to make a move toward her first city championship until she had a disastrous four-hole stretch late in her opening round.

"I played the front nine quite well and was just one over at the turn," Deeter said. "Then I birdied No. 10 and parred the next two. I was even-par going into No. 13."

A bogey and three double-bogeys followed before she recovered to par the final two holes.

Hyland had a much steadier round on the way to her 83.

"I had no double bogeys and managed a couple of nice putts — one of about 20 feet for a birdie on No. 3. But, I also missed some very makeable putts. At least three were dead on line but stopped short. One actually hung over the lip of the cup, but wouldn't fall."

An unexpected cold wind and rainy weather sent scores soaring. Just 27 players broke 100.

"I certainly wasn't prepared for the cold," Schwartzkopf said. "As a result, I never did get warm or loosened up through the entire round. But, I've been putting better this year. I'm not too unhappy, considering the weather."

The emergence of Deeter to challenge the perennial championship pair doesn't surprise Schwartzkopf.

"At the recent state women's medal play tournament, of the low 14 golfers, all but three were 21 years of age or younger," she recalls. "Jean Hyland and I were two of those three, but the youngsters are really coming on strong. And I think that's great."

Does that make Deeter the favorite to claim her first championship in the 54-hole affair which will conclude with a round at Pioneers Wednesday and at the Lincoln Country Club Thursday?

"No way," Jane answers quickly. "Jean Hyland is really consistent. And she has a great short game. I'm going to have to chip and putt well if I hope to stay with her."

Goodson homer hands Dodgers 3-2 triumph

United Press International

Ed Goodson hit a leadoff pinch-hit solo homer in the ninth inning and Charlie Hough earned his 18th save of the season Tuesday night when the Los Angeles Dodgers scored a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Goodson, batting for reliever Mike Garman, hit his homer off Max Leon, snapping a 2-2 tie and sending Leon to his third loss. Garman received credit for his fourth victory when Hough pitched a hitless ninth.

Steve Hargan carried a 2-1 lead into the top of the eighth inning but the Dodgers tied the score after Steve Garvey was safe on an error by third baseman Jerry Roster. Rick Monday lined out to third but Royster threw wild toward first attempting a double play and Garvey went to second. He scored on a double by Dusty Baker.

The Cincinnati Reds scored an 11-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Montreal Expos 4-2, the Houston Astros beat the San Diego Padres 5-1, the St. Louis Cardinals swept the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1 and 13-3, and the Philadelphia Phillies topped the New York Mets 3-1, in other National League games.

Johnny Bench drove in five runs with a homer and a two doubles and Ken Griffey had a triple and a homer to lead the Reds over the Giants. Doug Capilla earned credit for his first major league victory with the late-inning relief aid of Paul Moskau. Jack Clark hit a tworun homer for the Giants.

Pinch-hitter Gene Clines' sacrifice fly drove in the winning run for the Cubs in the 10th inning and provided Rick Reuschel with his 11th triumph. Pinch-hitter Greg Gross followed with another sacrifice fly driving in the second run of the inning. Bruce Sutter received credit for his 21st save for the Cubs while Will McEnaney was the loser.

Bob Watson and Enos Cabell each drove in two runs and Joaquin Andujar pitched a five-hitter raising his record to 9-4 for the Astros, who dealt the Padres their eighth straight loss. Gene Tenace spoiled Andujar's shutout in the sixth with a run-scoring triple.

Buddy Schultz pitched a fivehitter for 7 1-3 innings and Keith Hernandez had three hits for the Cardinals in the first game with the Pirates. Ken Reitz hit two homers, including a grand slam, and drove in eight runs to lead the Cardinals' 13-hit attack in the second game.

Greg Luzinski drove in two runs with a double and a homer and Ron Reed pitched 4 1-3 innings of shutout relief for the Phillies, who handed the Mets their sixth loss in a row. Luzinski snapped a 1-1 tie with a homer in the eighth inning and Bake McBride added an insurance run with a ninthinning homer.

Detroit hands Red Sox fifth setback in row

United Press International

Ron LeFlore, making a comeback from last season's knee surgery, got off to a slow start this year. but the knee seems sound now and the Tigers' center fielder is slowly building his average to .300.

LeFlore's single up the middle with two out in the ninth Tuesday broke a 2-2 tie and gave Detroit a 3-2, come-from-behind victory over Boston. It was the Red Sox' fifth straight loss.

The Tigers trailed 2-1 going into the eighth when LeFlore surprised everyone by laying down a bunt single. Pinch-hitter Tim Corcoran singled him to third and Steve Kemp tied it up with a sacrifice fly.

Fred Lynn's homer in the first and Carl Yastrzemski's 15th of the year in the seventh accounted for Boston's two runs.

LeFlore's three-for-five performance raised his average to .278.

Elsewhere in the American League, Toronto and New York split a pair, the Blue Jays taking the opener 8-5 and the Yankees the nightcap 5-1 in 11 innings, Minnesota dumped Milwaukee 8-3 and Chicago topped Seattle 10-4.

Graig Nettles' two-run double sparked a four-run, 11th inning rally to salvage a split after Reggie Jackson's error on a fly ball opened the way for a four-run, seventh-inning rally that gave the Blue Jays the opener.

Roy White and Chris Chambliss started the 11th inning of the second game with singles. After a sacrifice moved them both up, Mickey Rivers bounced a slow roller to short that went for an RBI single. Nettles then hit a drive to the top of the wall in right that glanced off the glove of Otto Velez. Nettles came all the way around on second baseman Dave McKay's errant relay throw.

Rod Carew, now batting .407, extended his hitting streak to 10 games while Glenn Adams and Dan Ford drove in two runs apiece in the Twins victory over the Brewers. Carew had one-for-three, including an RBI with a sacrifice fly in the first. Steve Brye had a triple and a homer to pace Milwaukee's attack.

Lamar Johnson and Jorge Orta blasted two-run homers and Richie Zisk added a solo shot to pace the White Sox to victory. Francisco Barrios went the distance, walking only one batter and striking out four to raise his record to 7-3.

Amos Otis and Buck Martinez hit run-scoring extra base hits in the eighth inning off Frank Tanana to give the Kansas City Royals a 3-1 victory over the California Angels behind the two-hit pitching of Dennis Leonard.

Leonard improved his record to 6-8 while Tanana suffered his second straight one-run loss.

Falstaff upsets Misty Lounge

Fourth-place Falstaff dumped league-leading Misty Lounge 5-1 Tuesday night at Ballard Field to tighten up the AAA fast pitch league race.

Misty (14-2) now leads second-place Valentino's (11-2) by just one and one-half games. Third place Dick Flynn Buick (10-4) is three games back and Falstaff (10-5) is now three and one-half back.

Bill Slaughter had three hits, including a home run, and drove in three runs to lead Falstaff, which scored two in the first, one in the third and two more in the fifth. Misty's lone run came on Jerry Motz' second-inning home run.

Larry Swanson Auto gained its third win of the season, defeating Sweep Left 8-5 in Tuesday's nightcap. The winners garnered six runs in the fourth inning.

Jerry Campbell hit a two-run home run and Dan Worley had a two-run triple for Swanson Auto.

College hall mixes show biz, history

Kings Mills, Ohio (AP) — A mechanical Knute Rockne belting out pep talks, electronic field goal place kicking gadgets and a lot of serious history is going into the new College Football Hall of Fame.

"We're aiming more at a family audience," said Jack Wyant, project manager for the College Football Hall of Fame under construction adjacent to the Kings Island amusement park about 25 miles north of Cincinnati.

The site owned by Taft Broadcasting Co., which also owns the park, was selected last year by the 108-year-old Football Hall of Fame committee over offers from Columbus, Ohio and Knoxville, Tenn.

Opening of the hall will be delayed until next year because of changes in the project construction.

Wyant also indicated the conservative football group and the local developers have been moving slowly.

"Their first reaction was they didn't want their Hall of Fame next to an amusement park. They were very particular, and I don't blame them. We tried to show them Kings Island was a little more than an amusement park," Wyant said.

"We're like a couple of newlyweds who don't know each other very well yet. We consult back and forth quite frequently. We can't put it together in a vacuum without their input. It's a delicate balance. They've been very receptive about the approach we have taken, which is an unique concept among Halls of Fame and traditional museums," Wyant said.

The creators are trying to strike a fine balance between lore and entertainment.

"We're going to emphasize participatory exhibits and draw heavily on audio-visual techniques," Wyant said. "But we don't want to overdo the show biz at the expense of tastefully presenting hall of famers and the history of the game."

Space is limited for depicting the 499 inductees. The current plan is to have all the names cut into panels of glass. No busts. No plaques.

Outside the room there will be equipment that will enable visitors to view pictures and biographical text on any of the members.

Outside of the Hall of Fame room is an arcade, called "The Strategy Room," where visitors can try their luck at footballoriented games of skill.

Junior tennis tourney slated

The Lincoln Junior Closed tennis tournament will begin Tuesday morning at Woods Park.

Play will begin at 9 a.m. for the boys 12 and under, boys 14 and under, girls 12 and under and girls 14 and under divisions. Play for the 16 and under and 18 and under divisions for both boys and girls will begin at 1 p.m.

Play will be both singles and doubles, with a limit of one singles and one doubles entry. If at least six entries are not received for a division, two divisions will be combined.

Players must bring a new can of U.S.T.A. balls and each match will be the best two out of three sets.

All entries and fees should be sent to tournament director John P. Riggs, 2740 Austin Drive, Lincoln, Neb., 68506, and must be received by Saturday. Entry blanks are available at Woods.

Pairings will be posted at Woods by 10 a.m. Monday.

Reds still have faith in their pitching

Cincinnati (UPI) — The two-time defending world champion Cincinnati Reds' lackluster pitching so far this season has placed hopes for a third straight title in jeopardy.

But the sometimes-maligned Reds' front office is keeping the faith.

"We just need two or three well-pitched ballgames and let the bullpen rest a bit to get our ship righted and go about our business," Reds' general manager Dick Wagner said Tuesday, refusing to panic.

"We've just come off a couple of tough series with Philadelphia and Los Angeles. We've made a lot of pitching changes and we're trying to do everything we can to win a division."

The acquisition of Tom Seaver is the most notable pitching change, but that's just a fraction of a 70 per cent turnover in staff from last year.

Gone from that world championship club are the likes of Don Gullett, Gary Nolan, Pat Zachry (co-rookie of the year) and Rawly Eastwick (Fireman of the Year).

Newcomers include Joe Hoerner, Joe Henderson, Dale Murray, Woodie Fryman, Doug Capilla and Paul Moskau.

Fans have been complaining that the current crop, despite the inclusion of Seaver, doesn't match up with last year's staff and they blame the front-office for making changes they figure were not for the better.

Wagner said he would have "no comment" about the changes or any possible changes he might like to see. He insisted the Reds' pitching has only hit a temporary low point.

"You're always going to get peaks and valleys," he said, repeating that "the primary thing we need now is a couple of well-pitched games from our starters and our situation will improve a great deal. I don't think this is a permanent thing.

"A couple of weeks ago we had some fine-pitched ballgames and we had three pretty well pitched games against LA. The last game against LA was a tough one and then we had a wild one against the Giants."

In the "tough one" against LA on Sunday, rookie Moskau was knocked out in the first inning as the Dodgers scored six runs enroute to a 9-3 win in an important game.

In the "wild one" against the Giants Monday night, the Reds blew an 8-1 lead and lost 14-9. Hoerner, a 40-year-old reliever who had yielded a grand-slam homer last week, hit two batters with the bases loaded and then gave up another grand-slammer to Willie McCovey. It was McCovey's second homer of the inning.

"It was an unusual occurrence," said Wagner, brushing aside Hoerner's wildness and home run balls. "He just had a tough time of it. One can't expect perfection every day."

The Reds' front office also has been criticized for sacrificing the promising Zachry for Seaver. Some fans figured the power-laden Reds would have been better off to give up a good hitter rather than a good pitcher.

"We had decided we wouldn't trade any of our regular eight," said Wagner. "We thought a lot of Zachry, but you can't get something for nothing. The Mets have gone more for the future and we've gone for now. We have every opportunity to repeat (as world champs).

"We're known as a hitting ballclub, but we've had good enough pitching to win. When you have fine hitters, you can score a lot of runs. Other teams may be built more on pitching than hitting, so you play according to the type of club you have."

Wagner figured the Reds have "several outstanding" pitchers in the minors who soon will be ready to help the club, but a couple brought up so far — Tom Hume and Moskau — have not helped.

Hume already has been shipped back to the minors and Moskau has been unimpressive in two starts.

"But Moskau's starts were against a couple of good clubs, Philadelphia and Los Angeles," noted Wagner. "We think he has the gumption and ability to come back and do well. We're not concerned about him at this point."

Cincinnati newspapers Tuesday berated the Reds' pitching as "horrible."

"I might agree for last night (giving the Giants 14 runs) but I won't agree for the whole staff or whole season," said Wagner. "One game doesn't make a season. We've got a fine ballclub. Our job is to win and we can do it."

The 'learning' process

When your youngster comes home from school and tells you guns are bad, hunting is bad, nuclear energy is good and there's nothing to worry about when it comes to saving the environment from pollution and urban sprawl, you know something is up.

It happens. Maybe not in Lincoln, but it happens. Some schools are leading youngsters to believe guns are bad, hunting is nothing more than ruthless killing of animals, nuclear energy is the salvation of our electrical power shortage.

The National Audubon Society recently uncovered the nuclear energy propaganda infiltrating the school systems. In its upcoming July issue of Audubon Magazine, the Society reports an educational game being distributed free to schools by the electric power industry is "little more than slick promotion for nuclear energy."

Called "The Energy Environment Game," the game, sponsored by the Edison Electric Institute in New York, brings with it the theme that "reasonable, responsible people are for more power plants, especially nuclear plants, while unreasonable, irresponsible people — conservationists and other 'oddballs' — are against all new power plants," according to Marvin Zeldin, author of the Audubon article.

The game sets up a fictional community with a new power plant. The children play the parts of the governor's commission, citizen's task force, utility executives and others who would be involved in real life public hearings on the issue.

32 roles in all

There are 32 roles in all, including lawyers, housewives, conservation leaders, et al. Roles cards indicate the parts students must play. The roles cards taint the image of the opposing forces, according to Zeldin.

To give students the idea conservationists oppose all power plant construction is "to libel serious, responsible and intelligent men and women who have raised legitimate questions about specific proposed power plants, about safety of nuclear power, and about lack of technology to store high-level radioactive wastes generated by nuclear power plants safely and permanently for the literally thousands of years some wastes will remain lethal," Zeldin writes.

Since 1974, at $15 per game, the Edison company has delivered some 5,050 of the games to schools, member utility companies and to companies not associated with the firm.

A check with the Lincoln school system indicated the game is not now in use in Lincoln but Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, felt the game sounds as if it would be a valuable game for students.

"I think it would be a valuable game to the students to show the workings of such a decision," Brandt said of the nuclear power game. "But to my knowledge, it is not now in use."

Selection process

Brandt indicated the selection process for such games as films is a judgment affair. "We have a group to review material and we have a set of criteria the material should meet. Our criteria is not specific in this area so we just have to use our own judgment.

"We have a lot of materials made available to use with one-sided outlooks but what we try to do is show the other view as well," Brandt said. "It shouldn't be our intention as a school district to sway a student's thinking on issues.

"If we bend over backwards in any instance, it would be in the protection of the environment," he said, pointing out the need to preserve along with the need for progress. "We try to show both sides and let the students make up their minds."

Mystery surrounds theft of mare in foal

Paris, Ky. (UPI) — The anxious vigil which began last Saturday continued Tuesday at Claiborne Farm in the lush Kentucky Bluegrass Country.

Tuesday marks the fourth day since thieves broke down a wooden fence and stole the 10-year-old thoroughbred mare, Fanfreluche, in foal to 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat.

And thus far, the reason for the theft is as much of a mystery as ever.

Both Seth Hancock, whose mother, Waddell, widow of the late A.B. Hancock, owns Claiborne Farm where the theft occurred late last Saturday, and spokesmen for the Levesque family of Toronto, Ont., owners of the mare, say they have received no ransom or extortion notes or calls.

"We haven't heard a thing — there have been no notes or telephone calls — nothing," Hancock said Tuesday. "I sure don't have any idea why anyone would want to take her — they can't do anything with her."

Agents of the FBI and Kentucky state police detectives still are stationed daily at the farm office.

Fanfreluche, which won $238,000 at the tracks during her racing career, is valued at $500,000, largely because she is carrying the Secretariat foal. Bred four months ago, she's due to foal sometime in January.

Spokesmen for the Levesque family said the mare had not been insured.

What puzzles thoroughbred industry spokesmen the most about the theft is that without registration papers, the thief cannot breed the mare again or race the foal.

And if forged papers are used, there is a good chance, thoroughbred racing being the closed circle it is, the deception would be uncovered.

And an even more foolproof system of bloodtesting will provide almost conclusive proof of a horse's parentage. David Foye, of the Jockey Club, the official thoroughbred registry, is launching the new blood testing procedure to prove a horse's parentage by matching blood types.

If the thieves are caught, they face a sentence of one to five years in prison, upon conviction, under Kentucky's new penal code.

WHA refused merger

Cleveland (UPI) — The World Hockey Association, which appears headed for absorption in the National Hockey League, once before turned down a merger agreement with "astoundingly good terms," it was reported Tuesday.

Joe Zingale, president of the Cleveland Nets of World Team Tennis and once a major investor of the former WHA Cleveland Crusaders, said the first overtures were spurned four years ago.

"Nick (Mileti, owner of the Crusaders) received a feeler from Bill Jennings, president of the New York Rangers, asking whether something couldn't be worked out between the two leagues," Zingale told the Cleveland Press.

They met with Jennings promptly at his home at Rye, N.Y., and before long there were "more meetings involving more people in both leagues," which led to "some very specific proposals for a merger," Zingale said.

"Frankly, I thought they were astoundingly good terms for the WHA," he added.

"In fact, because of that," he continued, "we insisted that the NHL owners agree to them first and then we would present them to the rest of the WHA owners. I figured that part would be easy.

Word came back that after a tough battle, the NHL owners had agreed, Zingale said. "We took the news to the rest of the WHA owners and to our total amazement, they turned it down flat.

"They reacted with something like, 'The hell with the NHL. We've got them on the run now. Who needs them?'," Zingale said.

Running called cruel way to be kind

New York (AP) — "You've got to be cruel to be kind," said the wiry little man with the crisp accent. "You've got to embarrass some people into taking care of themselves."

Arthur Lydiard, at age 60 running more than 100 miles a week, says there's no excuse for not being fit and that common sense in distance running can be anyone's guide to feeling good.

The man who coached Peter Snell to mile and half-mile world records in the 1960s has turned his attention to coaching coaches, trying to unteach what he considers dangerous theories about improving runners.

Subject to considerable scorn over the years, the small but powerful New Zealander remains adamant that the way to train as a runner — or for that matter, as a health-seeking jogger — is to move according to one's own pace, keeping at it, not racing oneself to the point of pain and exhaustion.

That is called aerobic conditioning and it operates according to the theory that if one runs long distances until he is out of breath, he steadily increases the amount of oxygen the respiratory system and heart can process.

The object is distance and stamina, not speed.

The opposite theory — anaerobic conditioning — concentrates on speed but requires the body to operate on a sort of oxygen debt that prevents the runner from covering great distance.

Obviously, sprinters are running anaerobically when they race but they should train by aerobic method, he says.

"To race well, you must train slowly, he said, pointing to John Walker, the New Zealander who won the gold medal in the 1,500 meters at last summer's Olympic Games.

Lydiard calls it "economic" conditioning. He also calls it common sense. And he says it is good for everyone, not only the athlete.

"You see, even slow running increases arterial capacity," he said. "The fellow who can run only a few hundred yards before tiring, then has to walk 10 minutes thinks he's not getting any real exercise and may decide to quit. But even that helps his heart to work more efficently.

"You can go too fast but you can never go too slowly to develop cardiac efficiency."

The author of two books on his ideas, Lydiard now works as a public relations representative for a New Zealand building supply company part of the year, then combines his vacation with unpaid leave to travel through Europe, the United States and Canada, talking to running coaches and cultivating promising young runners — many of them women.

"I started coaching women two years ago, even though some people told me I shouldn't. They reckoned girls couldn't do the training. I reckoned they could.

"Women look so beautiful running," he said emphatically and a little wistfully.

Currently Lydiard is touring the United States trying to promote what he considers more good sense, this time about feet.

All About Cooking Beef Outdoors

Whether a picnic in the park, a barbeque in the backyard or a cookout at a campsite, hearty take along foods are a part of summer time easy-living. The Beef Industry Council and Dr. Pepper have put togehter some new summer food ideas featuring outdoor beef cookery.

Here's one unusual idea I like. For the complete 32 page booklet look for more information in the stores where Dr. Pepper is sold or write to me, I'll be glad to forward your requests.

Grill Top Garden Pot-Roast

3-4 lb. beef blade
1 pkg (0.6oz.) Italian salad dressing mix
¼c flour
1 tsp salt
½ tsp paprika
⅛ tsp pepper
2 c thinly slice carrots
2 c sliced zuchini cut ¼" thick
½ tsp salt

Combine salad dressing mix, flour, 1 tsp salt, paprika and pepper. Use to thoroughly dredge meat on both sides. Place meat in center of a double thick rectangle of heavy duty foil. (Twice the circumference and 8 inches longer than roast.) Sprinkly any remaining flour mixture over meat. Seal all edges tightly, leaving a small air space. Place on grill and cook at low moderate temperature for 1½ hours, turning after 1 hour. Remove packet from grill, open carefully and add vegetables and ½ tsp. salt. Reclose foil, sealing securely. Place on grill (vegetable side up) and continue cooking 30-45 more mi tes or until meat and vegetables are done.

Skrupa continues firsts

Omaha (UPI) — Rosemary Skrupa, president of the Omaha Public Power District, has become the first woman ever elected to the board of directors of the American Public Power Association.

Mrs. Skrupa, an Omaha attorney, was elected to the OPPD board for a six-year term in November 1974. She was elected president by the board in January.

She is a native of Grand Island and was the first woman ever to serve on the OPPD board of directors and the district's first woman president.

The American Public Power Association is a national organization which represents more than 1,400 publicly owned utilities.

Nebraska Arts Council wins $215,000 grant

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky announced Tuesday that the National Endowment for the Arts has awarded a $215,000 grant to the Nebraska Arts Council.

He said through his Omaha office that the grant is a part of the federal-state partnership program and will be used for programs of the Nebraska Arts Council.

He also reported that he has been notified by the Economic Development Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce of the awarding of a $500,000 grant to Nebraska.

The grant, to the Office of Nebraska State Office of Planning and Programming, will help continue a program for long-range economic growth and new jobs in the state.

The state also will provide $16,667 to complete the project, which involves identification of development opportunities and areas of potential industrial expansion, he said.

Omaha baby dead in tub

Omaha (UPI) — A 1-year-old girl was found dead in the bottom of a bathtub in her mother's home, police said Tuesday.

The body of Carmen Ann Moser, daughter of Mary Moser of Omaha, was discovered by a babysitter, John Gomez, 17, of Omaha, police said. The mother was not home when the baby was found.

Lincolnite injured slightly in collision

A Lincoln man escaped serious injury in a car-train accident southwest of Lincoln.

Wallace A. Hansen, 33, of 7125 Dudley, was treated for cuts to the head at a local hospital and released.

Hansen was slowing his car for the tracks west of S.W. 56th and Pioneers Blvd., when he noticed a train nearing the crossing, he told sheriff's deputies.

He braked, and his car skidded along the gravel road and stopped on the tracks. The train, traveling about 30 miles and hour, smashed into the front end of the car, according to sheriff's office reports.

Fire guts garage

A fire that gutted John McArthur Jr.'s garage at 2068 S. 18th St. Tuesday evening may have been caused by a child, fire officials said. A child was seen leaving the alley garage shortly before the fire broke out, officials said, but it was not known whether the fire was set.

Wave of selling hits stocks

Dow Ind. -8.48

New York (AP) — Stock prices fell Tuesday in afternoon wave of selling blamed on a negative forecast for next year's federal budget deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 8.48 to 915.62, bringing its loss for the past two days to 13.98 points.

Losers held a 5-3 edge on gainers at the New York Stock Exchange.

For much of the day the market drifted around Monday's closing point.

But about two hours before the close sellers moved in following a news report quoting Bert Lance, President Carter's budget director, as saying the federal budget for the fiscal year starting next Oct. 1 could run as much as $65 billion.

Though Lance was also reported to have reaffirmed the administration's commitment to a balanced budget by fiscal 1981, the projected 1978 figure evidently did not sit well with investors.

Brokers pointed out that the market also had to contend with some analysts' projections that the growth rate of the economy might turn sluggish later this year and in 1978.

Chemical stocks were a particular weak spot after an analyst quoted in the Wall Street Journal estimated flat or lower earnings next year for 10 of the 11 companies he follows in the industry.

Du Pont dropped 1½ to 115¾ as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE, and Union Carbide fell 1⅜ to 49¼. Both stocks are included in the Dow average.

Allied Chemical, the one company for which the analyst foresaw a 1978 earnings gain, rose ⅜ to 50¼.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials slumped 1.00 to 110.34, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was off .84 at 100.14.

British Petroleum, the day's most active issue, lost ⅛ to 16⅛. The stock has been heavily traded for the past several days as the British government has conducted an offering of BP stock, attracting a strong response.

Simplicity Pattern, second on the active list, slipped ⅛ to 13½ in trading that included blocks of 195,100 and 108,600 shares at that price.

Rockwell International climbed 1¾ to 37. The House rejected a proposal to drop from a pending defense appropriations bill some $1.5 billion for continued production of Rockwell's B1 bomber.

Portec, which projected flat quarterly earnings despite a substantial sales increase, lost 1¼ to 22⅜.

The NYSE's composite index fell .40 to 54.94.

Gasohol emits less carbon monoxide

United Press International

A federal energy laboratory in Oklahoma has released data showing that a car using gasohol, a grain alcohol motor fuel blend, emits less carbon monoxide than a vehicle operating on unleaded gasoline.

Dr. William Scheller, technical adviser to the Nebraska Gasohol Committee, says he was not surprised by the test results.

The federally funded tests were conducted by the Bartlesville, Okla., energy research center, which is run by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration.

The Bartlesville test compared "the exhaust gases for cars using gasohol fuel and unleaded fuel," the University of Nebraska-Lincoln chemical engineering professor said.

Scheller said the tests were conducted for the Gasohol (or Nebraska Agriculture Products Industrial Utilization) Committee as part of the group's two-million mile road test.

The pollutant tests showed that the gasohol car emitted less carbon monoxide and less unburned hydrocarbons than the car with unleaded fuel, Scheller said. But, he said, unleaded gasoline gave off slightly less nitrogenoxides than gasohol.

$3.2 million NETV budget OKd

A $3.2 million budget received a Nebraska Educational Television Commission approval Tuesday at its monthly meeting.

The budget will include only state government funds and not funds available from other government or private grants.

The budget stipulated only 3% salary increases, the result of legislative cuts on NETV's preliminary budget.

NETV's budget appeals have met with little success.

The board also accepted about $64,500 in bids for NETV construction throughout the state.

The largest of the bids was for $44,991 to build a tower in Falls City.

Farmers may pay more for grain storage

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Farmers who intend to store their 1977 grain at their local elevator had better ask about the new storage rates because, in some cases, the rates will be sharply higher than last year.

The Nebraska Public Service commission has increased the maximum rate that a licensed elevator can charge for storing all grains to 95/1,000th of a cent per bushel per day. Soybeans can be charged up to 115/1,000th of a cent per bushel per day.

This means that the cost of storing a thousand bushels of grain in a commercial elevator for an average 30-day month would be $2.85, and for soybeans $3.45.

The old maximum rate was $1.65 for oats, $2.25 for wheat, $1.95 for corn and grain sorghum and $2.25 for soybeans on a 1,000-bushel basis.

In actual practice, few if any elevators charge the maximum fee.

"The highest fee I know of in the state is 80/1,000th of a cent per bushel per day. This is in a federal warehouse that the state can't control anyway," said Eric Rasmussen, a commission member.

Rasmussen said he opposed the increase at this time because of low grain prices to the farmer. "I know there have been increased costs at elevators. I served on an elevator board for several years, but with current grain prices this will be hard on farmers," he said.

Elevators must announce on July 1 their rate for the next year. They must notify the Public Service Commission of the rate, must charge all farmers the same rate and cannot increase the rate for grain already under an existing warehouse receipt.

An existing warehouse receipt for grain can be cancelled by the elevator only after seeking and obtaining approval from the commission.

"I think this could force farmers to sell their grain rather than store it. It could cost up to 34 cents a bushel to store grain for a year. That eats up the grain pretty fast," Rasmussen said.

Rasmussen also said increased storage rates could stimulate a mass move by farmers to build storage on their farms.

"We already see some large farmers shipping grain direct to terminal elevators or to markets even outside of the state. This bypasses the local elevator entirely," he said.

Protection to streams expanded

When phase III of the Army Corps of Engineer's 404 Program goes into effect July 1, a permit must be obtained to dam Nebraska streams with waterflows of more than five cubic feet per second, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension water resources specialist Deon Axthelm said.

He added that a permit also is required if foreign material such as rip-rap or extra fill is added or dredging is done in a Nebraska stream.

Mike Jess of the Nebraska Department of Water Resources said that in some cases where his office's jurisdiction overlaps that of the corps', two permits will have to be obtained — one from the state and one from the federal government.

Phase III is part of a program designed to protect waters and wetland. Besides streams, Phase III affects rivers, marshes and wetlands. Phase I began in 1975 and affected coastal waters, major rivers and nearby wetlands. Phase II extended the proclamation farther to include tributaries to major rivers, like the Platte, Elkhorn and Niobrara, and nearby wetlands and lakes of more than five surface acres. With Phase III including the smaller streams, its influence is extended further.

The phases are part of the 404 program that Axthelm described as "part of a massive U.S. effort to improve water quality."

Program 404 refers to Section 404 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972.

The corps said that in cases where work already is in progress in waters under the Phase III restrictions, corps engineers will determine whether "it is in the public interest to stop the work or allow it to continue while the permit application is being processed."

Axthelm said that while he saw no major problems in supervising Phase III, the delay in obtaining permission to begin work on water-related projects may pose a very serious problem to Nebraska farmers and anyone dealing with water projects.

A spokesman for the corps said that processing time on a non-controversial permit request is usually 120-150 days. Controversial requests, those questioned by other parties, usually take longer. He added that time on even non-controversial acts may increase due to the number of applications.

Increase seen in wheat's use in cattle feed

Limited storage space and relatively low prices probably will result in more wheat being used as livestock feed this year, according to Dr. Paul Q. Guyer, Extension livestock specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

He said producers could save money by using wheat in their rations which would have a nutritive value equal to or as much as 15% greater per bushel than corn.

He said livestock feeders should check discounts on low-grade or high-moisture wheats as well as regular wheat prices because they may be equal if feeding value per unit of dry matter.

But Guyer warned that much of the wheat likely to be used in beef and hog rations will be stored outside, for which know-how is lacking.

When storing wheat outside, Guyer said, producers should:

—Store it on a well-drained base crowned in the center to avoid hot spots that develop from entrapped moisture.

—Store wheat in long narrow piles about 10 to 12 feet high with uniform peaks to prevent formation of valleys that tend to collect runoff and cause hot spots.

New Omaha storm radar begins tracking Friday

Omaha (AP) — The National Weather Service said Tuesday a new storm warning radar will be placed into operation at the Omaha forecast office Friday.

To Nebraskans, according to Charles Knudsen, director of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, this will facilitate earlier and more reliable detection and tracking of severe thunderstorms, tornadoes and flood producing rains.

The new radar, a modern solid state type, replaces the obsolete World War II surplus radar which has been in use at the Omaha office since August of 1955.

Meteorologist Jim Zoller, in charge of the Omaha Weather Service forecast office, said the warning radar is a welcome replacement because the old radar was becoming increasingly unreliable.

Some vital replacement parts, he said, were having to be expensively handcrafted.

Zoller said that though radar is just one of the main weather observation methods, it is very important in the early detection and monitoring of dangerous weather such as severe thunderstorms, tornadoes and flood-producing rains.

Demott appointed

Des Moines (UPI) — The Iowa Board of Regents announced the appointment of Dr. Richard M. Demott as superintendent of the Iowa Braille and Sight Saving School in Vinton.

Is LOW PRICE the MAIN MEASURE OF A PRESCRIPTION SERVICE?
It's important, of course, but so is the other word up there . . . service. It means a Pharmacist interested in you; it means convenient hours; compounding, if necessary; complete stocks (including fine quality generics), so you get your prescription promptly. All that . . . plus savings . . . is what makes your Walgreen Pharmacist so proud to welcome you!

Omahan testifies to 'hit' agreement

Omaha (AP) — A man granted immunity from prosecution testified Tuesday that C. Michael Anderson suggested to him and Peter Hochstein that "something had to be done" about Omaha real estate man Ronald Abboud.

In a preliminary hearing on first degree murder charges against Anderson, 25, and Hochstein, 23, Lon Reams, about 27, said he and the other two worked out details of the slaying of Abboud.

On Oct. 29, Reams said, Hochstein called him and said "it was done."

Abboud's body was found in October, 1975, in a field outside Omaha. Anderson is charged with hiring Hochstein to kill Abboud.

Reams testified that Anderson, an employe of Abboud's Commercial Realty Co. at the time, had been complaining bitterly about low pay and business problems.

Anderson told Reams that Abboud was stealing from his clients and that Commerical Realty didn't keep its word on paying various clients, Reams testified.

Reams said that in early October, he, Anderson and Hochstein met at an Omaha pizza parlor and one of the two said, "somebody should get rid of Ron Abboud.

At a later meeting at Ream's house, Reams said, it was suggested that Abboud be "hit."

Reams said, "The biggest problem was getting Abboud alone. Anderson said, 'We got to get him in a place away from people.' "

He said the three discussed various way of killing — knife, rifle, pistol and explosives — before agreeing on a .22 caliber automatic pistol of Ream's, and inspected some rural Douglas County land where Abboud's body was found later.

"Hochstein would do it," Reams said. "He brought up a $1,500 figure."

Reams said he and Anderson agreed to borrow the money from a corporation the two had founded to pay Hochstein.

Reams testified that they planned for Hochstein to call Abboud and arrange to be shown the rural property on Oct. 29.

He said that at 3:30 p.m. that day, Hochstein called and said "it was done.

Another man, Charles Paige, 25, has been charged with being an accessory after the fact.

Policeman wounded; Omahan charged

Omaha (UPI) — John E. McArthur, 29, of Omaha, was charged Tuesday with shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim in the wounding of an Omaha police officer earlier in the day.

McArther told police he thought he was shooting at a prowler when he fired three shots out a window of his home Tuesday morning shortly after midnight.

Officer Wesley Courtwright was struck in the left leg by a single bullet. The wound was not serious and Courtwright was listed in good condition Tuesday at an Omaha hospital.

Police had been called to the residence after a man allegedly displayed a rifle during an argument over the way cars were parked in the alley, a police department spokesman said.

McArthur walked out of the front door of the house unarmed shortly after the shooting and told police he thought he had shot a prowler.

Police confiscated a .22 caliber automatic rifle with a telescopic sight inside the house.

Police said they fired no shots during the incident.

Priest teaches skills of circus

Omaha (AP) — A priest who juggles and walks a tightrope is teaching circus feats to college students and other priests in a church basement.

The Rev. Nick Weber, a Jesuit who also swallows swords and walks on knives, is teaching Creighton University students in a course called, "Circus: Skills and Perspectives." Their "big top" is the basement of St. John Church.

Two of the class members are Jesuits and another is the mother of a Creighton under-graduate.

The curriculum includes learning to walk a knee-high rope stretched between building support posts. Other lessons deal with clowning, juggling, makeup and magic.

Circus was a "childhood passion" for Father Weber, who has masters degrees in theology and theater.

Father Weber and two partners, working out of Santa Clara University, travel 32 weeks a year, performing circus stunts at shopping centers and schools.

The priest believes Americans are "starved for images" and suffer from overexposure to television and the pictoral aats.

One of his favorites is the "stark image" of a circus performer dancing on a high wire as if to say, " 'it is important to dance and play at any cost.' That offers real meditation on what life is about," Father Weber said.

Jailer says statement made

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — Two days after York policeman James M. Richardson II was shot and killed, a crying Ricky A. Johnson made a statement to his jailer, the jailer testified Tuesday.

The final witness in Johnson's trial, Hamilton County Deputy Sheriff Dale E. Radcliff said Johnson summoned him to the 17-year-old's cell the evening of April 24.

The youth, who is charged with first degree murder, has been held in Aurora since his arrest.

The jailer said Johnson began talking as he approached the cell. Radcliff said he advised Johnson of a portion of his rights against self-incrimination.

Radcliff said Johnson, with tears in his eyes, told the deputy: "I just wanted him to leave — I didn't want to shoot him."

Then, Radcliff testified, "I asked him (Johnson) what he did and he said, 'I just ran.' "

Radcliff was called to the witness stand by Deputy County Atty. Vince Balentino after defense attorney John Brogan rested his case.

Radcliff was called as a rebuttal witness and Brogan objected to the deputy testifying.

Following an hour of discussion outside the jury's presence, District Court Judge William Norton allowed Radcliff to read part of a memorandum the jailer made about two days after his conversation with Johnson.

Radcliff said he did not take a written statement from the youth on April 24 and that Johnson talked voluntarily.

Radcliff also said he kept the statement to himself, giving it to York authorities about a week ago.

Brogan asked why Radcliff decided then to turn over his recollection of the conversation. The deputy replied, "I figured I better let someone know what he told me."

Monday afternoon, while testifying in his own defense, Johnson was asked by the prosecution whether he recalled making such the comment to Radcliff. Johnson said he didn't recall that.

Brogan rested the defense case shortly after lunch, having called two witnesses who testified that Johnson had a reputation of nonviolence.

Also testifying was Lincoln surveyor Dennis Simonds, who prepared a survey diagram of the Arbor Drive Baptist Church and grounds. The church, across the street from Johnson's residence, is where Richardson's body was found.

On the drawing, Simonds had drawn a "line of sight" marking to show the portion of the church's front lawn that Johnson might have been able to see the night the policeman was killed.

The defense has said that the youth was near the rear of the church building and unable to see the policeman until after he had been shot.

Over a prosecution objection that the drawing was "unduly suggestive and prejudicial," Judge Norton admitted the diagram into evidence.

Earlier in the day, the jury was taken to the scene of the shooting. Accompanied only by bailiff Lewis Ekart, the jury was out of the courtroom about 35 minutes. Attorneys and the judge remained behind.

Final arguments by both defense and prosecuation are scheduled to begin Wednesday morning.

The jury is then expected to begin deliberations. Norton told the jurors to bring additional clothes with them should they have to remain overnight.

Peru head seeks endorsement

Douglas Pearson
. . . to stay or leave?

Peru — The president of Peru State College, Dr. Douglas Pearson, has asked faculty members and administration for a vote of confidence.

In a specially called noon meeting Monday, Pearson asked the more than 50 faculty members attending to vote by secret ballot on whether he should "stay" or "leave" as president of the college.

If the "leave" votes won, Pearson told the faculty he would give his resignation to the State College Board of Trustees, according to several faculty members at the meeting.

Neither Pearson, nor faculty members who counted the ballots could be reached for comment Tuesday. The balloting outcome or any decision by Pearson on his job as head of the college have not been announced. An announcement is expected Wednesday or Thursday.

Some faculty members and students have criticized Pearson's actions on several dismissals, including the suspension and later reinstatement of wrestling coach Jack Scammahorn.

A Feb. 6 argument between wrestler Mark Yori and Scammahorn led to misdemeanor assault charges being filed against the coach. A county court guilty verdict was overturned by the district court.

Some faculty members have also complained of communication problems between the president and the faculty and have criticized Pearson's "vindictiveness" in personal issues.

Notices about the 12:30 p.m. Monday faculty meeting were put in faculty mailboxes Monday morning, according to several faculty members.

At the half-hour meeting Pearson outlined several achievements at Peru during his three years as president including raising faculty salaries, getting state tax money for a new gymnasium and better relations with the faculty, according to several at the meeting.

Pearson also said a State College Board of Trustees public relations report, discussed privately by the trustees after their Friday morning meeting, showed that there might be a conflict between the president and the professional staff. He asked the faculty if this report was true.

According to some at the meeting, faculty members were asked to sit three seats apart so they wouldn't talk while filling out the secret ballots on the vote of confidence.

Pearson, 37, was inaugurated as Peru's 20th and youngest president April 27, 1974. He earned degrees at the University of Nebraska and George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.

Peru, a 107-year-old campus with more than 700 students last spring, has been plagued by declining student enrollments and thus faculty and staff cutbacks in recent years.

Hungry Canadian still eating in jail

Robert Morrison, the 34-year-old Canadian who broke windows in downtown Lincoln to attract attention and get a free meal in jail, is still eating jail food.

Morrison, released from a Canadian prison earlier this month, appeared in Lancaster County Court Tuesday on charges of destruction of property and was ordered to appear July 5 for a preliminary hearing. He is also being held for Canadian officials on a charge of parole violation, according to local authorities.

Police said that Morrison threw four wooden street barricades through the windows of two downtown stores before he was arrested several weeks ago.

New airport fire station set

Washington — A new fire station will be built at the Lincoln Municipal Airport aided by a federal grant announced Tuesday by Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb.

A grant of $491,975 from the Federal Aviation Administration was reported by Thone. He said that a multiyear project has been approved by the FAA which would ultimately mean $851,899 for the project.

The project will include construction of a new building to house fire and snow removal equipment. The work also will involve the installation of security equipment.

Landlord bound over for trial

A Lincoln landlord who allegedly shot a tenant in the foot following a name-calling exchange has been bound over to Lancaster County District Court to stand trial for shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim.

County Judge Robert Camp ordered Michael P. Kane, 35, of 916 S. 29th, bound over to the higher court Tuesday. He is charged with shooting David Nicholson, 17, in the foot during the May 18 incident near his home.

Arraignment in the higher court has been set for July 15.

Lincoln No. 11 on sewage list

By Lynn Zerschling
Starr Staff Writer

The city of Lincoln remains 11th on the state Department of Environemntal Control's (DEC) list of cities which need federal and state money to build sewage treatment plants.

Last week the citizen Environmental Control Council left Lincoln in 11th place and left Omaha in first in a priority listing of cities which are seeking federal funds for sewage treatment plant construction.

The council, which met in Kearney, only made a few changes in the listing of some 150 towns which requested money to meet water quality requirements, reported George Ludwig, DEC grants administrator.

Ludwig said he expects the Environmental Protection Agency to approve the list.

The state needs $240 million to clean up sewage emptying into rivers and streams. However, all that Nebraska environmental officials expect to get is $27 million.

Last year Congress appropriated $38.5 million for sewage plant construction, Ludwig said. Although the amount of money expected for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is $11.5 million less, Ludwig said the money would be enough to "keep the programs going."

Under the funding formula, EPA pays for 75% of the treatment facility's cost, the state pays another 12½% and the local government pays the remaining 12½%.

The priority list approved by the Environmental Control Council ranks Omaha first, followed by South Sioux City, Alma, Beatrice, Cozad, Hastings, Scottsbluff, Falls City, Fort Calhoun, Gering and Lincoln.

Omaha is under federal pressure to get its Missouri River treatment plant operating properly. Omaha wants $8.7 million in federal funds for the river treatment plant, which is estimated to cost $11.7 million.

South Sioux City needs money to increase its capacity to pump sewage through lines across the Missouri River to a treatment plant in Sioux City, Ia. South Sioux City doesn't have a treatment plant of its own. The town wants $15,000 in federal funds to help pay for the $20,000 project.

Scottsbluff has applied for $390,000 in federal money to create a system to spray treated sewage wastes applied on croplands through irrigation systems. Estimated total cost of that project is $520,000.

Lincoln is applying for $9 million in federal funds to help build the Northeast Sewage treatment plant, estimated to cost $12 million.

Several other communities in Lancaster County are ranked farther down the list.

Firth, in the 28th position, is seeking $6,000 to pay for initial planning, while Hickman, in the 30th slot, is seeking $375,000 in federal funds to build a treatment plant. Sprague, listed in the 51st position, would like $9,000 in federal funds to pay engineers to design a plant.

General fund expected to be in black Thursday

The state's general fund will contain somewhere between $1 million and $4 million when the fiscal year ends Thursday, Revenue Department officials say.

Assistant Tax Commissioner Gary Chunka and state Accountant George Shute said the final figure will depend on receipts in the final two days of the fiscal year.

The highest end of the year balance was $63.9 million in 1974. In 1976, the balance was $1.8 million. Although this year's final figure could be lower than in 1976, Shute and Chunka said the state financial picture is better.

In 1976, tax refunds and various aid payments were frequently delayed to maintain the cash to meet payrolls and pay mandatory bills. Shute said that has not been done this year.

Unlike last year, the state has not borrowed from its separate revenue sharing and construction accounts to supplement the general fund, Shute said.

Shute said he was not always so confident that the yearend balance would be in the black.

Trucker claims Coors not stolen

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

A Lincoln truck driver denied Tuesday that he stole 279 cases of Coors beer from an interstate shipment last July and sold them in Lincoln.

Clifford Pulec told a U.S. District Court jury that he and his brother Bob did sell about 140 cases of Coors in the parking lot of the Moose Lodge at that time. But he said it was beer that they had bought with their own money while driving a truck in neighboring states.

The Pulec brothers are on trial for stealing beer that was en route from Oklahoma City to New Jersey on a truck they were driving.

Clifford Pulec said some of the beer was "skunkie" or bad because it had been cold, then warm several times. The brothers were on their way to the city dump to dispose of the bad beer when they decided to try to sell it at the Moose Lodge where Clifford was a member, he said.

"So you sold about 60 cases of skunkie Coors beer to your friends at the Moose Lodge?" Asst. U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Bogue asked Pulec.

"If they wanted to buy it, yes," Pulec replied.

The brothers then sold about 80 cases of good Coors beer, he said. The beer had been stored in Clifford Pulec's garage.

Pulec also said that shortly before they left the warehouse in Oklahoma City, a worker told the shipper the load was about 300 cases short. About 10 minutes later, the worker came back and said the remaining cases had been loaded.

Pulec said he did not watch the beer being loaded.

Bogue asked if it did not seem strange that so much beer could be loaded in so short of time.

Pulec replied that it did, but added, "it wasn't my beer."

The case is expected to go to the jury for deliberation on Wednesday.

Court upholds award

Carter Lake, Iowa, (AP) — The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a $234,756 award to the widow of a man who was electrocuted in 1972 when a crane he was guiding touched a high voltage wire.

A lower court had found the Owen Equipment and Erection Co. of Carter Lake negligent in the death of James D. Kroger and ordered the firm to pay his widow, Geraldine, the money.

In upholding the lower court's decision, the appeals court decided to disregard rules that prevent a federal court from hearing cases in which the defendant and plaintiff are residents of the same state.

The appeals court criticized the company attorney's tactic of waiting until the Iowa statute of limitations had run out before revealing that Owen Equipment, originally listed in the suit as a Nebraska company, actually was from Iowa, where Mrs. Kroger lived.

New bridge OKd for Old Cheney

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The Lancaster County Board finally made it over a bridge Tuesday which has been barricaded for many months.

It gave unanimous approval to a $225,000 two-lane span over Salt Creek on Old Cheney Road, a bridge which has been the subject of an ongoing dispute between County Engineer Marv Nuernberger and Commissioners Jan Gauger and Bruce Hamilton.

Commissioner Bob Colin has consistently supported replacing the bridge, which Hamilton and Gauger have opposed because it appeared to be in conflict with the Comprehensive Plan.

With a broad grin, Colin seconded Hamilton's motion for approval, noting "I've been voting for this for two years."

Hamilton said he had changed his mind about the issue after meeting with Railroad Transportation Safety District Director John Longsdorf, U.S. Highway Department engineer Ray Hogrefe and Nuernberger.

Those officials convinced Hamilton that a four-lane overpass on Old Cheney Road in Wilderness Park is of "very low priority," he said.

The present bridge has been closed since January.

In other action, the board approved a resolution transferring County Welfare Department employes to the state pay plan.

Since 1974, all Lancaster County welfare workers have been on a special pay scale which is not part of the county pay plan yet is not comparable to the pay scale of State Welfare Department employes.

A recent state law allows the change, which will be "much more equitable," according to Welfare Director Jerry Lemonds.

County and state employes doing the same job will get the same pay, he said. About 98% of the county department's budget is paid by the state, so there will be virtually no fiscal impact on the county.

The board deferred action on an application by South Dale Acres subdivision for county maintenance of a section of S. 60th St. Nuernberger opposed the request because he said only one resident will benefit from the road, which developers estimate will cost the county $280 per year to keep up.

While three houses have been built along the section of street, about 600 feet long, only one has a driveway onto 60th, Nuernberger said.

Nuernberger plans to introduce a revision in the county subdivision resolution requiring individual roads rather than entire subdivisions to have a minimum population density before the county will maintain them.

He also wants to require developers to pay his department to lay initial rock and gravel on a road rather than doing it on their own.

This way, Nuernberger will be sure the job has been done properly before assuming maintenance, he said.

The board did approve county maintenance of roads in another subdivision, Tower Acres, at 52nd and Yankee Hill Road, even though an access road to the development does not meet county requirements of a 60-foot right-of-way.

The developers told the board and the city-county planning commissioner that they were unable to purchase the required right-of-way. Planning Director Doug Brogden concurred in the approval.

After a short public hearing in which nobody spoke in opposition, the board approved Sunday on- and off-sale beer sales at Lee's Restaurant, Coddington and West Van Dorn. The restaurant will be permitted to serve beer from noon to 9 p.m.

County buys time by approving lease

By approving a one-year lease for the Community Mental Health Center, the county board Tuesday bought itself some time.

There is now less urgency to decide whether to sell the Health and Welfare Bldg. at 2200 St. Mary's Ave. to Lincoln General Hospital.

In May, board Chairman Bruce Hamilton told the City Council that a decision had to be made soon because the Mental Health Center's lease was running out.

A study by Geller Design, a consulting firm has determined that there is sufficient room in the building to house the Mental Health Center and the Health Department if welfare offices move out.

Commissioners first thought that there might be time to move welfare out and mental health in before the July 1 deadline for renewing the Mental Health Center's lease on expensive downtown quarters.

If the building were sold to Lincoln General, welfare could move out but it would preclude mental health's moving in.

Another factor affecting the possible sale of the building, which Lincoln General wants to use for physicians' offices, is the inability of the Health Department to find suitable quarters elsewhere.

Lincoln General Administrator Robert Brungard has agreed that the Health Department would not have to leave immediately if the building is sold, but only when the hospital needs the additional space.

The Mental Health Center's one-year lease will cost the county $2,839 per month for 6,491 square feet at 134 S. 13th St.

The lease can be broken at 90 days' notice, however, should the move eventually take place.

It would cost about $117,924 to remodel the basement and first floor of the 2200 St. Mary's building for the Mental Health Center, and an additional $30,118 to expand Health Department facilities, the consultants determined.

The county is going ahead with plans to move welfare soon as rented space can be found.

The commissioners now have time to carefully weigh the financial advantages of selling the building vs. keeping it. Brungard has indicated a definite willingness to buy.

Board pares budget for Lancaster Manor

The budget request for Lancaster Manor for the next fiscal year is down about 4% from the present year, but county commissioners want to cut it still more.

Tuesday the board reviewed the manor's $3,111,134 budget request and $597,525 for running the power plant and maintenance of the nursing home and surrounding buildings.

Chairman Bruce Hamilton commended manor Director Garrett Williams for keeping projected expenditures down.

The board then proceeded to cut $3,767 from the manor's request for $17,123 for conferences, travel and transportation.

A large part of the transportation expense is for maintenance and leasing of vehicles to transport manor residents around Lincoln, expenses which Williams urged the board not to cut.

Commissioners questioned $750 to purchase 50 large paintings for the manor's hallways. "Where could you buy 50 paintings at that price?" Hamilton asked.

Williams replied that he thought the manor was getting a special deal. The board left them in the budget at present, but warned Williams that they might be omitted later.

The amount budgeted for maintenance of manor equipment is $7,745 — nearly double the current year. Because of unexpected repairs, this item may prove too low, Williams said.

Utility costs for the power plant are estimated to jump 26%, to $260,614, due to higher fuel bills. Williams plans to meet with city-county Building Administrator Don Porter to compare conservation measures. Porter saved over $100,000 through utilities conservation in the County-City Building last year.

The power plant fund covers heating, cooling and maintenance of the manor, Trabert Hall at 2202 S. 11th, the Juvenile Attention Center at 2148 S. 10th, the Mental Health Center's Community Living Program facility at 2145 S. 13th, and three Youth Service System group homes.

Solar energy grant awarded

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Plattsmouth — Gary Benedict has found that persistence pays. At least when dealing with the federal government.

In October 1975, the housing developer first applied to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for a grant to do work with solar energy.

He'd long been interested in solar power, studying it on his own, and considered it the energy alternative for the future.

Benedict didn't get the grant, though. But he didn't give up.

The president of Quadro Inc., prepared a second application for a solar grant, only to find that he had missed the deadline for its submission.

But Quadro now has been notified that a third application was successful. The company is to receive a $89,859 grant to install solar heating equipment in three duplex townhouses Benedict will begin building this summer.

"Persistence works, I guess," laughed Benedict.

He said that in the first two sets of solar grants given by HUD, the Midwest did poorly. This time, however, "we scored high. They got grants in Kansas City, Lincoln, Callaway, Glenwood, Iowa, and ours is in the top 20% dollarwise in the nation."

When HUD rejected Benedict's first application, he took matters into his own hands. He designed and built a house near Plattsmouth that has a supplemental solar system costing just $750.

The house is now one of Quadro's model homes and Benedict said prospective buyers have shown great interest in it.

The HUD grant will be used to install complete solar systems in the duplexes. The grant money will purchase nearly $15,000 of equipment for each housing unit, including 25 solar collectors in the roof.

Because of the severity of Nebraska winters, Benedict said, the solar units will be backed up by conventional heating systems. However, the solar units should provide heat for the houses as well as hot water.

Because the grants will purchase the solar equipment, Benedict said the townhouses will sell for about $12,000 less than their worth.

The only major requirement HUD asked when giving Quadro the grant, Benedict said, was that the agency be allowed to monitor the homes for five years as part of its studies on solar power.

Wiese land 'unavailable'

Grand Island (AP) — Vermoyne Wiese, the owner of an 80-acre tract of land sought by Hall County for a landfill site told the board Tuesday he doesn't want to sell.

Wiese said the board had not offered him the fair market value for the land and contended that a move by the county to acquire it under eminent domain would show the county is "reckless with authority."

Ex-Nebraskan given grant

Bowling Green, Ky. — Ms. Gayle Waggoner, a native of Norfolk, Neb., is the first full-time student at Western Kentucky University to be named a Fulbright-Hays Scholar.

A master's degree candidate in folk studies, Ms. Waggoner has been given a grant to study in Brazil for approximately one year, beginning in September. Her project will be a multi-disciplinary analysis of a traditional hammock weaver.

Proposed budget up 11.6%

Grand Island (AP) — The Central Technical Community College board has given tentative approval to a fiscal 1977-78 budget proposal that would include more than $7 million for operations. The figure is an 11.6% increase over the current operations budget.

Home agent resigning

Trenton — Marilee Karlberg, southwest area home Extension agent since September 1974, will resign Aug. 20 to enter graduate school at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

A native of Sumner, she has received an assistantship in the Department of Education and Family Resources of the College of Home Economics and will pursue a master's degree.

Contract approved

Omaha (AP) — Local 538 of the Cementer Finishers Union has approved a three-year contract which calls for a 6.9% increase in wages and fringe benefits this year. The union accepted the offer of the Heavy Contractors Association, said Duane Martin, business representative.

Alliance school budget up

Alliance (AP) — The Alliance Board of Education has approved a $2,358,000 budget for the 1977-78 school year, an increase of $189,000 over the previous budget.

The 8.7% increase could change slightly, depending on whether the Board of Education or the Alliance Education Association wins in negotiations for a new teachers' contract.

Nursing dean named

Omaha (AP) — Sister Rosalie Sitzmann will become the new nursing dean at Creighton University Aug. 1, succeeding Sheila A. Ryan, who resigned to enter a doctoral program at the University of Arizona.

Sister Rosalie has been on the faculty of South Dakota State University since 1970.

Housing plan protested

Bellevue (AP) — A developer's plan to expand a federally subsidized housing project by 48 units drew 100 protesters to a City Council meeting here.

The protesters said doors and screens are off many apartments, garbage is thrown into the streets and the pavement is crumbling. Omaha developer Ted Selding has asked the council to give zoning approval to the addition to the Southwoods Addition built several years ago.

Big area darkened

Omaha (UPI) — A car knocked down a utility pole Monday night, leaving a 340-block area of North Omaha without electricity for about an hour.

A witness told police a car was towing another car when the second vehicle broke loose, rolled down a hill and struck the pole.

Judge rules principal must be given hearing

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — The Diller School Board had no right to fire Principal Clarence Rost without a hearing, according to a court decision handed down here Tuesday.

Jefferson County District Court Judge William Rist found instead that an April 13 contract offered Rost is "valid and enforceable" despite a unanimous board decision 19 days later to cancel it. Since the 1977-78 contract called for a hearing prior to any termination, the judge said the firing was "without due process."

Rist's granting of a permanent injunction, a follow-up to a temporary restraining order issued earlier this month, caps several weeks of bitter controversy in the Jefferson County village of 290. Even now, things are far from settled.

Scheduled July 14 is a recall election which seeks to oust all six school board members for their reversal stands against Rost. Circulators of the recall petitions claim he has the backing of a large majority of residents.

It is also conceivable that the principal, 36, might still have to defend himself against charges of unprofessional conduct and insubordination, if the board decides to hold a hearing for that purpose. Judge Rist emphasized that the court case was completely separate from the board's allegations toward Rost.

In arguments Tuesday, board attorney Ralph Fischer of Beatrice suggested the allegations stemmed from actions by Rost after he was offered the April contract. The attorney noted that Rost did not request a hearing, but the judge said this was "the burden of the board."

Testifying briefly, Rost said he had signed the contract and turned it over to the board at the May 2 meeting prior to the vote of dismissal. He was the only witness Tuesday, since evidence from the June 1 restraining order hearing was admitted by stipulation. Rost was represented by attorney Richard Wood of Lincoln.

One of the main charges against Rost, according to a school board letter circulating in the community, was his alleged Lexington arrest last September for driving while intoxicated. Five other reasons were set forth, including an alleged incident of making "derogatory comments, false accusations and disparaging remarks" on April 29 to J.D. Lofing, school board president.

Contract required before board can contribute to health center

Hastings (AP) — The Adams County Board may not contribute to the 10-county South Central Community Mental Health Center unless a contract is approved between South Central and the 22-county regional governing board. At stake is $16,800.

The contract would formalize the agreement between South Central and the governing board to administer services.

Jim Kennedy, Hastings office manager, told the county board Tuesday that if Adams County pulled out, services and staff would have to be cut back.

He said it also could possibly contribute to having other counties pull out, which would end mental health services in south central Nebraska.

Omaha School District officials propose budget of $85.5 million

Omaha (AP) — Omaha School District officials have proposed a 1977-78 budget of nearly $85.5 million, 8.3% higher than the current budget.

The $85,479,587 budget proposed is an increase of $6,498,200.

The biggest increases would be $3.8 million for salaries and $2 million for handicapped education.

The proposed salary increase would have been $5.5 million had there not been a reduction in the number of teachers and supervisors needed because there will be fewer students next year.

Pillsbury reports record earnings

Minneapolis (AP) — Pillsbury Co. reported that it had record sales and earnings in the fourth quarter and full year ended May 31.

It was the sixth consecutive year of record earnings for the diversified food-products firm. Over that period, earnings have grown at an annaul rate of 21%, the company noted.

Two highway deaths reported

United Press International

Timothy Jenson, 17, of rural Arlington, was killed Monday in a two-car accident five miles west of Blair of Neb. 91, the State Patrol said Tuesday.

Jenson was eastbound when his car collided with a car driven by Georgia Larson, 53, of rural Blair, which had stopped to make a left turn. Mrs. Larson was reported in satisfactory condition Tuesday.

The patrol also said it received a delayed report of the death Sunday of Ronald Sykes, 15, of Naponee.

Sykes was injured June 15 in the collision of the motorcycle he was driving and a car driven by Cecil Melton of Naponee on a Naponee street.

G.I. electricity rates would go up by 64%

Grand Island (AP) — Electric rate increases totaling 64% in four years are included in a tentative rate schedule received Monday night by the Grand Island City Council.

The schedule calls for separate increases of 15% in the basic rate structure; one increase in October; one in August, 1978; and another in August, 1979.

The schedule also anticipates a 7.6% basic rate hike in August, 1981, but no increase in 1980.

City Utilities Director Bob Olson said a major factor in the increases is an anticipated bonded indebtedness of up to $80 million for a planned Grand Island power plant.

UNL student newspaper could choke with fee cut

If $37,500 is cut from student fees at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, students might start paying for their campus newspaper and editors could lose their salaries, according to the student head of the UNL Publications Board.

NU Regents voted Saturday to hold fees at their present level for 1977-78, and study possible elimination of most fees for 1978-79.

The student-faculty Fees Allocation Board had recommended $37,500 for the UNL Daily Nebraskan, the same amount it currently recieves.

This is $2,000 less than requested, said Mark Bowen, Publications Board chairman. The $37,500 covers half of the cost of printing 17,000 daily copies, he said.

Bowen speculated that students would still read the paper if a dime or quarter charge were instituted.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, June 29, 1977

Sagittarius has a "long memory." The same can be said for Capricorn, but in a different way. Sagittarius is more apt to be abstract, while Capricorn is literal. These may be two of the most difficult signs to understand — the Jupiter of Sagittarius and the Saturn of Capricorn. Together, they might make the "odd couple." Each feels as if being pulled in two directions at once. Capricorn is good for Sagittarius in money matters. Sagittarius relates dreams, visions to Capricorn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What seems a postponement is merely a temporary delay. Communications garble could affect family plans, relationships. Know it and be ready for revisions, adjustments, an abundance of diplomacy. Do take long-range view.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Utilize powers of perception. Dig beneath surface indications. See in light of actuality; avoid self-deception. Accent on good news concerning tangled financial matter. Patience wins as partner, mate provides constructive aid.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message. You land on feet following legal or technical scuffle. Misunderstanding turns out in your favor. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently — and so does the number "8." You get support from one in authority.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finish what you start, reach beyond current expectations. Avoid direct confrontations. Call or message —or a gift — could get job done. Area that had produced uncertainty, even fear, will now be removed from your personal danger list. You'll see!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make new start. Be independent, original. Dare to dream! Yes, you are getting to heart of matters — and an affair of heart is also in picture. Accent on variety, excitement of discovery, creativity, relations with young persons, especially offspring. Member of opposite sex is drawn to you, makes no secret of it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Trust intuitive intellect. Something "inside" is telling you something. Procedure, although unorthodox, can win for you. Know it and be confident. You're gaining allies, backers. One who has alcohol or drug problem would like to drag you into nefarious scheme. Have none of it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Diversify — don't depend on any one source. Get verifications. Double check. Neighbors, relatives may be sincere, but misinformed. Know it and act accordingly. Perceive potential. Socialize. Welcome contact with one who displays delightful sense of humor. Get rid of wet blanket!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cash flow could be interrupted. Instead of panic, dig deep for information. Become familiar with basic information, material. Creative touch could turn around an adverse situation. One you love is working in your behalf — and would appreciate some recogntiion. Well?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be ready for stimulating experiences, excitement accompanying discovery, change, travel, variety, intensified relationship. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently — and so does the number "5." Cycle is high and you have winning touch. Go to it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Low key approach is best, especially when dealing with family. Be diplomatic. Remind yourself — even if you have to make it up — of a special anniversary or occasion. Yes, buy a gift. Make concessions. If you give a little you eventually will gain a great deal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Look beyond the immediate, especially where finances enter picture. You're doing better than might be imagined. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently — and so does the number "7." Accent on desire, romance, fulfillment of "special wish."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Yes, Aquarian could play significant role in your personal scenario. Get affairs in order; bring priorities into focus. Fulfill obligations — get down to business in sense that you imprint style, make known views, stand tall and responsible for belief, product.

IF JUNE 29th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are a natural teacher. Your intuition borders on the astonishing — you perceive when something of importance is about to occur. Aquarians play important roles in your life. December could be one of your most significant months of 1977. This year features travel, could highlight marriage, children. You travel in July and make marvelous social contacts.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

It's cool, for a change

Cooler air pushed its way into Nebraska Tuesday behind a cold front, triggering thundershowers late Monday night and early Tuesday

West Point received 1.64 inches of rain in about one-half hour, accompanied by golf-ball size hail Strong winds in the Blair area caused power outages and tree damage.

Rainfall amounts in the northeast included Emerson 89 of an inch, Wisner 75, Pender 68 and Beemer 60 Omaha received .45 of a inch.

Space shuttle passes test

Edwards AFB, Calif (UPI) — The space shuttle Enterprise Tuesday made a 63-minute manned captive flight, its second atop a 747 jet, in a test so successful NASA officials said they may go straight to a free flight

A third captive flight, set for Friday, was cancelled, according to NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson

He said the flight free of the mother ship was still set for around July 27, but it was not yet decided whether there woutd be another intermediate flight with the shuttle mounted to the jet

Bill goes to bat for elderly

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, introduced a bill Tuesday that would allow Social Security recipients under age 72 to earn up to $3,600 a year before they start losing benefits.

The current limit is $3,000, above which $1 in Social Security benefits is deducted for each $2 earned.

Fire cleans sloth study

Grand Canyon, Ariz. (AP) — A year-long fire, fueled by dung from the long-extinct Shasta ground sloth, has burned itself out

The fire, discovered in remote Rampart Cave last July 14, threatened to destroy the last known source of information on the Shasta sloth

Scientists now can continue exploring the cave to determine what kinds of animals shared the habitat and what vegetation flourished at the time, he said. The Shasta sloth, as big as 300 pounds full-grown, lived in the caves starting about 40,000 years ago until about 11,000 years ago, Martin said

Holiday prediction grim

Chicago (UPI) — Between 500 and 600 Americans will die in traffic accidents during the Fourth of July holiday weekend, the National Safety Council estimated Tuesday.

Another 23,000 to 28,000 persons will suffer disabling injuries in holiday wrecks during the hours between 6 p m. Friday, July 1, and midnight Monday, July 4, the council said.

Last year's bicentennial Fourth of July celebration saw 523 highway deaths and 24,500 disabling injuries.

Bus triggers chain crash

Sao Paulo, Brazil (UPI) — A bus stopped suddenly on a highway in a fog with zero visibility during rush hour Tuesday, triggering a chain crash which piled up 140 vehicles over four miles of highway and killed at least 14 persons.

Highway police said the crash of cars, buses and trucks along both sides of Sao Paulo's main artery also injured at least another 110.

Ruling opens GM probe

Detroit (AP) — A federal judge ruled that a grand jury may investigate the possibility that General Motors Corp. tried to cheat the federal government out of millions of dollars in taxes.

But U.S. District Court Judge James P. Churchill also ordered federal prosecutors not to turn over any grand jury evidence to the Internal Revenue Service.

House for B1 bomber

Washington (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to provide full funds for the B1 bomber pending President Carter s decision this week on whether to go ahead with production of the controversial, multibillion dollar project.

By a vote of 243 to 178, the House rejected an amendment offered by Rep Joseph Addabbo, D-N Y, that would have stricken the $1 5 billion alloted for the purchase of five B1s

That amount is included in the $110 6 billion military appropriations bill for the fiscal year that starts Oct 1, and it remains in the bill as a result of the House action

' I personally believe that President Carter will favor a continuation of the B1 program said the Appropriations Committee Chairman, George Mahon, D-Tex He said production of the plane is necessary for a ' well-balanced defense and a strong position in arms negotiations with the Soviet Union

Carter is expected to announce his B1 decision at a news conference Thursday, following final review with Defense Secretary Harold Brown of the strategic advantages offered by various alternatives.

"They have had a number of discussions and they have narrowed the options," said a Defense Department spokesman

Before putting over further consideration of the omnibus money bill until Wednesday, the House approved by voice vote an amendment by Rep. Bill Burlison D-Mo, to reduce new funds for the CIA's contingency reserve fund from $35 to $20 million

Noting that in the past the fund had been used for secret military operations in Laos and Angola, Burlison said the reduction was designed as 'a safeguard against the CIA initiating our involvement in a major war without the authorization of Congress '

Brown has said B1 program alternatives under consideration have ranged from outright cancellation of the program to building B1 fleets of varying sizes The maximum would be the Air Force request for building 244 of the planes, estimated to cost more than $100 million each

Although Carter spoke in opposition to the B1 during his campaign, he is now believed to be leaning toward at least limited production Possibilities mentioned range from 90 to 160 planes

House debate on the bomber lasted for two days, but the outcome of the bomber funds was never seriously in doubt

Critics attacked the B1 on grounds of cost and the expectation that the Soviets will develop a "look-down, shoot-down" air defense capability in the 1980s that could neutralize the bombers for low-level, supersonic flight beneath the coverage of Soviet radar

We re only buying at best two, three or four years of deterrence,' Rep Bob Carr, D Mich, said of the sleek, white-painted bomber I hope we shoot down this white turkey "

Schools ask $45.5 million

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

The total budget is higher by more than 8%, but local individual property taxes are lower on the preliminary Lincoln public school budget approved by the Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday

Board members approved a more than $45 5 million tentative budget for 1977-78, with about $31 8 million of that coming from local property taxpayers

That compares to a $41 9 million budget for this year, with about $30 6 million supported through the local property tax

The increase in local tax funds will be offset by an expected 6% increase in total property values for the school district This means that the current mill levy to support the school district will go down by more than 1 mill to an anticipated 56 351 mills

The board also plans to lower the budget for the educational service unit by almost 30% to $132,800, with $112,800 coming from the tax levy This will lower the current 0 3-mill levy to 0 2 mills

But all these figures are not set in concrete The budget figures, to be published for a July 11 public hearing, can be altered by the board at its final budget meeting July 26

And any change in the predicted increase in overall district property values will change the mill levy County Assessor Fritz Meyer is predicting at least an 8% rise in this value, more than the schools' 6% figure used for mill levy calculations

What this means to the taxpayer is a decrease in property taxes for schools Last year a person owning a house valued at $40,000 on the county assessor s books, paid $809 76 in property tax for the combined Lincoln and Educational Service Unit 18

Based on the board s projected mill decrease, this home owner will pay $791 14 next year And if Meyer s valuation increase prediction is correct, the tax payment for schools could drop to $767 30 (54 607 mills for the public school district and 0 2 mills for the service unit)

But this decrease in property tax for school support is being offset by an increase in state aid to schools The district is anticipating a $1 3 million increase in state aid money bringing next year s state aid total to $6 75 million

If a threatened petition drive which could eliminate the additional state aid is successful, the school will have to dip into reserves or levy an addition 2 5 mills, according to administrators

In addition to average 8 6% salary increases for employes and utility rate hikes, the 1977-78 budget also contains an expansion in the special education services as the school system takes over the education of children formerly served by the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation and moves into helping more learning disabled children

Even the total $45 5 million budget doesn t tell the whole story Not included are federal tax funds of between $1 5 million to $1 9 million

New boss of jail points to 'errors'

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

The bright lights television cameras and hordes of reporters were gone Tuesday

Tempers had cooled emotions were sapped and Pat Rackers took a hard professional look at the events which put Lincoln in national headlines

Rackers, the city s first corrections coordinator, spoke in a positive tone as he recapped the "unintentional errors which led to a seven-hour ordeal in the city jail Monday night

Four inmates took two hostages at knifepoint and demanded a getaway car while holding police, members of the Special Weapons and Negotiations (SWAN) team and the news media at bay In the wee hours Tuesday, they surrendered The hostages were released, the prisoners went back to their cells

But Rackers job had just begun Tuesday was the first official day of corrections department control of the jail Ironically, the mantle had been passed during a City Council meeting that coincided with the jail drama

The council, meeting in the old Federal Building, where it had moved as the County-City Building was evacuated, approved the takeover of the corrections department, effective Tuesday

Rackers, no newcomer to corrections work, said the incident wasn t all that ironic ' Changes in administration of corrections facilities often lead to this type of thing," he said But, change of leadership or not, there were other contributing factors, he added

' We have a jail which, in terms of ability to detain and confine prisoners is excellent,' he said "But we have to look at the strategic errors which caused the incident "

Jailer Michael Wooten had a set of keys that would open the steel door to the jail kitchen and the locked steel knife drawer in the kitchen, Rackers said

Also, the design of the jail is such that two electric gates were open at the same time, allowing prisoners to congregate in a certain area, he added

The four would-be escapees had armed themselves with a spoon "fashioned into a lethal weapon," something which corrections officials are "always on the lookout for, ' he said

But they also had a knife, "probably brought into the jail by a work-release prisoner, who might have been threatened into the action," he speculated

The latter is cause for a "more strict shakedown of returning prisoners," he added.

Additionally, prisoners need to be classified "with the more dangerous types segregated from the rest of the jail population he said

Noting the overall lack of professional training the jail staff has had Rackers said he plans to meet with all personnel later this week to ' lay some new ground rules for jail procedure in hopes of averting a similar incident in the future

Monday s ordeal was the first escape attempt in the jail which involved the taking of hostages Inmates Robert Bessent Marvin J Gerheardt Robert G Parker and Donald Routhier took jailer Wooten and Deputy U S Marshal Jack Douglas a former Lincoln policeman, into custody during their unsuccessful escape attempt

Routhier 22 of Niagara Falls N Y, was believed to be the ringleader He was awaiting transfer to the Nebraska Penal Complex to serve a three to five-year term for armed robbery in a February incident at the Congress Inn, 2001 West O St

His partner in the Congress Inn robbery Bessent 23 of Las Vegas Nev was facing a similar sentence The pair were arrested five days after the robbery in Cincinnati Ohio

Gerheardt 32 formerly of Wilber was bound over last week to district court on a burglary charge Parker 24 no address was reportedly a federal prisoner in jail on grand larceny charges

Rackers said the four are being held on 24-hour lockup pending the filing of charges County Attorney Ron Lahners said he expects those charges to be filed sometime Wednesday in Lancaster County Court Federal charges of assaulting a federal officer are expected to be filed in U S District Court in Lincoln sometime in the next two weeks according to authorities

City Council Chairman Dick Baker praised the action of police in handling Monday night s incident In a letter to Police Chief George Hansen Baker said

' The ability to handle the situation without injury to the hostages and without giving concessions to the demands of the prisoners speaks to the high level of professionalism displayed by the department

Special commendation should be due to Assistant Chief Roger LaPage for the way he directed the situation and to the two negotiators Officers Gary Engel and Ed Winters '

The incident wasn t without its lighter moments A prisoner on work release trying to get back to the jail before his curfew time, couldn t get into the building He was told he d have to wait by officers who, nonetheless kept an eye on him.

Jail hazards checked

With a thwarted jailbreak under his belt, City Corrections Coordinator Pat Rackers has turned his attention to other hazards which could befall the Lincoln city jail

Among them, a fire similar to the one Sunday that left 42 inmates and visitors to the Maury County Jail in Columbia, Tenn, dead Fire investigators determined the deaths were caused by cyanide gas poisoning from smoldering padding in a juvenile cell, Rackers said

Tuesday, samples of all the materials used in the local jail were sent to a testing lab to determine if they are fire retardant and more importantly, if they smolder with toxic fumes Rackers said

Noting that the Tennessee deaths occurred in a period of four minutes Rackers said few prisoners can be evacuated in that length of time

We ll make the necessary changes to insure a safe jail, he added We ve got some problems that we ve known about for a long time Unfortunately it often takes a tragedy to bring them to our attention."

'Fishies' get day in court

Seattle (AP) — The judge called it the fishiest case he s heard in 31 years on the bench

Five thousand tropical fish — neon tetras, black skirts and silver tips — were brought into King County Superior Court as evidence in a trial involving 95,814 missing aquarium fish

"My experience was limited to guppies and goldfish my children had when they were little," Judge Eugene G Cushing said Tuesday, midway through the trial "I had no idea that tropical fish could be so big — or so little.

"This is the first time there have been any fish of any kind in my court," he said "It's been great — I've learned so much about fish "

Dragon Fisheries of Hong Kong sued Aquatics, Inc, of White Center, Wash, because Aquatics refused to pay $4,032 for shipments it claimed were 96,000 fish short.

The courtroom on Monday was littered with styrene plastic cases holding from one to 1,000 fish, some "no bigger than the end of my finger," the judge said.

"I had them bring in the fish because part of the issue concerns a claim on how they were packed, and the plaintiff says some of the fish could have eaten each other. I wanted to see just how small some of these fish are," he said.

But Richard McDuff, manager of Aquatics, testified that in-flight cannibalism was unlikely.

McDuff said the fish were shipped in light-proof containers and said fish won't eat other fish in the dark.

Throughout the trial there have been repeated references to the "DOAs" — fish who died en route to the receiver

"They managed to clear up one point in the case," said Cushing "They agreed that a certain number of fish can be expected to arrive dead "

Fireworks keep firemen on go

Careless use of firecrackers is keeping firefighters busy as the fireworks season swings into high gear.

Firefighters Tuesday doused at least three fires believed to have been caused by fireworks

Two trees caught fire in separate incidents after youths set off fireworks in their hollowed-out trunks, officials said. One of the tree fires, at 2548 S 48th St., was close to the scene of a grass fire two hours earlier at 48th and Van Dorn, believed to have been started by fireworks

Use of fireworks in the city will be illegal after midnight, July 4

Oil fees turned down in Alaska pipeline bid

Washington (UPI) — The Interstate Commerce Commission Tuesday unanimously rejected high transportation rates proposed by the owners of the Alaska pipeline, ordering the oil companies that own the pipeline to cut their fees by some 20%.

The commision said it turned down the proposed fees because the companies wanted to charge twice for interest they are paying on money borrowed to constuct most of the $9.7 billion pipeline.

ICC Chairman Daniel O'Neal predicted the companies will challenge the commission's ruling in court.

O'Neal said the ICC has ample power to force the companies to pump oil through the 800-mile pipeline if they try to refuse to do so under the lower rates, as some of the representatives hinted Monday they might.

The eight companies that own the line — Amerada Hess, Atlantic Richfield, British Petroleum, Exxon, Mobil, Phillips, Sohio and Union — had proposed rates ranging from $6.04 to $6.44 a barrel to take effect starting Thursday.

The commission rejected the proposals from all but Phillips, ordering them to submit new proposals ranging no higher than $4.68 to $5.10. It did not act on the Phillips' proposal because that company's rate is not scheduled to go into effect until July 20.

The nine members of the commission Monday heard oil company arguments in favor of the proposal and challenges from the Justice Department, the State of Alaska, the Artic Slope Regional Corp., representing Alaskan natives and the ICC staff, all of whom claimed the company proposals were illegal and excessive.

Commission members studied and debated their possible courses of action in closed session for more than five hours Tuesday before their unanimous vote.

O'Neal said a key factor in rejecting the company requests was that they would have provided an 8% return on the value of the pipeline while counting the huge amount of interest on borrowed money twice in arriving at that value.

He said the commission set as its maximum a 10% return on the pipeline's value with the interest counted only once.

In using that formula the ICC said the maximum fees it would approve are $4.85 for Hess, a $1.59 cut; $4.91 for Arco, a $1.13 cut; $4.68 for BP, a $1.67 cut; $5.10 for Exxon, a $1.17 cut; $4.84 for Mobil, a $1.47 cut; $4.70 for Sohio, a $1.46 cut, and $4.89 for Union, a $1.20 cut.

The reductions will mean little to consumers in the lower 38 states, who will pay about the world price for Alaskan oil under rules set by the Federal Energy Administration.

It will, however, add millions to the state treasury in Alaska and to money the Eskimos have for schools, roads and hospitals.

Alaskan officials have estimated every penny reduction in the transportation fees will mean $1 million a year for the state. That is because transportation fees are subtracted from the selling price before the state's 12.5% royalty on each barrel of oil is calculated.

Although the commission technically invited rather than ordered the companies to submit lower fees, its decision had the effect of an order.

O'Neal set no deadline for the submission of new rates because North Slope oil still is flowing down the pipeline toward the port of Valdez on Alaska's south coast, and it will be some weeks before the line is ready to go into operation.

House gives up one raise for another

Washington (UPI) — The House voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to give up an estimated $3,600 a year cost of living pay raise in what some members said was a move to save their larger $12,900 salary boost that will come to a vote on Wednesday.

The House approved the Senate-passed bill 397 to 20 and sent it to the White House.

It would deny members of Congress, the federal judiciary and executive level federal officials, including Vice President Walter Mondale but not President Carter, an estimated 6.3% pay boost on Oct. 1.

The House Wednesday will face an effort to cut back the current $57,500 per year member's pay to $44,600, the level that prevailed before a 29% pay boost went into effect March 1.

The measure approved Tuesday affects the annual cost of living pay which Congress put itself under two years ago. The mass of rank and file federal employes had been receiving that annual increase since 1967 and will get the October raise despite passage of the bill.

"Some members feel that it would be politically obscene for Congress, in these times of economic stress, to get two pay raises in one year," said Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., manager of the bill. "To take the March increase and then this increase represents a kind of double'dip."

But, said Solarz, "Don't get confused. The vote today is on whether we want to take a pay raise. Tomorrow we will be voting on rolling back our pay."

"The timing represents a charade," said Rep. Charles Whalen, R-Ohio, who was barred under the procedure from offering an amendment that would say members of Congress voting themselves a pay raise could not get it until the next Congress.

"We're just putting up a smoke screen in this bill to cover tomorrow's vote. We aren't fooling anybody," said Rep. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

"The fact this bill is here today is to kind of give us a little conscience vote so we will feel better tomorrow in voting to support the appropriations bill," carrying $9.8 million to cover the March pay boost through Sept. 30, 1978, said Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif.

Senate would cut funds for busing plans

Washington (UPI) — The Senate voted Tuesday to prohibit use of federal funds to require school districts to adopt desegregation plans such as "pairing" of schools involving busing.

The action came in a 51-42 vote rejecting a proposal by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., to delete anti-busing language from a $56.7 billion appropriation bill to run the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare during 1978.

Brooke said the language would make the federal government "a partner in segregation."

The language in question — which still faced further challenge by other amendments — had been proposed by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., and approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Eagleton said busing in big cities is a "foolish concept" which will cause white flight and in the long run lead to the isolation of minorities.

For two years in a row, Congress has forbidden HEW, by denying it funds for the purpose, to require school systems to bus children beyond their nearest school. The provision is not in effect because it is being tested in the courts, and it expires in September.

It also has been interpreted by HEW to require pairing of schools and similar methods of desegregation which may require busing. An example of pairing would match a black and a white elementary school with each other so that both races attended grades 1-3 in one and 4-6 in the other.

To close this loophole, Eagleton and Sen. Joseph Biden, R-Del., persuaded the Senate Appropriations Committee to include in the bill sent to the Senate floor a provision saying none of the money could be used by HEW to require pairing-type desegregation plans involving busing.

The House version of the bill contains a similar provision.

Brooke, urging the Senate to delete that language, said: "I believe that this society must be equal, and free, for all the people . . . if it means busing to end unlawful segregation, then I support it."

Eagleton displayed figures on a chart showing that New York City's schools are 67% minority, Chicago 70.4%, Detroit 81%, Kansas City 68% and the District of Columbia 96%.

He said busing will not desegregate those school systems but, through white flight, will raise the percentages.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., called Eagleton's proposal "a rearguard action against human decency." He noted President Carter is urging other countries to honor human rights and asked: "Are we practicing what we preach?"

In other action on the bill the Senate:

— Rejected 63-31 a proposal of Sen. S. I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., banning the federal government from forcing contractors or institutions receiving federal aid to give special consideration to minorities in hiring and admissions. A similar amendment was adopted by the House.

— Rejected a proposal by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., to roll all increases in individual programs contained in the bill back to levels proposed by Carter, a total cut of $1.8 billion.

Truman Library to expand

Independence, Mo. (AP) — A $2.6 million federal appropriation is expected this year for a major addition to the Truman Library and Museum, according to the General Services Administration.

Barring any problems, the 24,000-square-foot addition could be completed in two years.

Dr. Benedict K. Zobrist, library director, said the planned addition is an L-shaped wing that would enclose the northeast side of the courtyard where the former President is buried.

The wing would provide more display space, an education facility and a museum work area. The addition would provide a total of about 20% more viewing area, Zobrist said.

He said there are presently about 3,000 items displayed out of 13,000 items in the museum collection and the new display area would allow public viewing of more items.

The new wing would be the second federally funded addition to the library since it was built in 1957 through private donations.

Nixon points to tape transcripts in 1974 after he said he would turn them over to House investigators.

Nixon bid falters to gain control of tapes

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court on Tuesday rebuffed Richard Nixon's attempt to gain control of the 880 tape recordings and 42 million pages of documents left behind when he was forced from the presidency

The justices, voting 7 to 2, ruled that Congress acted constitutionally in 1974 when it passed a law allowing the government to decide which materials may be controlled by Nixon and which may be made public

The decision is the first step toward allowing the public access to most of the materials, a process that could take years and is sure to spark more lawsuits by the former president who resigned Aug 9, 1974, in the wake of the Watergate scandals

Included in the 5,000 hours of tape recordings are the 30 reels of tape played during the Watergate cover up trial of Nixon's closest aides

Still pending before the nation's highest court, in a case to be argued next fall or winter, is a lawsuit aimed at making copies of those 30 tapes available for reproduction into cassettes and records

There was no immediate comment from Nixon An aide at Nixon's home in San Clemente, Calif , and a lawyer here said they would not comment before reading the court's full decision

The court rejected five specific claims by Nixon's attorneys that the 1974 law, called the Presidential Materials and Recordings Preservation Act, was unconstitutional

The court said the act did not violate the separation of powers between the legislative and executive branches of government, did not violate Nixon's right to privacy or his presidential privilege of confidentiality, and did not significantly interfere with his rights of association

The justices also ruled that the law was not an illegal "bill of attainder" — a law aimed at punishing an individual whose guilt has not been established in the courts

The law, and the court's decision, involved only the tapes and papers from Nixon's 5½ years in office But one of the court's dissenters, Justice William H Rehnquist, said the Nixon case could affect all future presidents

His contention was directly rebutted by Justice John Paul Stevens

Justice William J Brennan Jr wrote the majority opinion, joined by Stevens and Justices Potter Stewart and Thurgood Marshall

Justices Harry A Blackmun, Lewis F Powell Jr and Bryon R White joined in most of Brennan's findings

Rehnquist and Chief Justice Warren E Burger dissented, saying Nixon, like every president before him, should be allowed to decide which portions of the presidential materials he generated to give to the government for public consumption

During Nixon's three-year battle to control the materials, the tapes and documents have been stored at the White House and the National Records Center in Suitland, Md

Nixon and other officials of the executive branch have been allowed access to them, but the General Services Administration was made custodian of all materials by the 1974 act

The law requires the GSA to recommend to Congress regulations allowing public access to the documents Under those regulations, not yet approved, government archivists are to sift through the huge volumes of materials and decide which are private — to be returned to Nixon — and which are of "general historic value" and should be made public

Congress passed the law shortly after Nixon's departure because it considered him an "unreliable custodian" of the tapes and papers, and considered it likely that Nixon might destroy some material that could benefit the investigations of the Watergate special prosecutor

Former Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, contacted at his law office in Houston expressed satisfaction with the ruling He said he believes the materials are government property, but considers it appropriate that Nixon should have access to them in writing his memoirs

The law, signed by then President Gerald R Ford on Dec 19, 1974, nullified an agreement Nixon had reached with the General Services administrator giving Nixon control of the tapes and papers and arranging for their shipment to San Clemente

' We of course are not blind to (Nixon s) plea that we recognize the social and political realities of 1974 It was a period of political turbulence unprecendented in our history," Brennan s opinion said

' Unfortunately, however today's decision countenances the power of any future Congress to seize the official papers of an out going president as he leaves the inaugural stand In so doing, it poses a real threat to the ability of future presidents to receive candid advice and to give candid instructions he said

Californians' water-saving efforts are going too far

San Francisco (AP) — Drought-conscious Northern Californians have done such a good job of conserving water that their lawns are dying, their health may be suffering and one water company is losing money

Despite the continuing rain shortage, officials in several communities are warning residents they may have gone too far and should relax their conservation efforts

"The people cut back almost 57 per cent We only required a 25 per cent decrease," said Matt Whitfield, manager of the Alameda County Water District across the bay from San Francisco "The people have been so good at saving water it was getting worrisome "

The Alameda district ended mandatory rationing this week Whitfield said the immediate reaction in the 61,000 households was disbelief

The much larger San Francisco Water District — which had asked its 1 7 million customers to cut water use by 25 per cent — is saying now that unless consumption increases, rates will have to rise to make up for lost revenue

In a statement last week, the San Francisco district told customers not to let their lawns die for lack of water Consumption cut by the requested 25 per cent should leave enough water to keep their grass alive, the district said

But, Eugene Kelleher, the district's assistant general manager, said Tuesday that "many of the people are cutting back by as much as 50 per cent, completely eliminating all outside water and cutting way back inside, too

"That could create some health problems Now we're telling them they can use a little more water — take some extra showers if you were only taking one a week, water your lawn — as long as they stay inside their allotment "

But north of San Francisco in parched Marin County, water officials welcomed their customers zealousness in curtailing water use by the requested 57 per cent ' Our customers are still exceeding our goal, and that s fine with us, ' said Jules Tham administrative assistant of the Marin Municipal Water District

Rainfall for the 1976-1977 rainy season is about half of normal for the second year in a row over most of Northern and central California Besides mandatory rationing in many urban areas water allotments from reservoirs have been cut drastically for farmers

City Councilman Leo Scherer again has done the right thing in refusing to vote on three liquor license applications which was before the council Monday night. Scherer, who owns and operates Arnold's Tavern, declared a conflict of interest. He has done the same on prior occasions. And he said during the recent campaign he would declare such a conflict.

What else could he do?

Scherer rightly believes that new liquor licenses in the city could affect his licensed business. We share that belief. Lincoln's ceiling on liquor licenses, although rather leaky, still gives existing licenses artificially high values. It can be argued that license values increase or are diminished by any fluctuation in the number of licenses operating in the city. An existing license holder has a direct interest in that number. The competition-for-business factor is likewise obvious.

Scherer goes beyond claims of integrity and demonstrates his by declaring a conflict and refusing to vote on matters which could affect his private business.

In direct contrast to Scherer's action, Councilman Joe Hampton, also elected this spring, went ahead and voted denial on the three licenses in question Monday night. Hampton holds the liquor license for East Hills Supper Club.

Hampton says his private attorneys have told him there are times he can vote on liquor license applications and times when he shouldn't, because of possible conflicts. Monday night, obviously, was one of the times Hampton felt he could vote.

It should be emphasized that Scherer also said he declared a conflict on the advice of City Attorney Charles Humble. Humble said Hampton did not ask for advice on the liquor applications on Monday's agenda.

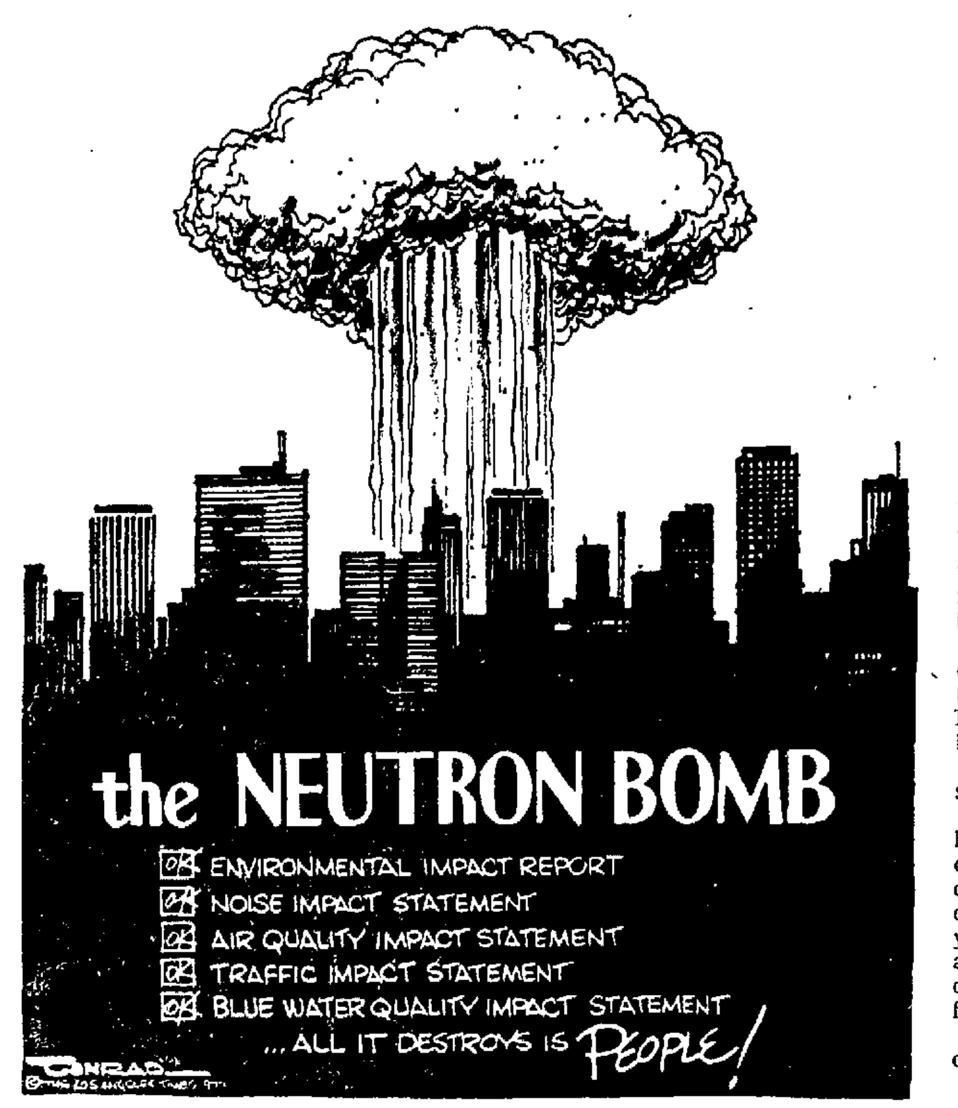
But it can be concluded that Humble's advice to Hampton, had he been asked, would have been the same as the advice to Scherer. Declare a conflict and don't vote.

"I was elected on the basis I was a person of integrity," Hampton commented Monday.

Hampton could enhance his good reputation by not only avoiding what he perceives to be direct conflicts of interest but also the appearances of conflict, which can do much harm to the credibility of government.

Scherer took the proper course with regard to liquor licensing matters and in doing so has demonstrated his integrity.

Real estate all neat and standing



the NEUTRON BOMB
☒ ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT REPORT

...ALL IT DESTROYS IS PEOPLE!
CONRAD

Ron Hendren

Washington — Evidence revealed last week indicates the Defense Department intends to go ahead with the development of its highly controversial neutron weapons program, no matter what the rest of the world thinks about it.

What appears now to be in the offing are so-called neutron "killer" shells which can be fired from conventional eight-inch and 155 mm. artillery guns.

Unlike conventional shells, these kill victims not by explosion or fire, but rather by radiation alone. As an Army spokesman pointed out, buildings and other objects are left standing; only the people are done in.

It is the Army's view that, besides the obvious material benefits of leaving real estate untouched, the neutron concept is more humane, since limbs and such are not torn off. And it may be so, from the point of view of those who must come along and clean up the mess. But any knowledgeable scientist will tell you that death by radiation is a horrible and grotesquely painful way to go.

Moreover, the real threat posed by these new weapons is that they are more likely to be used than conventional nuclear weapons, simply because they don't wreak visible havoc.

They conjure up no visions of flattened, burned-out cities. There are no specters of Hiroshima-like victims haunting civilization with their scars years after the explosion. There won't even be any pictures of contorted, bullet-riddled bodies tossed into mass graves.

No, with neutron weapons, people just get sick, violently sick and die. More like a plague than a war.

That is not what war ought to be about. War ought to be hell. It ought to crash cities, spoil lands, and devastate not only man but everything around him. In fact, the more damage war does the better, because the more damage it does the less likely men will be to wage it. Men value life, yes; but men at war value property more. Property, after all, is what wars are fought over; and the threat of having one's own national property destroyed is a great deterrent to fighting.

Neutron weapons, if they are allowed, will make war easier by removing that deterrent.

It's an all-round bad idea. We need it like the plague.

Police were well-prepared

Organization, leadership, training and a fair amount of luck were on the side of authorities Monday night as a six-hour prisoner insurrection ended peacefully.

The potential for tragedy was there when four inmates grabbed a jailer and deputy federal marshal and demanded to be released. Somebody could have been seriously hurt, or worse. But all concerned kept their heads about them and, using time as their best ally, authorities convinced the inmates to release their hostages unharmed and give themselves up. Police negotiators were successful in convincing the inmates of the hopelessness of their position and what a failure to give up could mean.

To the outsider, it seems that the Lincoln Police Department was well-prepared for such an incident. One could guess that one reason hostages, prisoners and others were not harmed in the ordeal — except for scratches suffered by the two hostages — was that the police did not overreact to the situation; the inmates were not pressured into losing their heads.

The department's response seemed well-coordinated, too, by Assistant Police Chief Roger LaPage, conferring periodically during the incident with Chief George Hansen, who was out of the city Monday night. Negotiations with the prisoners were handled by personnel trained in that specialty. The evacuation and sealing off of the County-City Building for the protection of those who had been working inside and for bystanders outside also seemed to come off without a hitch.

All in all, the police department seemed well prepared for the emergency.

But luck had a part, too. One can easily imagine what might have happened, no matter how well-prepared the police are.

All's well, however, that ends well.

Karamanlis: democracy's strong

By Yorick Blumenfeld
ERR Staff Writer

Athens — Along the coffee houses on Kolonaki Square, the favorite subject of speculation is the future of Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis. Some maintain that the Greek leader, who was 70 in February, cancelled his recent trip through Western Europe because of ill health. Others suggest he is carefully preparing to step down as prime minister. But the rumors themselves confirm the key function of Karamanlis in Greek political life.

Within the past three years Karamanlis has restructured this country's political fabric. When Karamanlis took over in July, 1974, after the collapse of the military dictatorship, he quickly reintroduced democracy and stability. "I gave Greece a new government, settled the question of the monarchy, and got a new constitution approved," he said recently.

The political left, to be sure, attacks Karamanlis as a dictator. The right regards him as pro-Socialist. Karamanlis, however, skillfully has managed to balance the political passions of both sides far better than any other Mediterranean leader.

The extreme rightists no longer have direct lines to the army, the bureaucracy, or the police. Gen. Dionysios Arbouzis, the commander-in-chief, has said, referring to the 1967 military takeover: "The experience gained by the officers was so bitter that at least for a generation I can see no (military coups) recurring." However, a public-opinion poll published in Eleftherotypia, a leftist daily, suggested that a new election would drastically reduce the popularity of Karamanlis' New Democracy Party (Nea Dimokratia). Parliamentary elections are scheduled in the fall of 1978.

There are many here in Athens who think Karamanlis has been too lenient in bringing the criminal elements of the former dictatorship to trial. Amnesty International has criticized the government for not undertaking "a thorough, centrally co-ordinated investigation of the (military) junta's system of torture."

Andreas Papandreou, the stormy Socialist leader, says the Karamanlis government is a continuation of the junta by other means. Papandreou maintains that attacks by the extreme right against left-wing book shops and leftist party offices are an indication that the rightists feel themselves immune from prosecution. Karamanlis, however, asserts that mass trials would have created very serious problems in the future.

His most difficult challenge remains the Cypriot question. As a Greek, he says that the obstacle to a political settlement on Cyprus is due to the "lack of moderation and reason on the part of Turkey." The Greeks want Washington to apply far more pressure on the Turks to pull back militarily on the divided island.

Although anti-Americanism is less evident here than it has been in recent years, U.S. attempts to deal evenhandedly with both Greece and Turkey are not looked upon kindly. Athenians feel that Washington owes Greece preferential treatment.

Kitchen-table justice

CONRAD

Tom Wicker

New York — If you're a pregnant woman with enough money to pay for an abortion in a hospital, you've got an ironclad constitutional right to have that abortion. If you're a pregnant woman without enough money to pay for an abortion in a hospital, you've got an ironclad constitutional right either to beg or borrow the money, or to have yourself butchered on a kitchen table off some back alley.

So ruled the Supreme Court of the United States last week, in an opinion consonant with the views of the Carter administration and to which Congress seems about to give further legislative force. Thus, with the support of all three branches of government, triumph inequity, poverty, misery, the welfare culture and the billions of tax dollars it annually consumes.

The first step down this strange course was taken by Congress last year when it adopted a ban on the use of Medicaid funds for elective abortions, those not undertaken for therapeutic reasons. A federal court, acting on what it and everyone else thought was the Supreme Court's guarantee of the right to an abortion in a 1973 decision, set aside enforcement of this ban until its constitutionality could be tested.

Enter the Carter administration in the person of Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano. He said he would not support the use of federal funds for abortions, and President Carter backed him up.

Possibly owing to that encouragement, this year the House of Representatives went even farther than Congress had last year; it passed a ban on the use of Medicaid funds for any kind of abortion, even to save the life of a mother.

At that point last week, the Supreme Court acted on cases from Connecticut and Pennsylvania, ruling that the constitutional guarantee of the equal protection of the laws was not violated by a state decision to use Medicaid funds for childbirth but not for abortions, and that it was not unreasonable for a state to pursue its "valid and important interest in encouraging childbirth" by refusing to pay for abortions.

The next day, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved the House ban on Medicaid abortions but amended it to permit therapeutic abortions required by threats to the physical well-being of the mother, child after birth or both.

This provision, which apparently is about all that can be hoped for in the Senate, coincides with the Supreme Court ruling in that it guarantees affluent or middle-class women the right to abortions on demand, while preventing the use of government funds to pay for elective abortions for women who cannot otherwise pay for them. The latter must either have their babies at even greater cost to the taxpayers or seek out some fly-by-night amateur for a kitchen table abortion.

Aside from a person's moral and ethical views on the larger question of abortion, the situation wrought by Court and Congress is insupportable. It plainly discriminates against a class, since a right guaranteed to the rich is denied in practice to the poor.

The real questions here are not of morality or religion or ethics. If the case could be made against legal abortion for anyone, that would be at least equitable among women, although a long step backward for them all. But to make the poor alone ineligible for abortions defies justice, common sense, rational policy and the federal budget.

As Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts put it, the ban on Medicaid funds for abortions is "nothing but a means test saying who's allowed to have an abortion." And as Mr. Justice Harry Blackmun, in dissent, chided his colleagues: "There is another world 'out there,' the existence of which the Court, I suspect, either chooses to ignore or fears to recognize." And so the cancer of poverty will continue to grow.

The figures that support him are as depressing as they are impressive. Medicaid funds have paid for abortions for as many as 300,000 women a year at a total cost of $50 million. Sixty per cent of the nation's 1.1 million abortions a year are performed in clinics for the poor — and only 29% in those private hospitals in which the Supreme Court absolutely guarantees the right of a woman who can afford it to an abortion on demand.

Malone area understandably concerned

Today's Mail

Part of the dream

Lincoln, Neb.

Some of us in the Malone area feel we were not properly notified by the mayor and the City Council on the subject of the Community Development Block Grant Program (application made to HUD May 17, 1977).

What concerns the people of this area is — what is going to happen to them? There are people in this area who do not wish to sell their homes. If they do sell, will they receive just compensation for their property? It is enough to relocate without financial strain. Those who do not wish to sell should not be forced into this position.

The Pilgrims founded Plymouth colony in 1620 and it has been the American dream ever since to own a home and a spot of land.

Are other areas in this city receiving loans or grants to repair their homes? This area wishes to be treated fairly, and not be discriminated against.

Payments to aliens

Lincoln, Neb.

Much is said about the illegal alien in the United States taking jobs from our citizens. I feel most of the jobs this group does are the menial jobs the unemployed wouldn't do, anyway — field work, orchards and vineyards.

The sponsored aliens who are brought into the United States and go directly to the welfare department are the ones for the taxpayers to be concerned about. "60 Minutes" one Sunday night interviewed one sponsor in Yonkers, New York. He collects $300 a month rent from the New York Welfare Department for each family he has sponsored. He has purchased a large complex of apartment buildings already. The more families he brings over, the more buildings he can purchase, and soon these aliens will become citizens — sponsoring more families to leech off the welfare system. There is nothing illegal about it, he says.

The New York welfare cannot collect from the sponsor because the welfare does not demand repayment of funds.

The work permit alien comes to the United States at about age 59 — works two jobs in industry and whatever to get his 21 quarters paid into the Social Security system at the highest wages he can. He then returns to his homeland at age 65 and collects American Social Security every month, living like a king on the taxpayers' money. We Americans have been working and paying into Social Security funds every pay-day since 1936.

Next we have the refugees who wouldn't fight a war in their own country. Their main interest was to exploit the lonely American soldier through prostitution or dope. Perhaps they become the rich ones. The refugees in the Des Moines area and probably elsewhere found a way to divide their money among their children or place it in savings or trust funds so they were able to qualify for welfare. The working class refugees are hired by industry because they supposedly do a day's work for a day's pay.

The head of the immigration department has no idea how many sponsored aliens there are in the U.S. The New York welfare department has no idea how many of these are on welfare. There has not been an alien deported for being on welfare since 1948, Harry Truman days.

It is time to clean out the immigration department, overhaul the welfare system and stop Social Security checks from going to aliens overseas. Let's be concerned about the legal aliens who rip off the taxpayers.

MARIE DENNIS

Lincoln, Neb.

Things don't change for the better any more, but, rather, they just seem to get worse. We have to decide on whether to commit ourselves for the next 20 years on a $29 billion airplane that is a monument to civilization's insanity, business feels abused because people object to its abuses, Congress has relied on handouts from special interests so long that it can't distinguish right from wrong, the world now looks upon the United States as the second most corrupt nation, the last great individualist, the farmer, now demands dole just as business and the poor people, and more and more we are looking like a banana republic.

What's the answer? How about stopping the buying and selling of our elections to the highest bidder? Stop lobbying in the sense that they are permitted to buy gifts, treat, hobnob, entertain, be overly numerous and present, be secretive, finance, intimidate, etc.

Russia can readily observe how our emotions and bias run so that they can do or not do things that will affect the outcome of our elections. Batistites have become involved in governmental crimes. Korea — the land noted for corruption — has bribed U.S. congressmen ostensibly. Arab oil influence has overnight changed our relationship with Israel and her neighbors. Iran hired a senator's wife to advance their persuasions, and major nations of the world hire prestigous American lawyers to advance their interest at gigantic fees. It is not impossible that Cuba has assassinated our President, and is perhaps the most logical speculation. Good, clean, open, independent representation financially beholden to none will hopefully strengthen every unit of our society while exerting imagination and courage to solve our escalating problems.

CRYSTAL

This is democracy?

Lincoln, Neb.

The citizens of Lincoln have decisively turned down urban renewal at the polls in recent years.

Now, in 1977, unknown to citizens and voters, they have sneaked in through the back door the dead cat with a new name: Urban Development.

—The city will acquire in whole or in part property to be cleared, demolished, removed and rehabilitated.

—The city will purchase land and turn it over to a developer for construction of multiple housing.

—The city has designated multiple housing as land use for the Malone aera.

—The area south of R St. to O St. and west of 27th to the designated flood plain is scheduled for the construction of apartments with 6-14 dwelling units per acre.

—The area north of R St. to the Missouri Pacific tracks and west of 27th to the flood plain will have a recommended density range of 15-25 dwelling units per acre. These will be based on assemblage of redevelopment areas and based on townhouse or garden apartment units.

New development plans call for the development of the area at the expense of the present residents and homeowners who occupy their own property.

ANTHONY ESQUIVEL

Save the park

Lincoln, Neb.

I venture to say that the unspoiled beauty of Wilderness Park will be worth more in ten to twenty years than a $225,000 bridge bisecting this bridge across Salt Creek. Old Cheney Road should be discontinued west of 14th St. The idea of making it a four-lane highway to be commercialized like Cornhusker Highway is absurd.

Let Old Cheney Road begin at Old Cheney, wherever that is, and end at 14th. Then Wilderness Park will benefit.

LLOYD HENDRICKS

Boughn position

Norfolk, Neb.

I have been asked by many of my constituents to clarify my stated position of opposition to the abandonment of the 172 miles of railroad track between Norfolk and Winner.

The primary consideration constituting the foundation of my approach to this matter is the energy crisis as predicted by many highly respected individuals in our society.

The energy situation at this time is in a most flexible posture. We have been warned by the President of the United States that energy-wise we face a national disaster.

With relation to energy, the eventualities regarding transportation in the next three decades are fraught with dire potentialities. In the coming years, will we have any form of auto transportation that will conform to today's realities in a passenger sense? Will the ensuing decades reveal an astounding rupture of our over-the-road truck transportation system as it is taken for granted today?

Keeping these questions in mind, we also ask ourselves: Is it wise to abandon any railroad track mileage at this time in light of energy predictions? Can we afford to dismantle the tracks of the C&NW between Norfolk and Winner, thereby removing what in the future could prove to be the principal transportation means for some 22 villages and towns between those terminal points?

In my opinion, such a step must not be forthcoming. This is certainly not the time to be eliminating any means of proven transportation. This abandonment must not be permitted. Our uncertain transportation future mandates such a decision.

The extra mile

Lincoln, Neb.

A few weeks ago I accepted a job offer as director of Parks and Recreation in Yakima, Washington. Since that time, many kind words have come my way concerning the job I did as superintendent of parks for Lincoln. I would like to thank all the citizens of this great and beautiful community for their efforts in keeping the parks and recreation programs second to none.

The important part to understand is that the parks have been upgraded over the years, due in small part to my position. The real heroes in park work are the many supervisors and workers who get the job done. They have enthusiasm and pride to go that extra mile and do an assignment to perfection.

My thanks again for the privilege of serving the citizens of Lincoln.

Carter plan leaves Israel stunned

United Press International

Israel was stunned Tuesday but Arab nations applauded President Carter's proposal that Israel withdraw from all territories seized during the 1967 Mideast War.

"This was not expected and we are astonished," said a high-ranking Israeli source of Carter's latest peace initiative.

However, Egypt called the change in U.S. policy "pro-Arab" and Jordan hailed it as "a positive new step."

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III outlined the proposals Monday and said they were based on U.N. resolutions passed after the 1967 Arab-Israeli War and the 1973 Yom Kippur War.

He said the Carter administration, which is pressing for a Middle East peace conference this year, interprets the resolutions to mean that Israel should withdraw "on all fronts of the Middle East — that is Sinai, Golan, West Bank and Gaza.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan rejected what he said was an implication of Israeli intransigence in the new peace initiative.

In a statement, Dayan said: "There is no foundation to the assumption implied in the (U.S.) statement that Israel excludes any territory from the framework of future negotiations with the Arab states."

Other Israeli officials said the U.S. proposals were likely to encourage extreme Arab demands.

The State Department's action was given front-page treatment in Egyptian newspapers. A headline in the newspaper Al Akhbar said "an American warning to Israel."

The Middle East News Agency said the American position was "very strong and should be considered as an emphatic message to Israeli Premier Menahem Begin."

The agency said the proposals were "pro-Arab" since they did not mention "the Israeli demand for establishing diplomatic and trade relations with Arab states" as part of an overall settlement.

Arab and Israeli officials agreed that the most controversial aspect of Carter's plan concerned the volatile west bank of Jordan.

Israel has an emotional and historical claim to the territory going back to biblical times. However, the Carter administration has suggested that the territory might serve as a Palestinian homeland linked to Jordan.

Israeli officials also said the timing of the new proposals was unfortunate, coming within a month of Begin's scheduled trip to Washington.

They had hoped for an end to the exchange of public statements and rebuttals prior to Begin's scheduled meeting with Carter July 19.

Cannons fuel classical gas

Escondido, Calif. (UPI) — Charles Marsh is getting his cannons ready to play with Andre Kostelanetz in San Diego in August.

That's right, cannons.

Marsh embarked on his symphonic career in 1966, after he had been collecting cannons for six years. That year Zubin Methta of the Los Angeles philharmonic asked Marsh if he could fire off his cannons in time to Tchaikovsky's "The 1812 Overture."

That was a 17-shot participation.

Since then, Marsh has expanded his repertoire and does as many as 188 cannon shots in accompaniment to Beethoven's "Wellington's Victory."

Audiences need not fear, however, because the cannons don't fire projectiles.

Relying on his experience as an electronics engineer, Marsh devised a remote console to set off the cannons' powder charges.

In the early days, when Marsh relied on manpower to fire the individual cannons, "the timing was never very good," he said. The cannon firers usually couldn't read music, "so it never worked out too well."

China unwilling to broaden exchanges

(c) New York Times

Hong Kong — Peking has rebuffed an effort by American academic organizations to expand the scope of scholarly and scientific exchanges with China, saying that this must await full normalizations of relations between the United States and China, the president of American Council of Learned Societies disclosed Tuesday.

Characterizing the only recent trips by Americans to China as "scholarly tourism," he also reported growing uneasiness over visits by Chinese to such institutions as the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Bell Telephone Laboratories that exceed the scholarly catagory and are not being reciprocated by the Chinese.

Dr. Robert Lumiansky, president of the New York-based council, said senior Chinese officials have repeatedly made clear Peking's position during a just completed visit to China by leaders of the Committee on Scholarly Communication with the Peoples Republic of China, a national group that coordinates academic exchanges with China.

Among the Chinese officials who met with the group was Chin Teng-kuei, a vice-premier and the fifth ranking member of the Communist Party hierarchy who, Lumiansky said, had been "tough" and "blunt" on the need for the United States to break its security treaty with Taiwan and pull out the remaining U.S. military forces on the island before scholarly exchanges increase.

Peking's refusal of the proposed expansion is consistent with earlier Chinese statements on relations with the United States. But in the past few weeks some analysts believe Chinese officials have begun using a somewhat harsher tone in pronouncements involving Washington, including strongly-worded references over the past few days about U.S. policy in Africa and South Korea.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is scheduled to make a trip to Peking in late August, the first by a ranking member of the Carter administration.

According to Lumiansky, the group from the committee had gone to Peking in hopes of persuading the Chinese to broaden the current program of exchanges, which have been limited to relatively brief tours for American and Chinese delegations. The group proposed that the Chinese allow longer research trips, student exchanges, and the creation of language exchanges for both teachers and students. Similar programs exist between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Lumiansky reported that there has been growing "uneasiness" among U.S. universities and individual scholars and scientists over the "seemingly increasingly superficial trips" which are all that the Chinese currently allow.

He said some institutions are also unhappy that they had been asked to receive numerous Chinese delegations while being turned down in their requests to send groups to China. The Bell Laboratories have hosted eight Chinese delegations, he said, and MIT six groups.

Another member of the group that accompanied Lumiansky added that there was some concern that the Chinese want to send a number of delegations to study advanced U.S. technology, often with commercial applications, which do not really fall into the scholarly category.

He noted that the delegations the Chinese have sent have been almost all scientific and technical groups, with few delegations from the arts, literature, history or the social sciences.

Lumiansky said that there had also been a problem with achieving parity in the number of delegations from the two sides, since the Chinese have sent 25 groups to the U.S. and have permitted only 19 from America. Last year the committee gave Peking a warning that it was prepared to call off the exchanges entirely unless parity was achieved, Lumiansky said. Next year each side will dispatch six groups.

Lumiansky noted that since other countries which have normal relations with Peking have also not been permitted to send scholars to do research in China, he was "pessimistic" about the future of the academic exchanges with China even if Washington does establish full relations with Peking.

Too loud for Amy

Noise from a 21-gun salute got to Amy Carter Tuesday as she watched her dad, President Carter, greet Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez on the White House lawn.

Reporter just sad over Soviet tactics

New York (UPI) — Robert Toth, the American reporter interrogated for two days by the Soviet KGB, said Tuesday the most chilling aspect of his arrest was learning he and his family had been watched since their arrival in Russia in 1974.

Although he offered the KGB only his entry date into the country, Toth said one of the statements written after his interrogation included information on a visit made to relatives in the Soviet Union soon after their arrival.

"The most chilling part . . . was that they had apparently been watching me for a period of time," Toth said at a news conference sponsored by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry.

Toth, the Moscow correspondent for the Los Angeles Times, was picked up June 11 for receiving allegedly "secret" material in a paper on parapsychology, which he described as "a bit of a joke in itself."

The real reason, he said, was his friendship with Anatoly Schcharansky, one of the most celebrated Jewish "Refuseniks" who are trying to leave the Soviet Union.

"They were very made at me because I was very close to Schcharansky and they wanted to shut off the flow of information about Jewish dissidents in the Soviet Union," Toth said.

Despite a hectic ride at gunpoint through the streets of Moscow to Lefortovo, famed for its KGB interrogations, Toth said he remained for the most part unafraid.

"They're so unscrupulous, they used to make up phony pictures and splice tapes and it's all so silly nobody's going to believe it anyway," he said. "I figured at the worst I'd get a year or two in jail."

Toth said the first day he was interrogated was hot and muggy and the windows in the interrogation room were closed.

"It was uncomfortable to say the least. They kept calling me a liar," he said recalling the incident.

The interrogation, according to Toth, involved mostly questions about his meetings with Schcharansky. But because the two always met openly — Toth even drove his very noticeable Volvo to their meetings — they had nothing to hide, he said.

What the Russians hadn't counted on, he said, was the strong backlash over his arrest from the American government and public. He credited both with getting him out of the Soviet Union.

"I'm not so angry at the Russians, as sad they're acting so stupidly," said Toth. "They just don't appreciate the depth of sentiment in the U.S. Jewish community and the pressure on Congress."

He described the Soviet activist Schcharansky as a "warm, assertive" man capable of playing five games of chess at one time — blindfolded.

"All this nonsense about espionage and treason against him is a bunch of baloney," said Toth. "His only purpose has been to get out of the Soviet Union."

'Man from Atlantis' swims off with top TV ratings

New York (AP) — NBC's Monday night movie, "Man from Atlantis," was the top-rated prime-time television show last week, according to A.C. Nielsen figures made available Tuesday.

An ABC comedy special telecast before the Monday night baseball game was the least-watched of 64 rated shows.

Nielsen said national averages for the week ending June 26 put ABC back in first place with a 14.8 rating, which represents an estimated 10.4 million households.

In order, the top 10 shows were:

"Atlantis," 25.1 rating, or 17.9 million households; "Charlie's Angels," ABC, 24.2, or 17.2 million; "Laverne & Shirley," ABC, 21.4 or 15.2 million; "M.A.S.H.," CBS, 20.7 or 14.7 million; "Happy Days," ABC, "How to Break up a Happy Divorce," NBC's Sunday movie, and "One Day at a Time," CBS, each 20.4, or 14.5 million; and "Quincy," NBC, and "Baretta," ABC, both 18.9, or 13.4 million.

Americans among group archbishop will ordain

Econe, Switzerland (AP) — Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre went ahead Tuesday with plans to ordain 14 priests, including some Americans, using traditionalist rites in defiance of Pope Paul VI and risking excommunication.

On the eve of the ordinations scheduled for Wednesday morning, the Vatican radio reminded all Roman Catholics that absolute and unconditional loyalty to Pope Paul VI was "imperative." It said the Pope "continued to hope, even against all hope, in repentance" by the defiant French prelate.

Several thousand supporters of Archbishop Lefebvre were expected to attend the ceremony in this hamlet in the southern Swiss Alps where his seminary is situated.

The former archbishop of Dakar declined to talk to reporters in advance of his sermon for the ordination. His spokesman said the new priests and 22 subdeacons to be ordained will be identified only shortly before the ceremony but confirmed there were "a few" Americans among them.

But the ordination seems certain to be another open defiance of the Pope, who has threatened the archbishop with possible excommunication. Excommunication bans a Catholic from taking the sacraments and is the severest punishment of Roman Catholicism.

The archbishop rejects many of the positions taken by the Vatican in Church politics and in changing the liturgy. He opposes the Pope's efforts to reach a detente with Communist countries and the increasing contacts between the Roman Catholic Church and other churches.

He also rejects recent liturgical reforms, particularly the saying of Mass in modern languages instead of Latin.

His supporters come mainly from France, West Germany, Italy and Switzerland where the traditionalist movement against the reforms of the 1962-65 Vatican Council has picked up momentum in recent months.

The seminary, the traditionalists' spiritual headquarters, was not impressed by the threat of excommunication contained in a recent papal letter to the archbishop.

"We have heard so many such threats before," a spokesman said while confirming the ordination would be held as scheduled.

Traditionalist sources claimed to find a milder tone in the Pope's address Monday at the installation of five new cardinals. Most of the address dealt with church unity and Msgr. Lefebvre.

They also cited reports that West German Catholic bishops were trying to mediate between the Pope and his rebellious archbishop. Confirmation of any such mediation attempt was not available from German Catholic sources Tuesday.

Allergy suspected as factor in croup

By George C. Thosteson, M D.

To Your Good Health

Dr Dr Thosteson: My son is almost three years old Since his first birthday we have had him hospitalized four times with the croup. He had it another time, but we were able to treat it at home

Since his first birthday he has also developed some allergies. They are hard to pinpoint, but we suspect detergents and animals with long hair His eyes water, turn red and swell, and he gets a rash

Our doctor says he will outgrow the tendency to have the croup, and he has prescribed a cough syrup to give at the onset of the croup

Do you think we should see a doctor specializing in allergies? — Mrs T M

Croup is a high pitched barking cough accompanied by labored breathing There are two kinds Spasmodic croup is more frightening than serious It usually accompanies a nasal discharge and throat hoarseness There is very little fever involved and it is usually controlled with hot steam and syrups to promote mucus release Syrup of ipecac in small doses has been effective

The other kind of croup is more pronounced — a similar barking cough but accompanied by severe breathing difficulty because of closed air passages It has a really long name laryngo tracheo bronchitis and it is a form of bronchitis

This is often an emergency problem requiring hospitalization It is usually related to a respiratory infection, and there is high fever (up to 105 degrees)

In this, steaming doesn't help and antibiotics are required to fight the infection

Allergy can very definitely be a factor in the cause or severity of croup and I would advise you to seek the advice of an allergist I hope you already have removed the sources of animal dander, a common offender

Dear Dr Thosteson I would like to know what medicine is used for vascular headaches — Mrs W H A

Because vascular headache stems from a spasmodic dilation (widening) of the blood vessels serving the head area, medicine to constrict these vessels is usually prescribed Any of the ergotamine preparation is effective The technique of biofeedback has been reported to be effective in such headaches

Dr Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily he is unable to answer individual letters Readers questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible

Wally Pierson looks at flyers on bulletin board.

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

When a longtime employe began showing up late for work, unshaven, hung over, liquor on his breath, the supervisor called a counselor at the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs (LCAD) with a question:

"Can a guy become an alcoholic in one month's time?"

The employe, whose work performance had noticeably slipped, was asked to visit with the counselor and within 20 minutes the root of his problem came tumbling out.

"If you think you're so damn smart, what would you do if your 15-year-old daughter was pregnant?" he asked the counselor.

The man was referred to Family Services Association for help. His family problems were worked out and he returned to work where his job performance and attitude went back up to its former good level.

The employe was helped with a personal problem; the company saved money in lost time and production. These two gains are the primary benefits of the Employe Assistance Program, a three-year-old service offered to Lincoln-area employers.

Currently 43 companies, ranging from a small law firm to the 1,800 employe telephone company, are paying two dollars per employe each year for this service.

The two full-time counselors and a director in th program train company supervisors to spot and document deteriorating job performance, then to confront the employe with the facts and suggest counseling help.

Supervisors are not expected to, are even discouraged from actually providing counseling themselves. The supervisors' job is to document and confront on-job performance. "But it's easy to be caught in the trap of helping with problems, of feeling sorry or giving advice," said Mary Carper, former program director.

Counselors work with the employes and family members to sort out the problems and direct them to local help.

Although the program is under the LCAD umbrella, not all employe problems are addiction reiated.

The employe with the pregnant daughter was a social drinker who began imbibing more heavily during that crisis. "How was he going to tell his wife? his pastor? . . . his whole world fell apart," said counselor Donna Sutton. "He sedated his feelings for a while."

In a study of the more than 230 individuals counseled during the last two years, 40% had alcohol or drug addiction problems.

The counselors also talked with individuals who had emotional problems (27%), marriage problems (13%), and just plain job disatisfaction (3%), according to the study.

They have worked with rape victims and victims of incest. And they have spent time with employes who just needed an hour or two to think out a problem, who wanted a temporary listening ear.

"There are so many, many problems," said Ms. Sutton.

Self referrals, those who come in without any supervisory prodding, account for more than half the counselors' work.

A wife comes in after her husband's second drunk driving charge; a mother comes in to discuss her son's drug habits; parents whose daighter is losing her sight come to find help in coping and locating yraining programs for the girl.

The counselors do not get involved in long-term counseling; they focus on "motivational counseling," helping the individual pinpoint the problem, then offering alternative solutions and referring them to other agencies such as Lancaster County Mental Health, Family Services, alcohol and drug treatment centers.

Later the counselor will follow up to see if the person has gotten help from the referral agency, if there are other problems.

But nothing goes into personnel files. The problem does not get documented to follow the employe from job to job, stressed Ms. Carper.

Only when an employe has been sent in by his supervisor does the company even know he is getting help, she said.

This early intervention is intended to help with problems before they become so severe that jobs are lost and welfare has to take over, said Ms. Carper.

Counseling for employes is not new. Very large companies like Burlington Northern and Northwestern Bell have in-house counseling services, something that no Lincoln company could afford.

The fact that a company chooses to join this consortium is a good indicator of the climate in that company — of a good, healthy atmosphere, said counselor Paul Soergel.

The $55,000 annual program, funded one-third by the employer fee plus grants from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, the State Drug Commission and the Division on Alcoholism has gained some acclaim. It was cited by the NIAAA as one of the two best consortiums in the nation.

But its real success is measured more in the dollars saved and in the lives of men and women who have found help.

Bubble of heroic railroad building era burst

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Book Review

Building a railroad across America was a glorious dream, a national goal, pioneering progress, a technological marvel, the stuff of legends.

Or so we've been told.

But now comes Dee Brown, author of "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee," to say that building the transcontinental railroad was bribed congressmen, land grabs, robber barons, uprooted societies, scandals of enormous proportions.

In "Hear That Lonesome Whistle Blow" Brown gives us a new look at the Great Race to Promontory, a story devoid of glory and full of outrage.

The first Iron Horse arrived in America in 1829. By 1854, the Chicago & Rock Island's Locomotive No. 10 had reached the Mississippi River.

"During that brief span of years," Brown says, "the development of locomotives and the building of tracks for them to run upon had been amazingly swift, even more so than was to be the development of automobiles and paved highways in the twentieth century."

And the race had just begun.

Brown's unique historical perspective retells this story in terms of greedy excess and big profits for the promoters of famous names — the Union Pacific, the Central Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Atchison, Topeka and Sante Fe.

And he tells of the greed of others.

Steamboat operators were the first to battle the railroads, hoping to retain their monopoly on westward transportation. Steamboat men fought to keep railroad men from bridging the Mississippi.

But the railroaders had a sharp Illinois lawyer — one Abraham Lincoln — to argue their case. Soon, Lincoln had land in Council Bluffs where the tracks would span the Missouri River, and the railroaders had their bridges.

From there, it was nothing but a land grab.

As the iron rails were laid, railroad promoters gobbled up 155 million acres of the public's land — more than one-fourth the Louisiana Purchase, nearly one-ninth the entire land area that was then the United States.

Railraod promoters bribed congressmen from the start, hoping for votes for their particular routes west.

Government inspectors would complain of shoddy, too-quick construction.

Railroad surveyers selected roundabout routes for their tracks, not direct ones, so their land grants would be even larger around places like Omaha.

Laborers — thousands of Chinese coolies and Irishmen — died.

"As in war," Brown writes, "the longer the contest continued, the more ruthless, reckless and callous the leaders of the contending railroads became toward their own workmen . . . The U. P. undoubtedly lost the most workmen from exposure and from diseases contracted in the squalid dens of prostitution that followed the tracks westward. Almost no medical facilities were provided by either railroad company."

Then, there were the 1873 newspaper reports of widespread government corruption:

"As Congress began a typically mild investigation of itself in 1973, there appeared to be no way of concealing the fact that the Vice President, the Vice President-elect, chairmen of important committees in the House, a dozen Republican party leaders of both House and Senate, and the Democratic floor leader of the House had all accepted bribes . . ."

And, of course, the railroads helped to nearly destroy the Plains Indians, who had been promised their western land "as long as the grass shall grow or the waters run."

But when the Iron Horse began to run, an obliging government gave the railroads Gen. William T. Sherman, of Atlanta-burning fame. Sherman had come to regard the railroad "as a holy endeavor that must be defended at all costs against such 'a worthless set of scamps' as the Plains Indians."

So Sherman sent Gen. Philip Sheridan west, an army commander who believed "the only good Indian was a dead Indian." And Sherman issued his orders: "To track down and kill any Indians sighted near the railroad."

It's not a pretty story, obviously, but one Brown handles passionately, vibrantly and most importantly, from a new point of view.

Brown doesn't give us popular history. But he does give us Thomas Durant, the driving force behind the Union Pacific, to whom "the making of money was the only reason why a man should spend his time and energies at railroad building. Pride of accomplishment, the excitement of opening new frontiers, and fulfilling society's need for transportation meant nothing to him."

Read Brown's version of the story and wonder no longer why that train whistle was lonesome. With men like Thomas Durant at the throttle, Dee Brown says the railroads deserved few friends.

Opening lead — three of spades.

Underleading an ace on the opening lead against notrump is perfectly normal, but it is generally poor policy to do so against a suit contract. In notrump contracts the aim is usually directed to establishing a long suit, and leading away from an ace is standard operating procedure.

But the motivation is entirely different in defending against a suit contract, and in the long run it is a losing proposition to underlead aces on the opening lead. Declarer can sometimes take advantage of this concept and shape his play to suit it. Here is such a case.

West leads a low spade. If declarer plays the king from dummy, he goes down after East takes the ace and returns a spade. South later loses a heart and a club and fails by one trick.

But if South assumes that West would not underlead the ace of spades, which is surely a reasonable assumption, he follows low from dummy at trick one. Once he does this, the contract is foolproof.

East wins with the jack, but what can he do next? If he cashes the spade ace, South does not lose a club trick; if East makes a neutral return — say, a trump — South easily makes four.

Declarer wins the trump with the ace, plays a diamond to the king, a trump to the king, and cashes the A-Q of diamonds, discarding the K-8 of spades from dummy. Declarer now takes a club finesse, which loses, and West later makes a trump trick, but South makes the contract.

Climbing up with the king of spades at trick one seems to be a normal play, but this apparently innocuous move can cause much more damage than meets the naked eye.

'Tow-A-Drunk' promises to take you and your car home

Vancouver (UPI) — A car towing firm offering a service called "Tow A Drunk" has come to the rescue of the driver who has had one too many drinks and has the sense to recognize it.

"We felt the reason a lot of people drive after they've been drinking is because they want to have their car when they wake up the next morning," Unitow Service Inc vice president Gary Tarantino said.

"So we decided to offer this kind of a service where we'll tow your car home and give you a ride in the tow truck."

Tarantino said the new service, costing $20 for an in-city tow, was unique so far as he knew, adding he thought it would be a winner with the public.

"We scratched our heads for a week trying to think of a name that was a little more subtle," he said. "But it was difficult. We finally printed up cards saying 'Tow-A-Drunk, both you and your car arrive home safely.' "

Tarantino said hotel managers and bartenders whose establishments the service advertises in were "extremely impressed by the idea."

Paint brush adapts

Jersey City, N.J. (UPI) — A manufacturer here is cutting the cost of paint brushes in introducing a brush with two interchangeable heads that snap on and off. The polyester filament bristles can be used for both latex and oil base paints.

The brush is rustproof and impervious to all solvents, says the manufacturer.

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant
Quinn

New York — Millions of homes in this country are improperly insulated, including, perhaps, yours. Dollars seep through the walls and ceilings every time you turn on the furnace or the air conditioner.

The House Ways and Means Committee just approved a tax break that would save you 20% of the cost of improving your insulation (up to a maximum saving of $400). It has yet to be passed by Congress as a whole, but some kind of tax credit is apparently in the cards.

As a homeowner who thinks he might want to take advantage of that credit, you have three questions to ask yourself: (1) Does my house actually need more insulation? (2) Does it make financial sense to insulate? (3) If so, which of the several types of insulation on the market are best for the job?

There is a quick way to evaluate your present insulation. If you can get into the attic, check the type and thickness of what's there. If it's insufficient, you can guess that it's similarly-thin in the walls and floors.

The cheapest time to add insulation is when the house is under construction (or being ordered from a builder).

With an existing house, it's generally simple to add insulation to the attic. But putting more into the walls usually involves taking off the siding and blowing loose material into the spaces between the studs — an expensive job.

"If I were insulating my home, I'd first caulk up the cracks, then add to the attic and put in storm windows," says Richard Kutchnicki of the National Association of Home Builders. "That may save enough heat so that it doesn't make financial sense to reinsulate the walls."

In buying insulation for a new or old home, don't judge materials by their thickness. One material six inches thick may have less insulating value than another that's only two inches thick.

The thing to check is the R value, which should be marked on the package. (If it's not, look for other insulation.) This tells the material's resistance to heat loss. The higher the R value, the more effective the insulation.

A store that sells insulating materials, or your local building inspector, can tell you what R values are now recommended for floors, walls and ceilings in your area. The amounts have gone up; where R13 used to be enough for ceilings, for example, it now may make cost sense to go to R30.

The easiest for the do-it-yourselfer is the batt-type, mineral wool insulation that comes in standard lengths. The NAHB research foundation has started a quality-check program for this material, to be sure it lives up to the R value stated on the package, and so far two leading manufacturers have joined (Johns-Manville and Owens-Corning).

Other insulation materials for blowing into walls are cellulose (from old newspapers) and urea formaldehyde foam. Use of cellulose is picking up because it's a little lower in cost and higher in R value than mineral wool. However it's less fire resistant (despite being treated with fire retardant chemicals). For that reason, professionals advise against using it under the eaves, where it's more accessible to flame.

Some cellulose insulations corrode metals. Your best bet for avoiding problems is to look for manufacturers whose packages state that they meet the standards set by the National Cellulose Manufacturers Assn.

Urea formaldehyde foams shrink a little over time, which reduces their R value. There are other potential problems, such as odor and moisture, if the material isn't installed properly.

"Proper installation by an experienced and reliable firm is the key," says Frank J. Powell of the National Bureau of Standards. "Otherwise you may not get all the heat savings you expect."

France offers travel bargains

Paris (UPI) — New money-saving travel bargains are being offered Americans in France this year. A one-week ($106) or a two-week ($162) "France Pass" allows unlimited flights on Air Inter, the French domestic airline.

Between June 15 and Sept. 15, in combination with the new one-week $89 "Orly Hilton Pass," travelers can take daily flights from Paris to more than 30 French cities and return each evening to the same hotel room.

Old tire drive nets funds for schools

Rochester, Minn. (UPI) — School children here used to collect newspapers and aluminum cans to raise money for their favorite projects

This year they collected old tires. An old tire drive at 26 public and private schools brought in 4,000 tires that will be recycled and bring the schools more than $1,000 for projects in individual schools.

The roundup will become an annual event.

Nobody wants to serve in town government

Littleton, W.Va. (AP) — They held an election here, and nobody came.

Mayor David Roberts, the five members of the council, and the town recorder all grew tired of the burdens of office in this town of 333 souls in the northern part of the state. All of them let the March 30 filing deadline go by without filing for re-election.

To their surprise, nobody else wanted to run, either.

They came up with a solution — make it a write-in contest.

But when the victors were announced, nobody wanted to serve.

In the write-in balloting, 41 votes were cast. Twenty persons got votes for town council, four for mayor and six for recorder.

Eventually, Roberts was persuaded to accept once more the $15-a-month job of mayor, for which he had gotten the most votes.

And Roberts' wife Carol found herself agreeing to serve another term as town recorder, which pays even more than mayor — $20 a month.

"We called everyone else on the recorder list," she said, but no one else would serve.

She says the problem stems from the town's current efforts to find more water. There's just too much paperwork associated with efforts to drill three new town wells. As an example, she says, the recorder finds herself working two or three days a week just to keep up.

Cruise liner will make inaugural voyage

New York (UPI) — The Russian cruise liner M-S Kazakhstan will make its inaugural eastbound transatlantic voyage when it sails from New York on Sept. 7 for a 14-day cruise to northern Europe.

The 16,600-ton liner owned by the Black Sea Shipping Co. made its U.S. Debut last December with a series of cruises from New Orleans to Mexico, the Caribbean and South America. It will operate weekly cruises from New York to Bermuda this summer.

Script isn't followed on South Pacific isle

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

Avarua — A blue water and blue sky day on Rarotonga Barefoot A cold can of New Zealand beer in hand Warm air blowing across a white sand beach

No movie company has ever set up cameras in the Cook Islands No writers printed stories of lush and willing South Seas maidens There's one painter — an American — who's been here for years

The scenery is tropical Sunstruck water, creaming white as it smashes on the reef. Banana plants. Coco palms. Thickets of arrowroot Dark green taro patches

But there isn't a thatched house on the island Under New Zealand ownership, they built trim little boxy cottages

(How can you write passionately about the South Pacific when they don't give you the props?)

☆ ☆ ☆

I said "What about crime, John?" I hired John and his car It's a new Air New Zealand route and they flew in a covey of journalists and travel agents

Crime, said John, is an occasional fight. Usually at the Banana Court Handily, it's right alongside the police station

Maybe it's different at night But in daytime the Banana Court is a raunchy little bar

I said John they ought to close this place down It's enough to make a South Seas writer throw his typewriter in the ocean

☆ ☆ ☆

Avarua is the major village on Rarotonga An antique limestone church from the days of the London Missionary Society A post office A modest building for Premier Sir Albert Henry's and his Ministers

"What do young people do for fun, John?" They play soccer," said John

(I thought "Heavenly days, I'll never get a column out of this ")

A bartender at the new Rarotongan hotel said "There is a custom here they call creeping

A young man creeps at night to the house of a girl who is the pineapple of his eye "If she likes him she lets him in

"If she doesn't, she calls out a string of words They must be certain words, always used by our people "

(Not exactly, "Rape!" More like, "What the hell do you think you're doing here?")

I said: 'Then all the villagers get up and chase him?"

He said "Yes And if they catch him he is very much ashamed

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I realize that the water shortage in my area has caused a great deal of inconvenience for some, but count us as a couple for whom it has been a real blessing.

In an effort to conserve water, my husband and I decided to try bathing together, and all I can say is "WOW!" It has opened up a whole new series of experiences for us. (He's 36 and I'm 35, we've been married for 14 years, and we have three children)

To those who would scoff at this lovely kind of togetherness, if you haven't tried it, don't knock it.

JIM AND JANE IN MARIN

DEAR J AND J: Can it then be said that "the family who bathes together stays together"?

DEAR ABBY: You claim there's no such time as a "'frigid-dear' — only clumsy men

As a former "clumsy" man, let me assure you that many men are conditioned through repetition to be clumsy. "Not tonight. I have a headache," or, "Well, okay, go ahead, but hurry up and get it over with.)

Thanks to Dr Freud, I found someone to "untrain" me

DAVE IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR ABBY: Our dear and saintly minister preaches a beautiful sermon every Sunday morning, and at the conclusion of each service he goes to the rear of the church to shake hands with all the members of the congregation as they go out, the door.

The problem is that he grasps each hand and squeezes it as though he were cracking nuts!

My poor mother, with her hands gnarled by arthritis, waits in line as though she were going to her execution!

I'm sure our minister reads your column, Abby, so if you print my letter, he may recognize himself and take the hint. Thank you.

W.

DEAR W.: Your mother — and all the rest of you out there for whom an enthusiastic handshake is painful — should not hesitate to say, when extending a hand in greeting, "Gently, please — arthritis!"

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Encose stamped, self-addressed envelope please.

Everroad is considering entering Senate campaign

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Although he's reluctant to talk about it now, former Lt. Gov. John Everroad of Omaha is taking a look at next year's U.S. Senate contest.

"Wait until the first part of August," he said Tuesday. "I'll decide one way or the other about then."

Everroad's name has not been on the long list of GOP Senate prospects until now.

And he's not sure he'll stay on the chart of potential candidates very long.

Everroad did give consideration to Senate races in 1970, 1972 and 1976 before ultimately deciding not to run.

"I've got some business arrangements that have to come first," the 64-year-old diesel truck engine supplier stressed. "Then I can think about it."

The lengthy GOP list of prospective Senate candidates stretches from Don Shasteen, administrative assistant to retiring Sen. Carl Curtis, to former Republican State Chairmen Milan Bish of Grand Island and Bill Barrett of Lexington.

Bish headed Ronald Reagan's successful 1976 presidential primary campaign in Nebraska and chaired the state's delegation to the GOP national convention in Kansas City.

Barrett was chairman of former President Ford's Nebraska campaign.

Other Senate prospects — generally considered less likely — include 1st. District Congressman Charles Thone of Lincoln, Attorney General Paul Douglas, State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson and State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood.

Everroad, who served as lieutenant governor during Norbert Tiemann's 1967-71 term as governor, said he generally agrees with the former Republican chief executive's remarks last week about the need for "new blood" and new leadership within the Nebraska GOP.

"Let's put it this way," Everroad said. "I don't think Tiemann was wrong.

"I think the party needs new faces. We need some young people. A few new guys are showing up and I think we should make room for them.

"The Republican Party needs new leadership . . . not the Old Guard."

Everroad thinks party leaders have "made some mistakes," and one of them apparently was to convince Edward Zorinsky that there was no room for him in last year's Republican Senate primary.

"I think they forced him to the other side," he said.

Zorinsky said he was urged to stay out of the GOP Senate primary race because the party leadership had settled on former Congressman John McCollister as its preferred nominee. Zorinsky said it was suggested that he run instead for McCollister's seat in the House.

Ignoring that advice, Zorinsky changed his voter registration from Republican to Democratic, entered his new party's Senate primary race, won it and subsequently defeated McCollister in the general election.

"That battle (between McCollister and Zorinsky) should have taken place in the Republican primary," Everroad said.

"The big guys in the party should have said: 'Let it happen in our primary.'

"The party shouldn't weed people out before the primary. If it hadn't, it might still hold that Senate seat."

Everroad said he thinks Democratic Gov. J. James Exon can be beaten in next year's Senate race.

"But it would take some doing," he said. "He's a good man and he's a friend. But I don't think Jim has been right on every issue."

Exon has not announced his 1978 intentions, but he is considered a possible, perhaps likely, Senate candidate.

Everroad was an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor in 1964, before winning the post in 1966.

Schmit's candidacy anticipated

Associated Press

A close political ally of State Sen. Loran Schmit said Tuesday he was confident that Schmit "will be offering himself soon as a candidate for the governor's race."

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp made that comment while simultaneously announcing he would seek a third Unicameral term from the 40th legislative district.

DeCamp, an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination to the 3rd District House seat in 1976, stated flatly that a previous "burning ambition to go to Washington is gone, completely."

Contacted in Bellwood, Schmit said he was looking at the governor's race "very seriously."

"The time is going to come before long that I'll make up my mind if I'm going to do anything," about seeking the GOP gubernatorial nod, Schmit said.

"A lot of people have encouraged me to run for various offices but they seem to think the governor's office is best in keeping with my previous nine years experience in the Unicameral," Schmit said.

Schmit is chairman of the Legislature's Committee on Agriculture and Environment and is regarded as one of the Unicameral's most powerful members.

Schmit failed in a 1960 bid to win a GOP House nomination.

DeCamp described Schmit as "probably my closest prsonal and political friend," and said he would be "working to assist Nebraska in electing Loran."

DeCamp, an attorney and chairman of the Legislature's Banking Committee, has been closely allied with Schmit in various legislative projects.

Friendship exchange program to be directed by McAllister

Gov. J. James Exon has announced the appointment of Jack MacAllister, president of Northwestern Bell in Omaha, to be director of the State's new Friendship Force.

Mrs. Pat Exon, the governor's wife, has agreed to serve as Nebraska's honorary chairman for the privately financed international citizens exchange program.

Exon said the Friendship Force grew out of a project begun by President Carter while he was governor of Georgia. The program has expanded to other states.

Under the exchange program, Americans will stay in private homes in other countries and an equal number of visitors will stay with Americans.

The first exchange, planned for July, will involve a cross-section of people from Atlanta, Ga., with residents from Newcastle, England.

By 1980, the so-called Friendship Flights are expected to average one a month from all 50 states, eventually involving 250,000 people.

MacAllister said Nebraska's first exchange probably won't be organized until late this year or early next year. In the meantime he said a committee will be formed to select the cities which will be involved.

Those who participate have no choice as to which city they will visit during a 10-hour tour. MacAllister said that rule was decided made to discourage people from thinking that the program is simply an inexpensive way to be a tourist. All flights will be chartered.

Resolutions believed not binding

Delegates to the National Women's Conference are not bound to support resolutions passed at state meeting, according to a legal counsel for the Washington office of the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year (IWY).

Nebraska's delegates elected Sunday call themselves pro-life, pro-family and pro-America; they are opposed to the equal rights amendment and abortion, which Nebraska resolutions support.

Donna Polk, and other members of IWY, are questioning the outcome of the election. They feel the state's delegation is not representative of all women in Nebraska.

David Wallace, legal counselor counsel for the IWY, has received challenges from other states claiming elected delegations are not representative. He said he told those persons to try to work out the differences locally.

Ann Bowen of Omaha, an elected delegate and leader of pro-life forces at the Nebraska Women's Meeting, said Monday she will check with an attorney "to see how, legally, we have to stand" on the resolutions.

"I will do whatever is honest and forthright," she said. "After that, I will follow my personal viewpoints and they are quite obvious."

A little, but meaningful, word was omitted from a previous statement from Ann Bowen of Omaha, leader of the successful pro-life, pro-America forces at the Nebraska Women's meeting.

"We had no assistance from outside Nebraska," Mrs. Bowen said.

Through an inadvertent typesetter error, the "no" was left out of the story in Tuesday's edition of The Lincoln Star.

Man's death said asphyxiation

Louisville (AP) — A Louisville man whose body was found Saturday by two teen-agers apparently died of asphyxiation, Cass County Sheriff Fred Tesch said Monday.

James L. Sherman, 36, apparently died Wednesday, Tesch said.

Sherman apparently was working on his pickup truck in a garage when he was asphyxiated, the sheriff said.

The ignition switch of the truck was on and the gas tank was empty when Sherman was found.

Planning panel quits in protest in Cedar County

Hartington (AP) — The Cedar County Joint Planning Commission voted unanimously to resign in mass, effective Friday, to protest the Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Act, popularly known as the Sunshine Law.

Planning Commission Chairman Willard Burney of Hartington said, "The members of the commission regret having to resign before their job is completed. But they feel it is more important at this time to take a stand for the right of the individual to privacy."

"We doubt if most public boards or commissions which are going to be affected realize the implications of this law," he said, and "we feel it is an evasion of privacy."

Marvin Hartung of Coleridge, one of Cedar County's three county commissioners, said Tuesday he sympathized with the commission's problem.

"I'm certainly in sympathy with the commission and I heartily agree with the action they've taken."

Hartung called the law ridiculous and said the public should be aware of its implications.

The county commissioners are concerned about the status of the planning commission, he said. They also are concerned that the legislation will make it impossible to get anyone to serve in voluntary capacities, he said.

Carter may meet Brezhnev

(c) New York Times

Washington — President Carter would like to meet with President Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Union — possibly this year — but no time or place has been fixed, the White House said Tuesday.

One possibility, officials said, was for the two leaders to hold an informal meeting in Alaska, similar to the three-day meeting held by President Ford with Brezhnev in Vladivostok in November 1974.

The White House said Tuesday afternoon that "The President is looking forward to meeting with Brezhnev at a mutually agreeable time and place."

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, meeting with a group of reporters Tuesday morning said the question of when such a meeting should be held depended on Brezhnev's willingness to meet with Carter.

The White House disclosed that Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's national security affairs adviser, discussed the possibility of a Carter-Brezhnev meeting last week with Ambassador Analtoly F. Dobrynin of the Soviet Union.

Such a meeting would be an informal one, aimed at clearing the air between the two countries and allowing the two leaders to meet each other. There now seems little likelihood that the two countries will be able to conclude a new agreement limiting strategic arms before the current, five-year accord expires on Oct. 3.

Vance said it was "unlikely" that such a new agreement could be arrived at by October, but that this in itself was not a cause for alarm. He has said repeatedly that it was better not to appear to be signing an accord in haste, and that it did not matter if the five-year accord lapsed so long as negotiations continued for a new one.

Brezhnev, who recently took on the role of chief of state to complement his more important position as general secretary of the Communist Party, has wanted to meet with Carter for some time.

But some Soviet officials have insisted on the likelihood of a new strategic arms accord before such a meeting should be held. That was also the view of the previous administration.

But Brzezinski and Carter both have said publicly that there was value in a Carter-Brezhnev meeting even without a new arms control treaty.

Common eyes budgets in 'briefing'

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

It took two hours of explanation, but after hearing him out the City-County Common members Tuesday night gave tentative approval to a $2,388,693 budget submitted by City-County Health Director E. D. Lyman.

They even granted some changes to make it more to his liking. Seven-tenths of a laboratory scientist position, eliminated by Mayor Helen Boosalis, was restored with a promise from Lyman to cut $10,000 to make up for it.

An attempt by County Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton to block the elimination of a dental screening program at the Open Door Health clinic got nowhere. Dr. Lyman's argument that a full-time dental hygienist at $11,277 could provide better service than the $13,600 Open Door program won out.

Dr. Lyman agreed to investigate ways of continuing to serve low-income clients at Open Door by shifts in scheduling.

The Common did not act on an objection by Health Board chairman George Preece to $54,800 for alcoholism outreach at the Indian Center. The $16,786 position for director of chemical dependency programs was approved.

An attempt by Councilman Dick Baker to deny Dr. Lyman a cost-of-living and a merit raise was defeated. Lyman's salary will increase from $43,775 to $46,044, with an additional $2,756 merit increase which Dr. Lyman says he will refuse.

Also Tuesday night, the Common endorsed a $1,098,072 budget for the Commission on Aging, which will include extension of services to other counties in a 7-county region.

In addition, the city and county officials agreed to "very tentatively" budget $91,000 jointly toward purchase and remodeling of the former W. T. Grant Bldg., 1023 O St., as a multi-purpose senior citizen center.

The negotiated price for the property is being kept secret. A good share of the cost would be borne by the federal government.

Eric McMasters successfully chopped $29,486 from the budget of the Pre-Trial Diversion Program to win approval of a final request for $176,795. The controversial position of evaluator, at a salary of $18,968 annually, will be phased out by next June.

As Councilman Joe Hampton said after the tiring, 3½-hour meeting, it was really only an advisory "briefing session" to prepare Council and County Board members for the votes that really count, when these joint budgets are considered by each body separately.

Momentum dulls 'Cabaret' impact

By David Meisenholder

Flash and dazzle abound as the University of Nebraska Repertory Theater opens its 1977 summer season with the Broadway musical "Cabaret."

Director Rex McGraw and his performers at times wowed their audience in Howell Theater with one of the most touching and truly entertaining American musicals ever written.

"Cabaret" not only has tuneful music and eye-pleasing dances but also has impact in its story line and lyrics.

But it was this impact with which the repertory company had trouble. The Tuesday night performance played to a small house lacked a unified consistency of quality.

When the musical began and the huge red sign spelled out letter by letter "Caberet," when the singers and dancers exploed the song "Wilkominen" (Welcome), when the orchestra played in tune and the dancers moved in the 1920 flapper style . . . all seemed to be wow.

But, generally, the musical continued to lose momentum.

Although Kathleen Morrow sang with professionalism, her acting just could not carry the leading role of Sally Sowles. Her supporting actor, Cliff Radcliff, seemed to try his best to keep the scenes on the move, but to little avail.

Actress Patricia L. Ryan who played Fraulein Schneider was outstanding throughout the evening. Her acting was superb, and when she sang "So What?" and "What Would You Do?" the evening took on needed glitter.

Another highlight was when Mitchel Tebo and chorus sang "Tomorrow Belongs to Me" — later to be reprised by the outstanding voice of Missy Critchfield who portrayed Fraulein Kost.

The technical aspects of this production are fantastic. The revolving stages by Daniel Proett and stage lighting by Jerry Lewis are something seldom to be seen in Lincoln.

Michael Cesario's costumes were well designed and the dances by Rich Rahn were exciting. Music Director Douglas Anderson's combo simply played too loud.

"Cabaret" continues in the Temple Building, 12th and R St., on various dates throughout the summer — being intermixed with three other productions by this impressive theatrical troupe.

Grain service inspection chief named

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Agriculture Committee has approved President Carter's nomination of L. E. Bartelt, former assistant director of the California State Agriculture Department, as head of the Federal Grain Inspection Service.

The service, an agency of the Agriculture Department, controls inspection of grain at all ports and supervises private and state grain inspectors at interior markets.

The agency was created by a 1976 law stiffening grain inspection regulations.

VW denies plans to make motorcycles

Wolfsburg, West Germany (AP) — Volkswagenwerk AG denied published reports that it plans to make motorcycles.

A VW spokesman said the automaker had considered such a move as part of its effort to diversify, but rejected it as unfavorable.

Parents ask for soundproof walls

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

A group of parents from Morley Elementary School asked the Lincoln Board of Education to install soundproof walls in several areas used as open space classrooms.

The parents want to decrease the noise and confusion in the areas which can accommodate more than 100 students, said Earl Visser, who presented petitions with more than 100 signatures to the board Tuesday night.

Parents wanted to get their bid in for the walls before final budget decisions were made, Visser said.

The board made no decision on the walls but did increase wages for principals and all nonteaching staff before beginning final budget work.

The wage increases, in cents-per-hour for some employes, will average about 8.6% — the same average increase going to the teaching staff next year. However, raises for individuals and groups of employes will not always be 8.6% said Supt. John Prasch.

For administrators, including principals, increases will range from $945 to $2,041 per year with the annual salaries ranging from $17,030 to $29,515 depending on the job, years of experience and educational background.

The board also agreed to sell the city about 5 acres of school land for a park in the South Salt Creek Neighborhood. The $54,000 land price will be partially offset by a land exchange, with the city giving the school several alleys and vacated roadways.

Tuition charged to students attending the Lincoln public schools from other districts was raised about 18% for the next school year.

These tuition rates — $1,771 for elementary and $2,035 for secondary — are above the actual estimated per pupil cost per year but within the 20% addition allowed by law, administrators said.

Charges for nondistrict children in the special education programs range from $440 a year for speech therapy to $10,175 for profoundly handicapped children.

After some debate on the merits of an East High School class in quilting, the board approved a list of new junior and senior high school courses which will begin next fall.

"Where does quilting fall under our basic education scheme," asked Stan Linnertz.

The classes include an accelerated math program for talented junior high students in Culler, Dawes, Lefler, Mickle and Pound, new specialized art classes at Northeast and Southeast High Schools, debate at Lincoln High and philosophy at East High.

The board also received the mayor's energy award for energy conservation efforts during the past two years. Conservation measures included some remodeling, inservice training for staff, reduction in the use of natural gas and turning down 4,312 school thermostats in the evening and on weekends.

Lincoln man's hearing closed

Council Bluffs, Iowa (AP) — Council Bluffs Magistrate Dan McTaggart Monday honored a defense request to close to the public and the news media the preliminary hearing of a man charged with assault with intent to commit a felony sodomy.

Iowa law states that such a request must be granted.

McTaggart said he would rule later this week in the case of Douglas G. Voegler, 26, of Lincoln.

Exon: Support fails school aid bill 'referendum-proofing'

Gov. J. James Exon said Tuesday he doesn't think teachers and school board members supported the actions of their lobbyists who tried to make the school aid bill referendum-proof

The Star erred in quoting Exon on that statement in a story which ran Tuesday

The story mistakenly said Exon didn't think rank and file teachers and school board members supported education lobbyists' efforts to start a counter petition drive of their own should an effort be made to repeal the school aid bill

That bill, LB33, which boosts state school aid by $20 million over the next three years, was vetoed by Exon. The Legislature overrode the governor's veto.

Exon said he didn't think many of the state's teachers and school board members approved of action taken by supporters of LB33 to make the law referendum-proof.

State senators and lobbyists for the Nebraska State Education Association and State School Boards Association tried to tie a direct appropriation of funds to the Department of Education in LB33.

A section of the state constitution says that a referendum may not be invoked against laws "making appropriations for the expense of the state government or a state institution existing at the time of the passage of such act "

Because the bill initially included the appropriation, supporters hoped citizens would not be able to vote on the $20 million appropriation, Exon said.

Exon said Monday he would not take an active role in seeking signatures on petitions to place the school aid question on the ballot. In 1974 enough signatures were obtained to place a $100 million school aid increase on the ballot Nebraska voters repealed that law.

Last week officials of the education association and school board group said they would mount a counter petition drive to repeal LB518 if a petition drive were initiated against LB33. LB518 will increase exemptions on farm and business inventories and farm equipment from 62.5% to 100% over the next three years.

Maine pipeline aided by law

Augusta, Maine (AP) — A bill to speed up the processing of environmental permits for a $2 billion natural gas pipeline that would pass through Maine has become law over the veto of Gov. James B Longley

The Senate voted 28-2 to override the governor's objections to the measure aimed at helping the Tenneco Atlantic Pipeline Co build a 210-mile portion of the pipeline across Maine

Sen. Murphy says Exon made school bill 'deal'

Wayne (AP) — State Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City has charged that Gov J James Exon made "a deal with some factions of the legislature" over legislation to increase the money the state gives local education

In a speech to the Kiwanis club Monday, Murphy said Exon agreed to send a bill adding $20 million to state aid, which he vetoed, back to the lawmakers in plenty of time for them to override his veto — "thus leaving the governor free to say he was not responsible for the tax hike" the bill would require

The bill added $20 million a year for the next three years to the state's aid to education.

"The deal was made that he would veto it as a gesture and return it to the legislature within two hours so that it could, as he was aware it would, be overridden," Murphy said

"He could have very nicely waited 24 hours to veto that bill and we could have done nothing about it "

Murphy said, "The governor sent that (bill) back knowing full well that he was adding that $20 million and the ultimate $60 million, and I don't think any political hay should be made on his part.

"I don't think he should hold the Legislature at a disadvantage because he had the ultimate last shot," Murphy said

Exon vetoed the appropriation in the Legislature's final days

Let's hear it for grand old Italian fighters, O'Brien and Murphy

By Roger Simon
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Chicago — Only in America:

In a few months the kick-off celebration for the Italian-American Boxing Hall of Fame will be held in Chicago. This is a fine idea. Italian-Americans have made an enormous contribution to boxing and that should be recognized.

And what Italian-American boxing heroes are likely to be honored? Well, Marty O'Brien for one. And Kid Murphy and Steve Kid Sullivan and Jimmy Kelly.

If it occurs to you that the names of O'Brien, Murphy, Sullivan and Kelly do not sound like the names of men who just stepped off the boat from Palermo, then you are about to learn something from one of the strangest chapters in American history.

Take Marty O'Brien. A feisty little featherweight who fought in the late Twenties. He never became very famous then, but he is well remembered today. And that is because Marty O'Brien's real name was Martin Sinatra. And he had a kid named Frank, who, I believe, went into the singing business.

Now take Jimmy Kelly. Jimmy Kelly fought in Chicago in the days when everyone crowded onto barges in the Chicago River because boxing on city land was illegal. It was his first fight and was expected to go the usual 30 or 40 rounds. The rounds didn't have any set time. They ended when a guy got knocked down. If he could get up again, the next round began.

Well Jimmy Kelly was named Angelo Yario, which is what he wrote down for the ring announcer when the time came. The announcer took one look at the Italian scrawl and said, "And in this corner . . . Jimmy Kelly!"

Yario went on to win the fight, wondering all the time who the hell Jimmy Kelly was. "You're on a winning streak," his manager told him. "Keep the name Kelly."

The man who has researched all this is George Randazzo, who has been collecting pictures and information about Italian-American fighters for 30 of his 35 years.

"Italians couldn't get fights in the Twenties because the announcers couldn't pronounce their names,"Randazzo said. "So they picked Irish names instead."

Actually, Randazzo is being very charitable. The amount of prejudice against Italians and other immigrants entering America in the 1900s was considerable, and taking an Irish or some other more acceptable name was one way to avoid this.

The Jewish fighters of the time were in the same position as the Italians. Which is why lightweight champ Barney Ross was really Barney Rasofsky and welterweight champ Jackie Fields was known in the neighborhood as Jacob Finkelstein. And when Bushy Graham won the New York bantamweight title, the folks who knew him yelled, "Hooray for Izzy Schwartz!"

Even though ethnic Americans took different names they still got tremendous support from their countrymen. This often led to strange double lives. Johnny Dundee, for instance, was Joseph Corrara from Sciacca, Sicily. For reasons best known to him the little featherweight was always billed as "The Scotch Wop."

"There is nothing wrong with these men changing their names," Randazzo said. "But it is time to honor them under their real names. Even though the Hall of Fame will be for Italian-Americans, we intend to start a youth foundation for kids of all races and ethnic backgrounds."

Randazzo has managed to track down all the living Italian-American boxing champs in America. There are 21 of them and they have all agreed to come to the Hall of Fame kick-off dinner on Sept. 16 A little suprisingly, Randazzo has already sold 1,200 tickets at $50 per ticket.

"Let me show you this letter," Randazzo said, pawing through a stack of mail. He passed up letters from Frank Sinatra and Watergate judge John Sirica (who was once a professional fighter) and came to a letter scrawled in ball point pen across some loose-leaf notebook paper.

It was from the wife of Sammy Angott (Salvatore Engotti) who became lightweight champion of the world in 1943 by beating Willie Pep (Willie Papaleo). Angott was a walk-in slugger, a real brawler, but that was long ago. Now he is crippled with arthritis and is in a wheelchair Because he has difficulty writing, his wife wrote the letter She said it would not be easy to get her husband to the Hall of Fame dinner, but not to worry

"Sammy is feeling a little better," she wrote. "He told me to tell you. 'I'll make it if I have to crawl.' "

Kelleher honored

Banquets honoring sports heroes are faily common around the country. Members of the Super Bowl championship team return home at the end of the season and are given the keys to the city, a ride down main street in an open convertible and a banquet for which the whole town turns out.

The same thing happens to Olympic winners — champs in every sport. Many cities organize 'Athlete of the Year' dinners.

Well, Newport Beach, Calif., has gone one-up on everybody else. That city just finished spending an entire week honoring ex-Colorado fullback Jim Kelleher. You might ask why, since Kelleher is from Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Newport Beach called it "Irrelevant Week." The reason Kelleher was the object of the city's affection was because he was the last man chosen in the NFL's football draft

Actually, it was "Irrelevant Week II." All this nonsense was the brain child of a guy named Paul Salata, a one-time end for USC and the San Francisco 49ers. Appropriately, nobody seems to remember — or care — which end he played.

Congressional record

Kelleher's "week" was kicked off in proper style. California Congressman Robert Badham stopped the debate on the energy crisis, the concern over the cold war in the Middle East, or whatever else was being discussed, to enter the following in the Congressional Record·

"Mr. Speaker, it is with a sense of pride that I rise to pay tribute to Jim Kelleher, who has become in Newport Beach, California, a symbol of what is great in America.

"Kelleher is distinguished by the fact he was the 335th draft choice. The only reason he was not 336th is that they quit at 335. The important thing is that he probably will not play for an NFL team next year anyway, and besides, no one can remember who drafted him.

"So that my colleagues will understand the importance of Irrelevant Week, I should like to explain that when the surf is up and the westerly breezes are filling sails, pursuits such as study, high finance and office hours become irrelevant.

"As that great philosopher once said, 'It isn't whether you win or lose, it's whether or not you sit on the beach and have the right to play out your option.' So it is with Jim Kelleher, who may never even have an option to play out.

"The world is full of Jim Kellehers, who happily play out their options every week, unaware of the Chinese proverb which exhorts us all to fish or cut bait and warns that when the going gets tough, the tough say, 'Forget it, man, it's not relevant.' "

Jersey of the day

At the opening banquet last Monday, the Colorado fullback wore battered jeans and the jersey of the day. It was navy blue and said, "Kelleher — 335." Dozens of other sported the same shirt.

It seemed only fitting that his press conference started 45 minutes late. Nobody seemed to care. The reason it was delayed? His luggage had been lost at the airport. Perfect.

Among the guests were Miss Newport Harbor, Miss Balboa, Miss Corona del Mar and Miss Bayshores. They showered Kelleher with gifts. He was handed a horn. "One toot is for Miss Balboa, two toots for Miss Newport Harbor and so on," he was told. "I'll start tooting a little later," Kelleher said.

The initial celebration a year ago — Irrelevant Week I — went so well they've decided to make it an annual affair in Newport Beach. Kelvin Kirk, the 1976 winner out of the University of Dayton, immortalized the event by arriving a day late, taking the wrong plane home, later reporting to the wrong pro training camp and then washing out in just three days.

Among the week's activities for Kelleher was a tour of Universal Studios, a special College Night at Disneyland, a day at Hollywood Park where they had a special race named for Kelleher, then a trip to Las Vegas to climax the festivities.

Incidentally, it was the Minnesota Vikings which drafted Kelleher last. That caused organizer Salata to present Jim a jock strap. "When they start telling you that you can't carry Chuck Foreman's jock, you'll be ready," Salata said. "You can practice by carrying this one."

American teen surprise of Wimbledon

Wimbledon, England (AP) — John McEnroe, 18 years and 4 months old, upset Phil Dent of Australia Tuesday and became the youngest men's semi-finalist in 100 years of Wimbledon.

The fair-haired left-hander from Douglaston, N. Y., who plays as an amateur among big-money professionals, won 6-4, 8-9, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

He set another record at the same time. He is the first man ever to make the semifinals of the world's greatest tennis tournament after playing through the qualifying competition.

"I wasn't sure if I would get into the tournament at all," McEnroe said. "And when I did get in, I didn't expect to win more than a few games in each set."

The young hero of the centenary tournament now faces the No. 1 seed, Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., who defeated Byron Bertram of South Africa 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

The other semifinal will be between Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y., and defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden.

Gerulaitis overran Billy Martin of Palos Verdes, Calif., 6-2, 8-9, 6-2, 6-2 while Borg played some of his finest tennis to win 6-0, 8-6, 6-3 over Ilie Nastase of Romania, the man he beat in last year's final.

McEnroe, an excitable youngster with a white headband around his long, blond hair, had many moments of frustration before overcoming the 13th-seeded Dent. He threw his racquet, shouted at a linesman and fell full length on the grass more than once, holding his head in his hands.

But he brought his emotions under control and came from behind to win the last two sets—just when it looked as if Dent, nine years his senior, was taking control.

McEnroe's most prolific stroke was his backhand. He hit a magnificent backhand past the Australian to break service at 4-3 in the final set. It proved to be the shot that won the match. He kept his cool and held on to his service.

McEnroe's most despairing moment came in the second-set tie-breaker when he had set-point at 7-6 and double-faulted. He thought his second serve was on the line and argued with the linesman. The umpire told him to play on and there was some booing from the crowd.

McEnroe then lost the tiebreak 9-7 and sat on his chair with his head buried in his hands.

It was a long time before he recovered his poise. He lost his service in the first game of the third set, broke back twice to take a 3-1 lead, but lost his own service again twice in succession.

At this stage, McEnroe was making a lot of errors and few would have picked him to win. Then he settled down and started playing his best strokes again.

Dent contributed to his own downfall by double-faulting 13 times. His lapses played a vital part in the games that turned the match. He hit one doublefault in losing the seventh game of the first set—the only service break in the set—and two in the crucial seventh game of the final set.

McEnroe was listed No. 270 in last year's computerized world rankings, but he ranks second in the U.S. Junior list, behind Larry Gottfried.

He said he does not take prize money because he has been planning to go to Stamford University.

"But after my success here I shall have to talk it over with my parents," he said.

John McEnroe, the surprising U.S. 18-year-old, returns the ball against Phil Dent.

"Connors? No, I've never played him. In fact. I don't think I've ever even met him. But I would know him if I saw him."

Connors had to work hard for his victory over Bertram, a broad-shouldered man with powerful ground strokes.

Speed and power carried Connors to victory. He broke Bertram's service to win the third set 6-4 with a forehand that flashed past the South African as he stood on his baseline. The ball travelled so fast the Bertram made no attempt at a return

It was the turning point for Connors. At one set all, he had battled in vain to establish supremacy throughout a hard and evenly balanced third set.

Bertram was under pressure from then on, but never stopped fighting. He had four break points in the third game of the fourth set before Connors won it. In the sixth game, Bertram had five advantage points, but eventually Connors hit two mighty forehands past him to capture his service.

Borg sped about the center court and angled his shots with such subtlety that Nastase was often immobilized

The Romanian created the usual diversions. He held up play by arguing over line calls and later complained that a bird's feather had floated down in front of him.

The umpire, Jeremy Shales, picked up a telephone and told the tournament referee. "I am reporting Nastase for time-wasting."

He forgot to switch off his microphone, so the crowd of 15,000 heard it over the public address system

Gerulaitis, who looks a little like Borg without a beard, reached the semifinals for the first time with a convincing win over Martin. But he was not satisfied.

"I didn't play particularly well, and I don't think Billy did, either," Gerulaitis said. "It was the first time I had ever played on the center court. It's pretty difficult out there with the wind blowing."

The semifinals are set for Thursday.

Bucks' rookies missing

Milwaukee (UPI) — In the NBA draft earlier this month the Milwaukee Bucks got three of the top players in the nation on the first round. But Tuesday none of them was on the court during the second day of the team's rookie camp.

Kent Benson, the No. 1 selection who has been signed by the Bucks, was sidelined by minor ankle injury and the other two first round selections were out with a different "ailment" — contract troubles.

Neither Marques Johnson, the No. 3 choice, nor Ernie Grunfeld, the No. 11 choice, were present because they haven't signed contracts with the Bucks. The camp runs through Thursday and the Bucks didn't think they would be there for any of the sessions.

Cauthen rides three winners

New York (UPI) — Seventeen-year-old Steve Cauthen, the nation's leading rider, competed for the first time as a journeyman jockey Tuesday at Belmont and rode winners in his first three mounts

Cauthen lost his status as an apprentice jockey Monday. As a journeyman Cauthen will no longer ride with the benefit of a five-pound weight advantage.

Cauthen showed, however, that the weight difference probably won't affect him.

After sitting out the first race, Cauthen, who has won more than $5 million in purses over a 13-month period, began his winning streak by riding Crab Grass to a 2½-length victory in the second race. He followed with successive wins on Double Gemini (seven lengths) and Smokey Lantern (4½ lengths), before finishing out of the money in the fifth race.

Cip names Baack new grad aide

Tom Baack, former Nebraska basketball standout under Joe Cipriano from 1965-68, is returning to the Cornhusker basketball ranks to serve as Nebraska's graduate assistant, Cipriano announced.

A three-year starting forward at Nebraska, Baack was the Huskers all time leading scorer with 1,293 points, until Jerry Fort (1972-76) broke that mark with 1,882 points. The Fort Wayne, Ind., native holds the Nebraska and Big 8 record for the highest career free throw percentage, a .839 mark.

Born in North Platte, Baack worked for the National Bank of commerce for two years, following his graduation from the University in 1968. He then was a graduate assistant at Brigham Young University, under head coach Glenn Potter, who was an assistant coach under Cipriano from 1963-70 Since 1974, Baack had been the assistant basketball and head track coach at Green Mountain High School in Lakewood, Colo.

Barb Harris at training camp

Barb Harris of the Lincoln Swim Club is attending a two-week training camp at the U.S. Olympic Regional Training Center to Squaw Valley, Calif.

The camp, which started Sunday and runs through July 9, is part of the Olympic Development effort in identifying potential 1980 Olympians.

Billy Hunter hops aboard merry-go-round

Associated Press

Step right up, Billy Hunter. Welcome aboard the managerial merry-go-round. Just hand your line-up card to the man at the gate and away you go.

As a matter of fact, a lot of managers have been going away this season. Five teams have changed pilots in the first three months of the season.

Four of those clubs have handled the switches conventionally. One manager is fired and a new one is hired. Oakland owner Charles O. Finley has sacked skippers so frequently, he could probably do it in his sleep.

Oakland, of course, axed its manager. So did Cleveland, San Diego and the New York Mets. Goodbye Jack McKeon, Frank Robinson, John McNamara and Joe Frazier. Hello, Bobby Winkles, Jeff Torborg, Alvin Dark and Joe Torre.

Of that newly hired group, Winkles and Dark have both managed before. And, both have been fired before. It comes with the territory.

Then there is the fifth team, the Texas Rangers. They are Hunter's new employers . . . but before he gets to feeling too secure, the ex-Baltimore coach should remember that he is the fifth guy to make out Ranger line-ups this season.

This has been a slightly bizarre season for the Rangers— especially for the men in the manager's seat. They started with Frank Lucchesi, who got himself decked in spring training by one of his players and then decked during the season by management.

When Lucchesi got sick one day in Boston, coach Pat Corrales managed the Rangers in a doubleheader. They responded by losing both games.

Then, when the Rangers got sick at the turnstile, Lucchesi was fired. His replacement would have been Eddie Stanky, but he also got sick—homesick after a single game.

That produced coach Connie Ryan, a one-week interim choice who lasted only until Hunter, hale and healthy, could be hired.

For those interested in managerial trivia, Lucchesi finished his term at Texas with a 31-29 record. Ryan was 1-4 and Corrales 0-2, although some people insist on counting those games under Lucchesi's log. The most successful Ranger skipper, of course, was Stanky, who left with a perfect 1-0 record.

The first manager to lose his job this season was McNamara at San Diego. He was a fallout victim of the winter player revolution. Owner Ray Kroc had invested large numbers in the free-agent market and when the Padres lost anyway, Kroc figured the best solution was to send McNamara packing.

He was replaced by Dark, who until then was coaching first base for the Chicago Cubs When Dark left for San Diego, the Cubs offered his job to Stanky, who turned it down, preferring to remain on the college campus—at least until Texas came around. In fact, it turned out that Stanky preferred to remain on the college campus after Texas came around, too.

Another free-agent victim was New York's Frazier The Mets stayed out of the big contract war and when the team floundered on the field, the manager was the target. Finally, he was sent on his way and replaced by Torre, who is going around for the first time.

Cleveland was hailed for being the first team to hire a black manager when Frank Robinson became the club's pilot in 1974. The Indians also became the first team to fire a black manager, replacing Robinson with coach Jeff Torborg, who won seven in a row after he was named. Cleveland had also won two in a row just before Robinson was canned, proving that even winning sometimes can't save the manager's job

The strangest firing had to be McKeon at Oakland. He had a team that was decimated by the free-agent exodus and was just one game under 500 at 26-27 when Finley gave him the thumb.

McKeon, of course, has been fired before and, if it is any comfort to him, Finley has fired managers before.

Hyland, Deeter lead in city golf test

The list of leaders at the end of the first round of the Lincoln City Women's Golf Championships isn't going to surprise anyone.

Defending champion Jean Hyland, who has captured the title six of the last seven years and has claimed the crown 14 times in all, is tied for first.

Deadlocked for the lead after Tuesday's opening round at the Hillcrest Country Club is Jane Deeter, who finished fourth last summer. Both recorded seven-over-par 83s.

Four shots off the pace in third place is nine-time champion Dorothy Schwartzkopf. She won two years ago and tied with daughter Christie for second place last summer.

Deeter, who just completed her sophomore season for the University of Nebraska women's golf team, was in an excellent position to make a move toward her first city championship until she had a disastrous four-hole stretch late in her opening round.

"I played the front nine quite well and was just one over at the turn," Deeter said. "Then I birdied No. 10 and parred the next two. I was even-par going into No. 13."

A bogey and three double-bogeys followed before she recovered to par the final two holes.

Hyland had a much steadier round on the way to her 83.

"I had no double bogeys and managed a couple of nice putts — one of about 20 feet for a birdie on No. 3. But, I also missed some very makeable putts. At least three were dead on line but stopped short. One actually hung over the lip of the cup, but wouldn't fall."

An unexpected cold wind and rainy weather sent scores soaring Just 27 players broke 100

"I certainly wasn't prepared for the cold," Schwartzkopf said. "As a result, I never did get warm or loosened up through the entire round But, I've been putting better this year I'm not too unhappy, considering the weather."

The emergence of Deeter to challenge the perennial championship pair doesn't surprise Schwartzkopf.

"At the recent state women's medal play tournament, of the low 14 golfers, all but three were 21 years of age or younger," she recalls "Jean Hyland and I were two of those three, but the youngsters are really coming on strong And I think that's great "

Does that make Deeter the favorite to claim her first championship in the 54-hole affair which will conclude with a round at Pioneers Wednesday and at the Lincoln Country Club Thursday?

"No way," Jane answers quickly "Jean Hyland is really consistent. And she has a great short game. I'm going to have to chip and putt well if I hope to stay with her "

Goodson homer hands Dodgers 3-2 triumph

United Press International

Ed Goodson hit a leadoff pinch-hit solo homer in the ninth inning and Charlie Hough earned his 18th save of the season Tuesday night when the Los Angeles Dodgers scored a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Goodson, batting for reliever Mike Garman, hit his homer off Max Leon, snapping a 2-2 tie and sending Leon to his third loss. Garman received credit for his fourth victory when Hough pitched a hitless ninth.

Steve Hargan carried a 2-1 lead into the top of the eighth inning but the Dodgers tied the score after Steve Garvey was safe on an error by third baseman Jerry Roster. Rick Monday lined out to third but Royster threw wild toward first attempting a double play and Garvey went to second. He scored on a double by Dusty Baker.

The Cincinnati Reds scored an 11-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Montreal Expos 4-2, the Houston Astros beat the San Diego Padres 5-1, the St. Louis Cardinals swept the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-1 and 13-3, and the Philadelphia Phillies topped the New York Mets 3-1, in other National League games

Johnny Bench drove in five runs with a homer and a two doubles and Ken Griffey had a triple and a homer to lead the Reds over the Giants. Doug Capilla earned credit for his first major league victory with the late-inning relief aid of Paul Moskau. Jack Clark hit a tworun homer for the Giants.

Pinch-hitter Gene Clines' sacrifice fly drove in the winning run for the Cubs in the 10th inning and provided Rick Reuschel with his 11th triumph. Pinch-hitter Greg Gross followed with another sacrifice fly driving in the second run of the inning. Bruce Sutter received credit for his 21st save for the Cubs while Will McEnaney was the loser.

Bob Watson and Enos Cabell each drove in two runs and Joaquin Andujar pitched a five-hitter raising his record to 9-4 for the Astros, who dealt the Padres their eighth straight loss. Gene Tenace spoiled Andujar's shutout in the sixth with a run-scoring triple.

Buddy Schultz pitched a fivehitter for 7 1-3 innings and Keith Hernandez had three hits for the Cardinals in the first game with the Pirates. Ken Reitz hit two homers, including a grand slam, and drove in eight runs to lead the Cardinals' 13-hit attack in the second game.

Greg Luzinski drove in two runs with a double and a homer and Ron Reed pitched 4 1-3 innings of shutout relief for the Phillies, who handed the Mets their sixth loss in a row. Luzinski snapped a 1-1 tie with a homer in the eighth inning and Bake McBride added an insurance run with a ninthinning homer.

Detroit hands Red Sox fifth setback in row

United Press International

Ron LeFlore, making a comeback from last season's knee surgery, got off to a slow start this year but the knee seems sound now and the Tigers' center fielder is slowly building his average to .300

LeFlore's single up the middle with two out in the ninth Tuesday broke a 2-2 tie and gave Detroit a 3-2, come-from-behind victory over Boston It was the Red Sox' fifth straight loss

The Tigers trailed 2-1 going into the eighth when LeFlore surprised everyone by laying down a bunt single. Pinch-hitter Tim Corcoran singled him to third and Steve Kemp tied it up with a sacrifice fly.

Phil Mankowski started the winning rally in the ninth with a one-out single to right Chuck Scrivener's sacrifice bunt moved Mankowski to second and LeFlore stroked the game-winning hit off reliever Bill Campbell.

Fred Lynn's homer in the first and Carl Yastrzemski's 15th of the year in the seventh accounted for Boston's two runs.

LeFlore's three-for-five performance raised his average to .278.

Elsewhere in the American League, Toronto and New York split a pair, the Blue Jays taking the opener 8-5 and the Yankees the nightcap 5-1 in 11 innings, Minnesota dumped Milwaukee 8-3 and Chicago topped Seattle 10-4.

Graig Nettles' two-run double sparked a four-run, 11th inning rally to salvage a split after Reggie Jackson's error on a fly ball opened the way for a four-run, seventh-inning rally that gave the Blue Jays the opener

Roy White and Chris Chambliss started the 11th inning of the second game with singles. After a sacrifice moved them both up, Mickey Rivers bounced a slow roller to short that went for an RBI single. Nettles then hit a drive to the top of the wall in right that glanced off the glove of Otto Velez. Nettles came all the way around on second baseman Dave McKay's errant relay throw.

Rod Carew, now batting .407, extended his hitting streak to 10 games while Glenn Adams and Dan Ford drove in two runs apiece in the Twins victory over the Brewers. Carew had one-for-three, including an RBI with a sacrifice fly in the first Steve Brye had a triple and a homer to pace Milwaukee's attack.

Lamar Johnson and Jorge Orta blasted two-run homers and Richie Zisk added a solo shot to pace the White Sox to victory. Francisco Barrios went the distance, walking only one batter and striking out four to raise his record to 7-3

Amos Otis and Buck Martinez hit run-scoring extra base hits in the eighth inning off Frank Tanana to give the Kansas City Royals a 3-1 victory over the California Angels behind the two-hit pitching of Dennis Leonard.

Leonard improved his record to 6-8 while Tanana suffered his second straight one-run loss.

Falstaff upsets Misty Lounge

Fourth-place Falstaff dumped league-leading Misty Lounge 5-1 Tuesday night at Ballard Field to tighten up the AAA fast pitch league race.

Misty (14-2) now leads second-place Valentino's (11-2) by just one and one-half games Third place Dick Flynn Buick (10-4) is three games back and Falstaff (10-5) is now three and one-half back.

Bill Slaughter had three hits, including a home run, and drove in three runs to lead Falstaff, which scored two in the first, one in the third and two more in the fifth. Misty's lone run came on Jerry Motz' second-inning home run.

Larry Swanson Auto gained its third win of the season, defeating Sweep Left 8-5 in Tuesday's nightcap. The winners garnered six runs in the fourth inning.

Jerry Campbell hit a two-run home run and Dan Worley had a two-run triple for Swanson Auto

College bowl game added

Seattle (AP) — A new post-season collegiate football game matching the best, seniors from the Pac-8 against their counterparts from the Big Ten will be held in the Kingdome in January.

The head coach of the Seattle Seahawks, Jack Patera, and his staff will coach the Pac-8 team and Jack Pardee, head coach of the Chicago Bears, and his staff will coach the Big Ten team

The game, which will be called the Olympia Challenge Bowl and sponsored by Olympia Brewing Co., will be played before a nationally televised audience Jan 14.

In the future, an all-star team from a different conference will challenge the defending champion, Otis Cross, executive director of the Challenge Bowl, said at a news conference Tuesday. He said additional teams may come from the Big 8, Southeast, Southwest, Western or Atlantic Coast conferences.

Golf

Tom Watson's record-setting money-winning pace extended his margin over the remainder of the PGA tour with his victory in the Western Open Sunday. Watson won $40,000 to increase his total to $269,115, compared to $214,341 for second-place Jack Nicklaus.

Watson's total for six months establishes a new high on the tour, topping the previous mark of $204,750 set by Johnny Miller in 1974.

Other sports

Jamaican sprinter Don Quarrie's winning time of :20.1 in the 200 meters event in a track and field meet in Oslo, Norway, Tuesday, was the best clocking recorded in that distance this season.

Roger Neilson has been named coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. Neilson replaces Red Kelly, coach for the past four years, whose contract was not renewed when it expired last week.

ABC-TV commentator Howard Cosell will deliver the eulogy at the funeral mass Thursday for J. Walter Kennedy, the former commissioner of the National Basketball Association. Kennedy died of cancer Sunday in Stamford, Conn.

Helen Branche Wrigley, widow of chewing gum magnate and Chicago Cubs owner Phillip K. Wrigley, died Monday in Elkhorn, Wis. Mrs. Wrigley had been hospitalized for several weeks after suffering a heart attack.

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson signed legislation Monday outlawing race track messenger betting services, but Cook County Circuit Court Judge John F. Hechinger granted a temporary restraining order which permits a large group of the services to stay in operation while they test the law in court.

Changes aboard the deck of France I, the 1970 and 1974 unsuccessful challenger for the America's Cup, continued to be made Tuesday at the Newport, R.I. shipyard. The America's Cup elimination races are scheduled to begin Aug. 4.

College hall mixes show biz, history

Kings Mills, Ohio (AP) — A mechanical Knute Rockne belting out pep talks, electronic field goal place kicking gadgets and a lot of serious history is going into the new College Football Hall of Fame.

"We're aiming more at a family audience," said Jack Wyant, project manager for the College Football Hall of Fame under construction adjacent to the Kings Island amusement park about 25 miles north of Cincinnati.

The site owned by Taft Broadcasting Co., which also owns the park, was selected last year by the 108-year-old Football Hall of Fame committee over offers from Columbus, Ohio and Knoxville, Tenn.

Opening of the hall will be delayed until next year because of changes in the project construction.

Wyant also indicated the conservative football group and the local developers have been moving slowly.

"Their first reaction was they didn't want their Hall of Fame next to an amusement park. They were very particular, and I don't blame them. We tried to show them Kings Island was a little more than an amusement park," Wyant said.

"We're like a couple of newlyweds who don't know each other very well yet. We consult back and forth quite frequently. We can't put it together in a vacuum without their input. It's a delicate balance. They've been very receptive about the approach we have taken, which is an unique concept among Halls of Fame and traditional museums," Wyant said.

The creators are trying to strike a fine balance between lore and entertainment.

"We're going to emphasize participatory exhibits and draw heavily on audio-visual techniques," Wyant said. "But we don't want to overdo the show biz at the expense of tastefully presenting hall of famers and the history of the game."

Space is limited for depicting the 499 inductees. The current plan is to have all the names cut into panels of glass. No busts. No plaques.

Outside the room there will be equipment that will enable visitors to view pictures and biographical text on any of the members.

Outside of the Hall of Fame room is an arcade, called "The Strategy Room," where visitors can try their luck at footballoriented games of skill.

Junior tennis tourney slated

The Lincoln Junior Closed tennis tournament will begin Tuesday morning at Woods Park.

Play will begin at 9 a.m. for the boys 12 and under, boys 14 and under, girls 12 and under and girls 14 and under divisions. Play for the 16 and under and 18 and under divisions for both boys and girls will begin at 1 p.m.

Play will be both singles and doubles, with a limit of one singles and one doubles entry. If at least six entries are not received for a division, two divisions will be combined.

Players must bring a new can of U.S.T.A. balls and each match will be the best two out of three sets.

All entries and fees should be sent to tournament director John P. Riggs, 2740 Austin Drive, Lincoln, Neb., 68506, and must be received by Saturday. Entry blanks are available at Woods.

Pairings will be posted at Woods by 10 a.m. Monday.

Reds still have faith in their pitching

Cincinnati (UPI) — The two-time defending world champion Cincinnati Reds' lackluster pitching so far this season has placed hopes for a third straight title in jeopardy.

But the sometimes-maligned Reds' front office is keeping the faith.

"We just need two or three well-pitched ballgames and let the bullpen rest a bit to get our ship righted and go about our business," Reds' general manager Dick Wagner said Tuesday, refusing to panic.

"We've just come off a couple of tough series with Philadelphia and Los Angeles. We've made a lot of pitching changes and we're trying to do everything we can to win a division."

The acquisition of Tom Seaver is the most notable pitching change, but that's just a fraction of a 70 per cent turnover in staff from last year.

Gone from that world championship club are the likes of Don Gullett, Gary Nolan, Pat Zachry (co-rookie of the year) and Rawly Eastwick (Fireman of the Year).

Newcomers include Joe Hoerner, Joe Henderson, Dale Murray, Woodie Fryman, Doug Capilla and Paul Moskau.

Fans have been complaining that the current crop, despite the inclusion of Seaver, doesn't match up with last year's staff and they blame the front-office for making changes they figure were not for the better.

Wagner said he would have "no comment" about the changes or any possible changes he might like to see. He insisted the Reds' pitching has only hit a temporary low point.

"You're always going to get peaks and valleys," he said, repeating that "the primary thing we need now is a couple of well-pitched games from our starters and our situation will improve a great deal. I don't think this is a permanent thing.

"A couple of weeks ago we had some fine-pitched ballgames and we had three pretty well pitched games against LA. The last game against LA was a tough one and then we had a wild one against the Giants."

In the "tough one" against LA on Sunday, rookie Moskau was knocked out in the first inning as the Dodgers scored six runs enroute to a 9-3 win in an important game.

In the "wild one" against the Giants Monday night, the Reds blew an 8-1 lead and lost 14-9. Hoerner, a 40-year-old reliever who had yielded a grand-slam homer last week, hit two batters with the bases loaded and then gave up another grand-slammer to Willie McCovey. It was McCovey's second homer of the inning.

"It was an unusual occurrence," said Wagner, brushing aside Hoerner's wildness and home run balls. "He just had a tough time of it. One can't expect perfection every day."

The Reds' front office also has been criticized for sacrificing the promising Zachry for Seaver. Some fans figured the power-laden Reds would have been better off to give up a good hitter rather than a good pitcher.

"We had decided we wouldn't trade any of our regular eight," said Wagner. "We thought a lot of Zachry, but you can't get something for nothing. The Mets have gone more for the future and we've gone for now. We have every opportunity to repeat (as world champs).

"We're known as a hitting ballclub, but we've had good enough pitching to win. When you have fine hitters, you can score a lot of runs. Other teams may be built more on pitching than hitting, so you play according to the type of club you have."

Wagner figured the Reds have "several outstanding" pitchers in the minors who soon will be ready to help the club, but a couple brought up so far — Tom Hume and Moskau — have not helped.

Hume already has been shipped back to the minors and Moskau has been unimpressive in two starts.

"But Moskau's starts were against a couple of good clubs, Philadelphia and Los Angeles," noted Wagner. "We think he has the gumption and ability to come back and do well. We're not concerned about him at this point."

Cincinnati newspapers Tuesday berated the Reds' pitching as "horrible."

"I might agree for last night (giving the Giants 14 runs) but I won't agree for the whole staff or whole season," said Wagner. "One game doesn't make a season. We've got a fine ballclub. Our job is to win and we can do it."

The 'learning' process

When your youngster comes home from school and tells you guns are bad, hunting is bad, nuclear energy is good and there's nothing to worry about when it comes to saving the environment from pollution and urban sprawl, you know something is up.

It happens. Maybe not in Lincoln, but it happens. Some schools are leading youngsters to believe guns are bad, hunting is nothing more than ruthless killing of animals, nuclear energy is the salvation of our electrical power shortage.

The National Audubon Society recently uncovered the nuclear energy propaganda infiltrating the school systems. In its upcoming July issue of Audubon Magazine, the Society reports an educational game being distributed free to schools by the electric power industry is "little more than slick promotion for nuclear energy."

Called "The Energy Environment Game," the game, sponsored by the Edison Electric Institute in New York, brings with it the theme that "reasonable, responsible people are for more power plants, especially nuclear plants, while unreasonable, irresponsible people — conservationists and other 'oddballs' — are against all new power plants," according to Marvin Zeldin, author of the Audubon article.

The game sets up a fictional community with a new power plant. The children play the parts of the governor's commission, citizen's task force, utility executives and others who would be involved in real life public hearings on the issue.

32 roles in all

There are 32 roles in all, including lawyers, housewives, conservation leaders, et al. Roles cards indicate the parts students must play. The roles cards taint the image of the opposing forces, according to Zeldin.

To give students the idea conservationists oppose all power plant construction is "to libel serious, responsible and intelligent men and women who have raised legitimate questions about specific proposed power plants, about safety of nuclear power, and about lack of technology to store high-level radioactive wastes generated by nuclear power plants safely and permanently for the literally thousands of years some wastes will remain lethal," Zeldin writes.

Since 1974, at $15 per game, the Edison company has delivered some 5,050 of the games to schools, member utility companies and to companies not associated with the firm.

A check with the Lincoln school system indicated the game is not now in use in Lincoln but Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, felt the game sounds as if it would be a valuable game for students.

"I think it would be a valuable game to the students to show the workings of such a decision," Brandt said of the nuclear power game. "But to my knowledge, it is not now in use."

Selection process

Brandt indicated the selection process for such games as films is a judgment affair. "We have a group to review material and we have a set of criteria the material should meet. Our criteria is not specific in this area so we just have to use our own judgment.

"We have a lot of materials made available to use with one-sided outlooks but what we try to do is show the other view as well," Brandt said. "It shouldn't be our intention as a school district to sway a student's thinking on issues.

"If we bend over backwards in any instance, it would be in the protection of the environment," he said, pointing out the need to preserve along with the need for progress. "We try to show both sides and let the students make up their minds."

Mystery surrounds theft of mare in foal

Paris, Ky. (UPI) — The anxious vigil which began last Saturday continued Tuesday at Claiborne Farm in the lush Kentucky Bluegrass Country.

Tuesday marks the fourth day since thieves broke down a wooden fence and stole the 10-year-old thoroughbred mare, Fanfreluche, in foal to 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat.

And thus far, the reason for the theft is as much of a mystery as ever.

Both Seth Hancock, whose mother, Waddell, widow of the late A.B. Hancock, owns Claiborne Farm where the theft occurred late last Saturday, and spokesmen for the Levesque family of Toronto, Ont., owners of the mare, say they have received no ransom or extortion notes or calls.

"We haven't heard a thing — there have been no notes or telephone calls — nothing," Hancock said Tuesday. "I sure don't have any idea why anyone would want to take her — they can't do anything with her."

Agents of the FBI and Kentucky state police detectives still are stationed daily at the farm office.

Fanfreluche, which won $238,000 at the tracks during her racing career, is valued at $500,000, largely because she is carrying the Secretariat foal. Bred four months ago, she's due to foal sometime in January.

Spokesmen for the Levesque family said the mare had not been insured.

What puzzles thoroughbred industry spokesmen the most about the theft is that without registration papers, the thief cannot breed the mare again or race the foal.

And if forged papers are used, there is a good chance, thoroughbred racing being the closed circle it is, the deception would be uncovered.

And an even more foolproof system of bloodtesting will provide almost conclusive proof of a horse's parentage. David Foye of the Jockey Club, the official thoroughbred registry, is launching the new blood testing procedure to prove a horse's parentage by matching blood types.

If the thieves are caught, they face a sentence of one to five years in prison, upon conviction, under Kentucky's new penal code.

WHA refused merger

Cleveland (UPI) — The World Hockey Association, which appears headed for absorption in the National Hockey League, once before turned down a merger agreement with astoundingly good terms, it was reported Tuesday.

Joe Zingale, president of the Cleveland Nets of World Team Tennis and once a major investor of the former WHA Cleveland Crusaders, said the first overtures were spurned four years ago.

"Nick Mileti, owner of the Crusaders, received a feeler from Bill Jennings, president of the New York Rangers, asking whether something couldn't be worked out between the two leagues," Zingale told the Cleveland Press.

They met with Jennings' prompting at his home at Rye, N.Y., and before long there were more meetings involving more people in both leagues," which led to "some very specific proposals for a merger," Zingale said.

"Frankly, I thought they were astoundingly good terms for the WHA," he added.

"In fact, because of that," he continued, "we insisted that the NHL owners agree to them first and then we would present them to the rest of the WHA owners. I figured that part would be easy.

Word came back that after a tough battle, the NHL owners had agreed, Zingale said. "We took the news to the rest of the WHA owners and to our total amazement, they turned it down flat.

"They reacted with something like 'The hell with the NHL. We've got them on the run now. Who needs them?'," Zingale said.

Running called cruel way to be kind

New York (AP) — "You've got to be cruel to be kind," said the wiry little man with the crisp accent. "You've got to embarrass some people into taking care of themselves."

Arthur Lydiard, at age 60 running more than 100 miles a week, says there's no excuse for not being fit and that common sense in distance running can be anyone's guide to feeling good.

The man who coached Peter Snell to mile and half-mile world records in the 1960s has turned his attention to coaching coaches, trying to unteach what he considers dangerous theories about improving runners.

Subject to considerable scorn over the years, the small but powerful New Zealander remains adamant that the way to train as a runner — or for that matter, as a health-seeking jogger — is to move according to one's own pace, keeping at it, not racing oneself to the point of pain and exhaustion.

That is called aerobic conditioning and it operates according to the theory that if one runs long distances until he is out of breath, he steadily increases the amount of oxygen the respiratory system and heart can process.

The object is distance and stamina, not speed.

The opposite theory — anaerobic conditioning — concentrates on speed but requires the body to operate on a sort of oxygen debt that prevents the runner from covering great distance.

Obviously, sprinters are running anaerobically when they race but they should train by aerobic method, he says.

"To race well, you must train slowly, he said, pointing to John Walker, the New Zealander who won the gold medal in the 1,500 meters at last summer's Olympic Games.

Lydiard calls it "economic" conditioning. He also calls it common sense. And he says it is good for everyone, not only the athlete.

"You see, even slow running increases arterial capacity," he said. "The fellow who can run only a few hundred yards before tiring, then has to walk 10 minutes thinks he's not getting any real exercise and may decide to quit. But even that helps his heart to work more efficently.

"You can go too fast but you can never go too slowly to develop cardiac efficiency."

The author of two books on his ideas, Lydiard now works as a public relations representative for a New Zealand building supply company part of the year, then combines his vacation with unpaid leave to travel through Europe, the United States and Canada, talking to running coaches and cultivating promising young runners — many of them women.

"I started coaching women two years ago, even though some people told me I shouldn't. They reckoned girls couldn't do the training. I reckoned they could.

"Women look so beautiful running," he said emphatically and a little wistfully.

Currently Lydiard is touring the United States trying to promote what he considers more good sense, this time about feet.

All About Cooking Beef Outdoors

Whether a picnic in the park, a barbeque in the backyard or a cookout at a campsite, hearty take along foods are a part of summer time easy-living. The Beef Industry Council and Dr. Pepper have put togehter some new summer food ideas featuring outdoor beef cookery.

Here's one unusual idea I like. For the complete 32 page booklet look for more information in the stores where Dr. Pepper is sold or write to me, I'll be glad to forward your requests.

Grill Top Garden Pot-Roast
3-4 lb. beef blade
1 pkg (0.6oz.) Italian salad dressing mix
¼c flour
1 tsp salt
½ tsp paprika
½ tsp pepper
2 c thinly slice carrots
2 c sliced zucchini cut ¼" thick
½ tsp salt

Combine salad dressing mix, flour, 1 tsp salt, paprika and pepper. Use to thoroughly dredge meat on both sides. Place meat in center of a double thick rectangle of heavy duty foil. (Twice the circumference and 8 inches longer than roast.) Sprinkly any remaining flour mixture over meat. Seal all edges tightly, leaving a small air space. Place on grill and cook at low moderate temperature for 1½ hours, turning after 1 hour. Remove packet from grill, open carefully and add vegetables and ½ tsp. salt. Reclose foil, sealing securely. Place on grill (vegetable side up) and continue cooking 30-45 more mi tes or until meat and vegetables are done.

Nebraska Arts Council wins $215,000 grant

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky announced Tuesday that the National Endowment for the Arts has awarded a $215,000 grant to the Nebraska Arts Council.

He said through his Omaha office that the grant is a part of the federal-state partnership program and will be used for programs of the Nebraska Arts Council.

He also reported that he has been notified by the Economic Development Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce of the awarding of a $500,000 grant to Nebraska.

The grant, to the Office of Nebraska State Office of Planning and Programming, will help continue a program for long-range economic growth and new jobs in the state.

The state also will provide $16,667 to complete the project, which involves identification of development opportunities and areas of potential industrial expansion, he said.

Omaha baby dead in tub

Omaha (UPI) — A 1-year-old girl was found dead in the bottom of a bathtub in her mother's home, police said Tuesday.

The body of Carmen Ann Moser, daughter of Mary Moser of Omaha, was discovered by a babysitter, John Gomez, 17, of Omaha, police said. The mother was not home when the baby was found.

Lincolnite injured slightly in collision

A Lincoln man escaped serious injury in a car-train accident southwest of Lincoln.

Wallace A. Hansen, 33, of 7125 Dudley, was treated for cuts to the head at a local hospital and released.

Hansen was slowing his car for the tracks west of S W. 56th and Pioneers Blvd., when he noticed a train nearing the crossing, he told sheriff's deputies.

He braked, and his car skidded along the gravel road and stopped on the tracks The train, traveling about 30 miles and hour, smashed into the front end of the car, according to sheriff's office reports.

Wave of selling hits stocks

New York (AP) — Stock prices fell Tuesday in afternoon wave of selling blamed on a negative forecast for next year's federal budget deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 8.48 to 915.62, bringing its loss for the past two days to 13.38 points.

Losers held a 5-3 edge on gainers at the New York Stock Exchange.

For much of the day the market drifted around Monday's closing point.

But about two hours before the close sellers moved in following a news report quoting Bert Lance, President Carter's budget director, as saying the federal budget for the fiscal year starting next Oct. 1 could run as much as $65 billion.

Though Lance was also reported to have reaffirmed the administration's commitment to a balanced budget by fiscal 1981, the projected 1978 figure evidently did not sit well with investors.

Dow Ind. -8.48

Brokers pointed out that the market also had to contend with some analysts' projections that the growth rate of the economy might turn sluggish later this year and in 1978.

Chemical stocks were a particular weak spot after an analyst quoted in the Wall Street Journal estimated flat or lower earnings next year for 10 of the 11 companies he follows in the industry.

Du Pont dropped 1½ to 115¼ as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE, and Union Carbide fell 1⅛ to 50¼. Both stocks are included in the Dow average.

Allied Chemical, the one company for which the analyst foresaw a 1978 earnings gain, [illegible] to 50¼.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials slumped 1.00 to 110.34, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was off .84 at 100.14.

British Petroleum, the day's most active issue, lost ⅛ to 16½. The stock has been heavily traded for the past several days as the British government has conducted an offering of BP stock, attracting a strong response.

Simplicity Pattern, second on the active list, slipped ⅛ to 13½ in trading that included blocks of 195,100 and 108,600 shares at that price.

Rockwell International climbed 1¾ to 37. The House rejected a proposal to drop from a pending defense appropriations bill some $1.5 billion for continued production of Rockwell's B1 bomber.

Portec, which projected flat quarterly earnings despite a substantial sales increase, lost 1¼ to 22⅜.

The NYSE's composite index fell .40 to 54.94.

Gasohol emits less carbon monoxide

United Press International

A federal energy laboratory in Oklahoma has released data showing that a car using gasohol, a grain alcohol-motor fuel blend, emits less carbon monoxide than a vehicle operating on unleaded gasoline.

Dr. William Scheller, technical adviser to the Nebraska Gasohol Committee, says he was not surprised by the test results.

The federally funded tests were conducted by the Bartlesville, Okla., energy research center, which is run by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration.

The Bartlesville test compared "the exhaust gases for cars using gasohol fuel and unleaded fuel," the University of Nebraska-Lincoln chemical engineering professor said.

Scheller said the tests were conducted for the Gasohol (or Nebraska Agriculture Products Industrial Utilization) Committee as part of the group's two-million mile road test.

The pollutant tests showed that the gasohol car emitted less carbon monoxide and less unburned hydrocarbons than the car with unleaded fuel, Scheller said. But, he said, unleaded gasoline gave off slightly less nitrogenoxides than gasohol.

Old soybeans advance 16¢

Chicago (AP) — Old crop soybean futures advanced 16 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday and marked a four successive sessions gain of more than 70 cents a bushel.

New crop soybeans lost 4 cents a bushel. Soybean oil was down as much as 75 points, or about ¾ cents a pound, while soybean meal gained $6 a ton. Corn, oats and wheat futures gained from about 2 to 3½ cents. Iced Broiler prices were mixed at the final bell with some active liquidation in the expiring July contract.

$3.2 million NETV budget OKd

A $3.2 million budget received a Nebraska Educational Television Commission approval Tuesday at its monthly meeting.

The budget will include only state government funds and not funds available from other government or private grants.

The budget stipulated only 3% salary increases, the result of legislative cuts on NETV's preliminary budget.

NETV's budget appeals have met with little success.

The board also accepted about $64,500 in bids for NETV construction throughout the state.

The largest of the bids was for $44,991 to build a tower in Falls City.

Farmers may pay more for grain storage

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Farmers who intend to store their 1977 grain at their local elevator had better ask about the new storage rates because, in some cases, the rates will be sharply higher than last year

The Nebraska Public Service commission has increased the maximum rate that a licensed elevator can charge for storing all grains to 95/1,000th of a cent per bushel per day Soybeans can be charged up to 115 1 000th of a cent per bushel per day

This means that the cost of storing a thousand bushels of grain in a commercial elevator for an average 30-day month would be $2 85, and for soybeans $3 45

The old maximum rate was $1 65 for oats, $2 25 for wheat, $1 95 for corn and grain sorghum and $2 25 for soybeans on a 1,000-bushel basis.

In actual practice, few if any elevators charge the maximum fee

"The highest fee I know of in the state is 80/1,000th of a cent per bushel per day. This is in a federal warehouse that the state can't control anyway," said Eric Rasmussen, a commission member

Rasmussen said he opposed the increase at this time because of low grain prices to the farmer "I know there have been increased costs at elevators I served on an elevator board for several years, but with current grain prices this will be hard on farmers," he said

Elevators must announce on July 1 their rate for the next year They must notify the Public Service Commission of the rate, must charge all farmers the same rate and cannot increase the rate for grain already under an existing warehouse receipt.

An existing warehouse receipt for grain can be cancelled by the elevator only after seeking and obtaining approval from the commission

"I think this could force farmers to sell their grain rather than store it It could cost up to 34 cents a bushel to store grain for a year That eats up the grain pretty fast," Rasmussen said

Rasmussen also said increased storage rates could stimulate a mass move by farmers to build storage on their farms

' We already see some large farmers shipping grain direct to terminal elevators or to markets even outside of the state This bypasses the local elevator entirely, he said

New Omaha storm radar begins tracking Friday

Omaha (AP) — The National Weather Service said Tuesday a new storm warning radar will be placed into operation at the Omaha forecast office Friday

To Nebraskans, according to Charles Knudsen, director of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, this will facilitate earlier and more reliable detection and tracking of severe thunderstorms, tornadoes and flood producing rains

The new radar, a modern solid state type, replaces the obsolete World War II surplus radar which has been in use at the Omaha office since August of 1955.

Meteorologist Jim Zoller, in charge of the Omaha Weather Service forecast office, said the warning radar is a welcome replacement because the old radar was becoming increasingly unreliable

Some vital replacement parts, he said, were having to be expensively handcrafted

Zoller said that though radar is just one of the main weather observation methods, it is very important in the early detection and monitoring of dangerous weather such as severe thunderstorms, tornadoes and flood-producing rains

Protection to streams expanded

When phase III of the Army Corps of Engineer s 404 Program goes into effect July 1 a permit must be obtained to dam Nebraska streams with waterflows of more than five cubic feet per second, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension water resources specialist Deon Axthelm said

He added that a permit also is required if foreign material such as rip rap or extra fill is added or dredging is done in a Nebraska stream

Mike Jess of the Nebraska Department of Water Resources said that in some cases where his office s jurisdiction overlaps that of the corps, two permits will have to be obtained — one from the state and one from the federal government

Phase III is part of a program designed to protect waters and wetland Besides streams Phase III affects rivers marshes and wetlands Phase I began in 1975 and affected coastal waters major rivers and nearby wetlands Phase II extended the proclamation farther to include tributaries to major rivers like the Platte Elkhorn and Niobrara and nearby wetlands and lakes of more than five surface acres With Phase III including the smaller streams its influence is extended further

The phases are part of the 404 program that Axthelm described as part of a massive U S effort to improve water quality

Program 404 refers to Section 404 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972

The corps said that in cases where work already is in progress in waters under the Phase III restrictions, corps engineers will determine whether it is in the public interest to stop the work or allow it to continue while the permit application is being processed

Axthelm said that while he saw no major problems in supervising Phase III the delay in obtaining permission to begin work on water-related projects may pose a very serious problem to Nebraska farmers and anyone dealing with water projects

A spokesman for the corps said that processing time on a non controversial permit request is usually 120-150 days Controversial requests those questioned by other parties usually take longer He added that time on even non-controversial acts may increase due to the number of applications

Limited storage space and relatively low prices probably will result in more wheat being used as livestock feed this year according to Dr Paul Q Guyer Extension livestock specialist at the University of Nebraska Lincoln

He said producers could save money by using wheat in their rations which would have a nutritive value equal to or as much as 15 greater per bushel than corn

He said livestock feeders should check discounts on low grade or high-moisture wheats as well as regular wheat prices because they may be equal in feeding value per unit of dry matter

But Guyer warned that much of the wheat likely to be used in beef and hog rations will be stored outside for which know-how is lacking

When storing wheat outside Guyer said producers should

Store it on a well-drained base crowned in the center to avoid hot spots that develop from entrapped moisture

Store wheat in long narrow piles about 10 to 12 feet high with [illegible] peaks to prevent formation of valleys that tend to collect runoff and cause hot

Omahan testifies to 'hit' agreement

Omaha (AP) — A man granted immunity from prosecution testified Tuesday that C Michael Anderson suggested to him and Peter Hochstein that "something had to be done" about Omaha real estate man Ronald Abboud

In a preliminary hearing on first degree murder charges against Anderson, 25, and Hochstein, 23, Lon Reams, about 27, said he and the other two worked out details of the slaying of Abboud

On Oct 29, Reams said, Hochstein called him and said "it was done "

Abboud's body was found in October, 1975, in a field outside Omaha Anderson is charged with hiring Hochstein to kill Abboud

Reams testified that Anderson, an employe of Abboud's Commercial Realty Co at the time, had been complaining bitterly about low pay and business problems

Anderson told Reams that Abboud was stealing from his clients and that Commerical Realty didn't keep its word on paying various clients, Reams testified

Reams said that in early October, he, Anderson and Hochstein met at an Omaha pizza parlor and one of the two said, "somebody should get rid of Ron Abboud

At a later meeting at Ream's house, Reams said, it was suggested that Abboud be "hit "

Reams said, "The biggest problem was getting Abboud alone Anderson said, 'We got to get him in a place away from people ' "

He said the three discussed various way of killing — knife, rifle, pistol and explosives — before agreeing on a 22 caliber automatic pistol of Ream's, and inspected some rural Douglas County land where Abboud's body was found later

"Hochstein would do it," Reams said "He brought up a $1,500 figure "

Reams said he and Anderson agreed to borrow the money from a corporation the two had founded to pay Hochstein

Reams testified that they planned for Hochstein to call Abboud and arrange to be shown the rural property on Oct 29

He said that at 3 30 p m that day, Hochstein called and said "it was done

Another man, Charles Paige, 25, has been charged with being an accessory after the fact

Policeman wounded; Omahan charged

Omaha (UPI) — John E McArthur, 29, of Omaha, was charged Tuesday with shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim in the wounding of an Omaha police officer earlier in the day.

McArther told police he thought he was shooting at a prowler when he fired three shots out a window of his home Tuesday morning shortly after midnight

Officer Wesley Courtwright was struck in the left leg by a single bullet The wound was not serious and Courtwright was listed in good condition Tuesday at an Omaha hospital

Police had been called to the residence after a man allegedly displayed a rifle during an argument over the way cars were parked in the alley, a police department spokesman said

McArthur walked out of the front door of the house unarmed shortly after the shooting and told police he thought he had shot a prowler

Police confiscated a 22 caliber automatic rifle with a telescopic sight inside the house

Police said they fired no shots during the incident

Priest teaches skills of circus

Omaha (AP) — A priest who juggles and walks a tightrope is teaching circus feats to college students and other priests in a church basement

The Rev Nick Weber, a Jesuit who also swallows swords and walks on knives, is teaching Creighton University students in a course called, "Circus Skills and Perspectives " Their "big top" is the basement of St John Church

Two of the class members are Jesuits and another is the mother of a Creighton under-graduate

The curriculum includes learning to walk a knee-high rope stretched between building support posts Other lessons deal with clowning, juggling, makeup and magic

Circus was a 'childhood passion" for Father Weber, who has masters degrees in theology and theater

Father Weber and two partners, working out of Santa Clara University, travel 32 weeks a year, performing circus stunts at shopping centers and schools

The priest believes Americans are 'starved for images and suffer from overexposure to television and the pictoral aats

One of his favorites is the "stark image" of a circus performer dancing on a high wire as if to say, " 'it is important to dance and play at any cost That offers real meditation on what life is about, ' Father Weber said

Jailer says statement made

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

York — Two days after York policeman James M. Richardson II was shot and killed, a crying Ricky A. Johnson made a statement to his jailer, the jailer testified Tuesday

The final witness in Johnson's trial, Hamilton County Deputy Sheriff Dale E. Radcliff said Johnson summoned him to the 17-year-old's cell the evening of April 24.

The youth, who is charged with first degree murder, has been held in Aurora since his arrest

The jailer said Johnson began talking as he approached the cell. Radcliff said he advised Johnson of a portion of his rights against self-incrimination.

Radcliff said Johnson, with tears in his eyes, told the deputy: "I just wanted him to leave — I didn't want to shoot him "

Then, Radcliff testified, "I asked him (Johnson) what he did and he said, 'I just ran' "

Radcliff was called to the witness stand by Deputy County Atty. Vince Balentino after defense attorney John Brogan rested his case

Radcliff was called as a rebuttal witness and Brogan objected to the deputy testifying.

Following an hour of discussion outside the jury's presence, District Court Judge William Norton allowed Radcliff to read part of a memorandum the jailer made about two days after his conversation with Johnson

Radcliff said he did not take a written statement from the youth on April 24 and that Johnson talked voluntarily.

Radcliff also said he kept the statement to himself, giving it to York authorities about a week ago.

Brogan asked why Radcliff decided then to turn over his recollection of the conversation. The deputy replied, "I figured I better let someone know what he told me."

Monday afternoon, while testifying in his own defense, Johnson was asked by the prosecution whether he recalled making such the comment to Radcliff. Johnson said he didn't recall that.

Brogan rested the defense case shortly after lunch, having called two witnesses who testified that Johnson had a reputation of nonviolence.

Also testifying was Lincoln surveyor Dennis Simonds, who prepared a survey diagram of the Arbor Drive Baptist Church and grounds. The church, across the street from Johnson's residence, is where Richardson's body was found.

On the drawing, Simonds had drawn a "line of sight" marking to show the portion of the church's front lawn that Johnson might have been able to see the night the policeman was killed.

The defense has said that the youth was near the rear of the church building and unable to see the policeman until after he had been shot.

Over a prosecution objection that the drawing was "unduly suggestive and prejudicial," Judge Norton admitted the diagram into evidence.

Earlier in the day, the jury was taken to the scene of the shooting. Accompanied only by bailiff Lewis Ekart, the jury was out of the courtroom about 35 minutes. Attorneys and the judge remained behind.

Final arguments by both defense and prosecuation are scheduled to begin Wednesday morning.

The jury is then expected to begin deliberations. Norton told the jurors to bring additional clothes with them should they have to remain overnight.

Peru head seeks endorsement

Douglas Pearson
. . . to stay or leave?

Peru — The president of Peru State College, Dr. Douglas Pearson, has asked faculty members and administration for a vote of confidence.

In a specially called noon meeting Monday, Pearson asked the more than 50 faculty members attending to vote by secret ballot on whether he should "stay" or "leave" as president of the college.

If the "leave" votes won, Pearson told the faculty he would give his resignation to the State College Board of Trustees, according to several faculty members at the meeting

Neither Pearson, nor faculty members who counted the ballots could be reached for comment Tuesday. The balloting outcome or any decision by Pearson on his job as head of the college have not been announced An announcement is expected Wednesday or Thursday.

Some faculty members and students have criticized Pearson's actions on several dismissals, including the suspension and later reinstatement of wrestling coach Jack Scammahorn.

A Feb. 6 argument between wrestler Mark Yori and Scammahorn led to misdemeanor assault charges being filed against the coach. A county court guilty verdict was overturned by the district court.

Some faculty members have also complained of communication problems between the president and the faculty and have criticized Pearson's "vindictiveness" in personal issues.

Notices about the 12:30 p.m. Monday faculty meeting were put in faculty mailboxes Monday morning, according to several faculty members.

At the half-hour meeting Pearson outlined several achievements at Peru during his three years as president including raising faculty salaries, getting state tax money for a new gymnasium and better relations with the faculty, according to several at the meeting.

Pearson also said a State College Board of Trustees public relations report, discussed privately by the trustees after their Friday morning meeting, showed that there might be a conflict between the president and the professional staff. He asked the faculty if this report was true.

According to some at the meeting, faculty members were asked to sit three seats apart so they wouldn't talk while filling out the secret ballots on the vote of confidence.

Pearson, 37, was inaugurated as Peru's 20th and youngest president April 27, 1974. He earned degrees at the University of Nebraska and George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.

Peru, a 107-year-old campus with more than 700 students last spring, has been plagued by declining student enrollments and thus faculty and staff cutbacks in recent years.

New bridge OKd for Old Cheney

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The Lancaster County Board finally made it over a bridge Tuesday which has been barricaded for many months.

It gave unanimous approval to a $225,000 two-lane span over Salt Creek on Old Cheney Road, a bridge which has been the subject of an ongoing dispute between County Engineer Marv Nuernberger and Commissioners Jan Gauger and Bruce Hamilton.

Commissioner Bob Colin has consistently supported replacing the bridge, which Hamilton and Gauger have opposed because it appeared to be in conflict with the Comprehensive Plan.

With a broad grin, Colin seconded Hamilton's motion for approval, noting "I've been voting for this for two years."

Hamilton said he had changed his mind about the issue after meeting with Railroad Transportation Safety District Director John Longsdorf, U.S. Highway Department engineer Ray Hogrefe and Nuernberger.

Those officials convinced Hamilton that a four-lane overpass on Old Cheney Road in Wilderness Park is of "very low priority," he said.

The present bridge has been closed since January.

In other action, the board approved a resolution transferring County Welfare Department employes to the state pay plan.

Since 1974, all Lancaster County welfare workers have been on a special pay scale which is not part of the county pay plan yet is not comparable to the pay scale of State Welfare Department employes.

A recent state law allows the change, which will be "much more equitable," according to Welfare Director Jerry Lemonds.

County and state employes doing the same job will get the same pay, he said. About 98% of the county department's budget is paid by the state, so there will be virtually no fiscal impact on the county.

The board deferred action on an application by South Dale Acres subdivision for county maintenance of a section of S. 60th St. Nuernberger opposed the request because he said only one resident will benefit from the road, which developers estimate will cost the county $280 per year to keep up.

While three houses have been built along the section of street, about 600 feet long, only one has a driveway onto 60th, Nuernberger said.

Nuernberger plans to introduce a revision in the county subdivision resolution requiring individual roads rather than entire subdivisions to have a minimum population density before the county will maintain them.

He also wants to require developers to pay his department to lay initial rock and gravel on a road rather than doing it on their own.

This way, Nuernberger will be sure the job has been done properly before assuming maintenance, he said.

The board did approve county maintenance of roads in another subdivision, Tower Acres, at 52nd and Yankee Hill Road, even though an access road to the development does not meet county requirements of a 60-foot right-of-way.

The developers told the board and the city-county planning commissioner that they were unable to purchase the required right-of-way. Planning Director Doug Brogden concurred in the approval.

After a short public hearing in which nobody spoke in opposition, the board approved Sunday on- and off-sale beer sales at Lee's Restaurant, Coddington and West Van Dorn. The restaurant will be permitted to serve beer from noon to 9 p.m.

Hungry Canadian still eating in jail

Robert Morrison, the 34-year-old Canadian who broke windows in downtown Lincoln to attract attention and get a free meal in jail, is still eating jail food.

Morrison, released from a Canadian prison earlier this month, appeared in Lancaster County Court Tuesday on charges of destruction of property and was ordered to appear July 5 for a preliminary hearing. He is also being held for Canadian officials on a charge of parole violation, according to local authorities

Police said that Morrison threw four wooden street barricades through the windows of two downtown stores before he was arrested several weeks ago

New airport fire station set

Washington — A new fire station will be built at the Lincoln Municipal Airport aided by a federal grant announced Tuesday by Rep Charles Thone, R-Neb

A grant of $491,975 from the Federal Aviation Administration was reported by Thone He said that a multiyear project has been approved by the FAA which would ultimately mean $851,898 for the project

The project will include construction of a new building to house fire and snow removal equipment The work also will involve the installation of security equipment

Landlord bound over for trial

A Lincoln landlord who allegedly shot a tenant in the foot following a name-calling exchange has been bound over to Lancaster County District Court to stand trial for shooting with intent to kill wound or maim

County Judge Robert Camp ordered Michael P Kane, 35, of 976 S 29th bound over to the higher court Tuesday He is charged with shooting David Nicholson 17 in the foot during the May 18 incident near his home

Arraignment in the higher court has been set for July 15

Lincoln No. 11 on sewage list

By Lynn Zerschling
Starr Staff Writer

The city of Lincoln remains 11th on the state Department of Environemntal Control's (DEC) list of cities which need federal and state money to build sewage treatment plants.

Last week the citizen Environmental Control Council left Lincoln in 11th place and left Omaha in first in a priority listing of cities which are seeking federal funds for sewage treatment plant construction.

The council, which met in Kearney, only made a few changes in the listing of some 150 towns which requested money to meet water quality requirements, reported George Ludwig, DEC grants administrator.

Ludwig said he expects the Environmental Protection Agency to approve the list.

The state needs $240 million to clean up sewage emptying into rivers and streams. However, all that Nebraska environmental officials expect to get is $27 million.

Last year Congress appropriated $38.5 million for sewage plant construction, Ludwig said. Although the amount of money expected for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is $11.5 million less, Ludwig said the money would be enough to "keep the programs going."

Under the funding formula, EPA pays for 75% of the treatment facility's cost, the state pays another 12½% and the local government pays the remaining 12½%.

The priority list approved by the Environmental Control Council ranks Omaha first, followed by South Sioux City, Alma, Beatrice, Cozad, Hastings, Scottsbluff, Falls City, Fort Calhoun, Gering and Lincoln.

Omaha is under federal pressure to get its Missouri River treatment plant operating properly. Omaha wants $8.7 million in federal funds for the river treatment plant, which is estimated to cost $11 7 million.

South Sioux City needs money to increase its capacity to pump sewage through lines across the Missouri River to a treatment plant in Sioux City, Ia. South Sioux City doesn't have a treatment plant of its own. The town wants $15,000 in federal funds to help pay for the $20,000 project.

Scottsbluff has applied for $390,000 in federal money to create a system to spray treated sewage wastes applied on croplands through irrigation systems. Estimated total cost of that project is $520,000.

Lincoln is applying for $9 million in federal funds to help build the Northeast Sewage treatment plant, estimated to cost $12 million.

Several other communities in Lancaster County are ranked farther down the list.

Firth, in the 28th position, is seeking $6,000 to pay for initial planning, while Hickman, in the 30th slot, is seeking $375,000 in federal funds to build a treatment plant. Sprague, listed in the 51st position, would like $9,000 in federal funds to pay engineers to design a plant

General fund expected to be in black Thursday

The state's general fund will contain somewhere between $1 million and $4 million when the fiscal year ends Thursday, Revenue Department officials say.

Assistant Tax Commissioner Gary Chunka and state Accountant George Shute said the final figure will depend on receipts in the final two days of the fiscal year.

The highest end of the year balance was $63.9 million in 1974. In 1976, the balance was $1 8 million. Although this year's final figure could be lower than in 1976, Shute and Chunka said the state financial picture is better

In 1976, tax refunds and various aid payments were frequently delayed to maintain the cash to meet payrolls and pay mandatory bills Shute said that has not been done this year.

Unlike last year, the state has not borrowed from its separate revenue sharing and construction accounts to supplement the general fund, Shute said

Shute said he was not always so confident that the yearend balance would be in the black

Trucker claims Coors not stolen

By Jim Camden
Star Staff Writer

A Lincoln truck driver denied Tuesday that he stole 279 cases of Coors beer from an interstate shipment last July and sold them in Lincoln.

Clifford Pulec told a U.S. District Court jury that he and his brother Bob did sell about 140 cases of Coors in the parking lot of the Moose Lodge at that time. But he said it was beer that they had bought with their own money while driving a truck in neighboring states.

The Pulec brothers are on trial for stealing beer that was en route from Oklahoma City to New Jersey on a truck they were driving.

Clifford Pulec said some of the beer was "skunkie" or bad because it had been cold, then warm several times. The brothers were on their way to the city dump to dispose of the bad beer when they decided to try to sell it at the Moose Lodge where Clifford was a member, he said.

"So you sold about 60 cases of skunkie Coors beer to your friends at the Moose Lodge?" Asst. U.S. Attorney Jeffrey Bogue asked Pulec.

"If they wanted to buy it, yes," Pulec replied.

The brothers then sold about 80 cases of good Coors beer, he said. The beer had been stored in Clifford Pulec's garage.

Pulec also said that shortly before they left the warehouse in Oklahoma City, a worker told the shipper the load was about 300 cases short. About 10 minutes later, the worker came back and said the remaining cases had been loaded.

Pulec said he did not watch the beer being loaded.

Bogue asked if it did not seem strange that so much beer could be loaded in so short of time.

Pulec replied that it did, but added, "it wasn't my beer "

The case is expected to go to the jury for deliberation on Wednesday.

Court upholds award

Carter Lake, Iowa, (AP) — The 8th U S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a $234,756 award to the widow of a man who was electrocuted in 1972 when a crane he was guiding touched a high voltage wire.

A lower court had found the Owen Equipment and Erection Co. of Carter Lake negligent in the death of James D. Kroger and ordered the firm to pay his widow, Geraldine, the money.

In upholding the lower court's decision, the appeals court decided to disregard rules that prevent a federal court from hearing cases in which the defendant and plaintiff are residents of the same state.

The appeals court criticized the company attorney's tactic of waiting until the Iowa statute of limitations had run out before revealing that Owen Equipment, originally listed in the suit as a Nebraska company, actually was from Iowa, where Mrs Kroger lived.

Republicans woo blacks

Omaha (AP) — The Republican Party has launched a drive to attract black voters on Omaha's north side.

County buys time by approving lease

By approving a one-year lease for the Community Mental Health Center, the county board Tuesday bought itself some time.

There is now less urgency to decide whether to sell the Health and Welfare Bldg. at 2200 St. Mary's Ave. to Lincoln General Hospital.

In May, board Chairman Bruce Hamilton told the City Council that a decision had to be made soon because the Mental Health Center's lease was running out.

A study by Geller Design, a consulting firm has determined that there is sufficient room in the building to house the Mental Health Center and the Health Department if welfare offices move out.

Commissioners first thought that there might be time to move welfare out and mental health in before the July 1 deadline for renewing the Mental Health Center's lease on expensive downtown quarters.

If the building were sold to Lincoln General, welfare could move out but it would preclude mental health's moving in.

Another factor affecting the possible sale of the building, which Lincoln General wants to use for physicians' offices, is the inability of the Health Department to find suitable quarters elsewhere.

Lincoln General Administrator Robert Brungard has agreed that the Health Department would not have to leave immediately if the building is sold, but only when the hospital needs the additional space.

The Mental Health Center's one-year lease will cost the county $2,839 per month for 6,491 square feet at 134 S. 13th St.

The lease can be broken at 90 days' notice, however, should the move eventually take place.

It would cost about $117,924 to remodel the basement and first floor of the 2200 St. Mary's building for the Mental Health Center, and an additional $30,118 to expand Health Department facilities, the consultants determined.

The county is going ahead with plans to move welfare soon as rented space can be found.

The commissioners now have time to carefully weigh the financial advantages of selling the building vs. keeping it. Brungard has indicated a definite willingness to buy.

Board pares budget for Lancaster Manor

The budget request for Lancaster Manor for the next fiscal year is down about 4% from the present year, but county commissioners want to cut it still more.

Tuesday the board reviewed the manor's $3,111,134 budget request and $597,525 for running the power plant and maintenance of the nursing home and surrounding buildings.

Chairman Bruce Hamilton commended manor Director Garrett Williams for keeping projected expenditures down.

The board then proceded to cut $3,767 from the manor's request for $17,123 for conferences, travel and transportation.

A large part of the transportation expense is for maintenance and leasing of vehicles to transport manor residents around Lincoln, expenses which Williams urged the board not to cut.

Commissioners questioned $750 to purchase 50 large paintings for the manor's hallways. "Where could you buy 50 paintings at that price?" Hamilton asked.

Williams replied that he thought the manor was getting a special deal. The board left them in the budget at present, but warned Williams that they might be omitted later.

The amount budgeted for maintenance of manor equipment is $7,745 — nearly double the current year. Because of unexpected repairs, this item may prove too low, Williams said.

Utility costs for the power plant are estimated to jump 26% to $260,614, due to higher fuel bills. Williams plans to meet with city-county Building Administrator Don Porter to compare conservation measures Porter saved over $100,000 through utilities conservation in the County-City Building last year.

The power plant fund covers heating, cooling and maintenance of the manor, Trabert Hall at 2202 S. 11th, the Juvenile Attention Center at 2148 S. 10th, the Mental Health Center's Community Living Program facility at 2145 S. 13th, and three Youth Service System group homes.

Solar energy grant awarded

By Michael Holmes
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Plattsmouth — Gary Benedict has found that persistence pays. At least when dealing with the federal government.

In October 1975, the housing developer first applied to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for a grant to do work with solar energy

He'd long been interested in solar power, studying it on his own, and considered it the energy alternative for the future

Benedict didn't get the grant, though But he didn't give up

The president of Quadro Inc , prepared a second application for a solar grant, only to find that he had missed the deadline for its submission.

But Quadro now has been notified that a third application was successful The company is to receive a $89,859 grant to install solar heating equipment in three duplex townhouses Benedict will begin building this summer

"Persistence works, I guess," laughed Benedict

He said that in the first two sets of solar grants given by HUD, the Midwest did poorly This time, however, "we scored high They got grants in Kansas City, Lincoln, Callaway, Glenwood, Iowa, and ours is in the top 20% dollarwise in the nation "

When HUD rejected Benedict's first application, he took matters into his own hands He designed and built a house near Plattsmouth that has a supplemental solar system costing just $750.

The house is now one of Quadro's model homes and Benedict said prospective buyers have shown great interest in it

The HUD grant will be used to install complete solar systems in the duplexes The grant money will purchase nearly $15,000 of equipment for each housing unit, including 25 solar collectors in the roof

Because of the severity of Nebraska winters, Benedict said, the solar units will be backed up by conventional heating systems. However, the solar units should provide heat for the houses as well as hot water

Benedict builds solar heated houses.

Because the grants will purchase the solar equipment, Benedict said the townhouses will sell for about $12,000 less than their worth

The only major requirement HUD asked when giving Quadro the grant, Benedict said, was that the agency be allowed to monitor the homes for five years as part of its studies on solar power

State Digest

Wiese land 'unavailable'

Grand Island (AP) — Vermoyne Wiese, the owner of an 80-acre tract of land sought by Hall County for a landfill site told the board Tuesday he doesn't want to sell.

Wiese said the board had not offered him the fair market value for the land and contended that a move by the county to acquire it under eminent domain would show the county is "reckless with authority."

Ex-Nebraskan given grant

Bowling Green, Ky. — Ms. Gayle Waggoner, a native of Norfolk, Neb , is the first full-time student at Western Kentucky University to be named a Fulbright-Hays Scholar

A master's degree candidate in folk studies, Ms Waggoner has been given a grant to study in Brazil for approximately one year, beginning in September Her project will be a multi-disciplinary analysis of a traditional hammock weaver.

Proposed budget up 11.6%

Grand Island (AP) — The Central Technical Community College board has given tentative approval to a fiscal 1977-78 budget proposal that would include more than $7 million for operations The figure is an 11 6% increase over the current operations budget

Home agent resigning

Trenton — Marilee Karlberg, southwest area home Extension agent since September 1974, will resign Aug 20 to enter graduate school at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln

A native of Sumner, she has received an assistantship in the Department of Education and Family Resources of the College of Home Economics and will pursue a master's degree.

Contract approved

Omaha (AP) — Local 538 of the Cementer Finishers Union has approved a three-year contract which calls for a 6.9% increase in wages and fringe benefits this year. The union accepted the offer of the Heavy Contractors Association, said Duane Martin, business representative.

Alliance school budget up

Alliance (AP) — The Alliance Board of Education has approved a $2,358,000 budget for the 1977-78 school year, an increase of $189,000 over the previous budget.

The 8.7% increase could change slightly, depending on whether the Board of Education or the Alliance Education Association wins in negotiations for a new teachers' contract.

Nursing dean named

Omaha (AP) — Sister Rosalie Sitzmann will become the new nursing dean at Creighton University Aug. 1, succeeding Sheila A. Ryan, who resigned to enter a doctoral program at the University of Arizona.

Sister Rosalie has been on the faculty of South Dakota State University since 1970.

Housing plan protested

Bellevue (AP) — A developer's plan to expand a federally subsidized housing project by 48 units drew 100 protesters to a City Council meeting here.

The protesters said doors and screens are off many apartments, garbage is thrown into the streets and the pavement is crumbling. Omaha developer Ted Selding has asked the council to give zoning approval to the addition to the Southwoods Addition built several years ago.

Big area darkened

Omaha (UPI) — A car knocked down a utility pole Monday night, leaving a 340-block area of North Omaha without electricity for about an hour.

A witness told police a car was towing another car when the second vehicle broke loose, rolled down a hill and struck the pole.

Judge rules principal must be given hearing

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairbury — The Diller School Board had no right to fire Principal Clarence Rost without a hearing, according to a court decision handed down here Tuesday

Jefferson County District Court Judge William Rist found instead that an April 13 contract offered Rost is ' valid and enforceable ' despite a unanimous board decision 19 days later to cancel it Since the 1977-78 contract called for a hearing prior to any termination, the judge said the firing was "without due process '

Rist s granting of a permanent injunction a follow-up to a temporary restraining order issued earlier this month caps several weeks of bitter controversy in the Jefferson County village of 290 Even now, things are far from settled

Scheduled July 14 is a recall election which seeks to oust all six school board members for their reversal stands against Rost Circulators of the recall petitions claim he has the backing of a large majority of residents

It is also conceivable that the princiapl, 36, might still have to defend himself against charges of unprofessional conduct and insubordination, if the board decides to hold a hearing for that purpose Judge Rist emphasized that the court case was completely separate from the board s allegations toward Rost

In arguments Tuesday, board attorney Ralph Fischer of Beatrice suggested the allegations stemmed from actions by Rost after he was offered the April contract The attorney noted that Rost did not request a hearing, but the judge said this was "the burden of the board "

Testifying briefly, Rost said he had signed the contract and turned it over to the board at the May 2 meeting prior to the vote of dismissal He was the only witness Tuesday, since evidence from the June 1 restraining order hearing was admitted by stipulation Rost was represented by attorney Richard Wood of Lincoln

One of the main charges against Rost, according to a school board letter circulating in the community was his alleged Lexington arrest last September for driving while intoxicated Five other reasons were set forth including an alleged incident of making derogatory comments, false accusations and disparaging remarks" on April 29 to J D Lofing, school board president

Hastings (AP) — The Adams County Board may not contribute to the 10-county South Central Community Mental Health Center unless a contract is approved between South Central and the 22-county regional governing board At stake is $16,800

The contract would formalize the agreement between South Central and the governing board to administer services

Jim Kennedy, Hastings office manager, told the county board Tuesday that if Adams County pulled out, services and staff would have to be cut back

He said it also could possibly contribute to having other counties pull out, which would end mental health services in south central Nebraska

Omaha School District officials propose budget of $85.5 million

Omaha (AP) — Omaha School District officials have proposed a 1977-78 budget of nearly $85 5 million, 8 3% higher than the current budget.

The $85,479,587 budget proposed is an increase of $6,498,200

The biggest increases would be $3 8 million for salaries and $2 million for handicapped education

The proposed salary increase would have been $5 5 million had there not been a reduction in the number of teachers and supervisors needed because there will be fewer students next year

Pillsbury reports record earnings

Minneapolis (AP) — Pillsbury Co reported that it had record sales and earnings in the fourth quarter and full year ended May 31.

It was the sixth consecutive year of record earnings for the diversified food-products firm Over that period, earnings have grown at an annaul rate of 21%, the company noted

Two highway deaths reported

United Press International

Timothy Jenson, 17, of rural Arlington, was killed Monday in a two-car accident five miles west of Blair of Neb 91, the State Patrol said Tuesday

Jenson was eastbound when his car collided with a car driven by Georgia Larson 53 of rural Blair, which had stopped to make a left turn Mrs Larson was reported in satisfactory condition Tuesday

The patrol also said it received a delayed report of the death Sunday of Ronald Sykes, 15, of Naponee

Sykes was injured June 15 in the collision of the motorcycle he was driving and a car driven by Cecil Melton of Naponee on a Naponee street

G.I. electricity rates would go up by 64%

Grand Island (AP) — Electric rate increases totaling 64% in four years are included in a tentative rate schedule received Monday night by the Grand Island City Council

The schedule calls for separate increases of 15% in the basic rate structure, one increase in October, one in August, 1978, and another in August, 1979.

The schedule also anticipates a 7 6% basic rate hike in August, 1981, but no increase in 1980

City Utilities Director Bob Olson said a major factor in the increases is an anticipated bonded indebtedness of up to $80 million for a planned Grand Island power plant

UNL student newspaper could choke with fee cut

If $37,500 is cut from student fees at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, students might start paying for their campus newspaper and editors could lose their salaries, according to the student head of the UNL Publications Board

NU Regents voted Saturday to hold fees at their present level for 1977-78, and study possible elimination of most fees for 1978-79

The student-faculty Fees Allocation Board had recommended $37,500 for the UNL Daily Nebraskan, the same amount it currently recieves.

This is $2,000 less than requested, said Mark Bowen, Publications Board chairman The $37,500 covers half of the cost of printing 17,000 daily copies, he said

Bowen speculated that students would still read the paper if a dime or quarter charge were instituted

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, June 29, 1977

Sagittarius has a long memory. The same can be said for Capricorn, but in a different way. Sagittarius is more apt to be abstract while Capricorn is literal. These may be two of the most difficult signs to understand — the Jupiter of Sagittarius and the Saturn of Capricorn. Together they might make the odd couple. Each feels as if being pulled in two directions at once. Capricorn is good for Sagittarius in money matters. Sagittarius relates dreams, visions to Capricorn.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21 April 19): What seems a postponement is merely a temporary delay. Communications garble could affect family plans, relationships. Know it and be ready for revisions, adjustments, an abundance of diplomacy. Do take long range view.

TAURUS (April 20 May 20): Utilize powers of perception. Dig beneath surface indications. See in light of actuality, avoid self deception. Accent on good news concerning tangled financial matter. Patience wins as partner, mate provides constructive aid.

GEMINI (May 21 June 20): Study Taurus message. You land on feet following legal or technical scuffle. Misunderstanding turns out in your favor. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently — and so does the number 8. You get support from one in authority.

CANCER (June 21 July 22): Finish what you start, reach beyond current expectations. Avoid direct confrontations. Call or message — or a gift — could get job done. Area that had produced uncertainty, even fear, will now be removed from your personal danger list. You'll see!

LEO (July 23 Aug 22): Make new start. Be independent, original. Dare to dream! Yes, you are getting to heart of matters — and an affair of heart is also in picture. Accent on variety, excitement of discovery, creativity, relations with young persons, especially offspring. Member of opposite sex is drawn to you, makes no secret of it.

VIRGO (Aug 23 Sept 22): Trust in forte, intellect. Something inside is telling you something. Procedure, although unorthodox, can win for you. Know it and be confident. You're gaining allies, backers. One who has alcohol or drug problem would like to drag you into nefarious scheme. Have none of it!

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 22): Diversity — don't depend on any one source. Get verifications. Double check. Neighbors, relatives may be sincere but misinformed. Know it and act accordingly. Perceive potential. Socialize. Welcome contact with one who displays delightful sense of humor. Get rid of wet blanket!

SCORPIO (Oct 23 Nov 21): Cash flow could be interrupted. Instead of panic, dig deep for information. Become familiar with basic information material. Creative touch could turn around an adverse situation. One you love is working in your behalf — and would appreciate some recognition. Well?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22 Dec 21): Be ready for stimulating experiences, excitement accompanying discovery, change, travel, variety, intensified relationship. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently — and so does the number 5. Cycle is high and you have winning touch. Go to it!

CAPRICORN (Dec 22 Jan 19): Low key approach is best, especially when dealing with family. Be diplomatic. Remind yourself — even if you have to make it up — of a special anniversary or occasion. Yes, buy a gift. Make concessions. If you give a little you eventually will gain a great deal.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20 Feb 18): Look beyond the immediate, especially where finances enter picture. You're doing better than might be imagined. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently — and so does the number 7. Accent on desire, romance, fulfillment of special wish.

PISCES (Feb 19 March 20): Yes, Aquarian could play significant role in your personal scenario. Get affairs in order, bring priorities into focus. Fulfill obligations — get down to business in sense that you imprint style, make known views, stand tall and responsible for belief, product.

IF JUNE 29th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are a natural teacher. Your intuition borders on the astonishing — you perceive when something of importance is about to occur. Aquarians play important roles in your life. December could be one of your most significant months of 1977. This year features travel, could highlight marriage, children. You travel in July and make marvelous social contacts.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
